POWERS URGE MEXICO TO GIVE IN TO WILSON

Japan, France and England Said to Have Taken Steps to Curb President Huerta.

MUST PROTECT AMERICANS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—It is declared in official circles tonight that Japan, France and England have notified President Huerta of Mexico that he ought to give heed to the measures proposed by the United States. This is expected to have a marked effect in curbing the fiery Mexican general.

The administration took a step this afternoon to protect Americans in Mexico, when Secretary Bryan ordered Marion Fletcher, Consul at Chihuahua City, to demand of the military commander of that district that he apprehend and adequately punish the bandits who on July 6 killed Frank Griffith and assaulted A. E. Parks.

President Wilson is letting no intimation of his forthcoming message to Congress on the situation become public. He is keeping it locked up in his desk when he is not working on it. It is supposed that this action is taken because he thinks that important developments may necessitate changes at the last minute.

"Unchanged," Says Bryan.

A remarkable difference of opinion was manifested at the White House and the State Department today over the Mexican situation.

This developed after the receipt of a long message from John Lind, special envoy of President Wilson at Mexico City. At the White House it was indicated very strongly that Huerta was calming down, that the outlook for Lind's mission was particularly hopeful, and that there might be no need of further action on the part of the United States. The point was made that if Huerta acceded to the wishes of this country the affair would be concluded without further proceedings.

Secretary of State Bryan, however, refused to indicate any optimism over the situation. When he was told of the views at the White House he said potatoes: "The situation is unchanged."

Huerta's Finances Shaky.

The contents of Lind's message are as well known at the State Department as at the White House. The White House opinion is supposed to be based on these facts, understood to have been transmitted very recently by Mr. Lind:

First, that Huerta acknowledges he made a great mistake in thinking that President Wilson was not backed by the American people in his non-recognition policy.

Second, that he knows that European nations are finally adopting the American point of view towards Mexico.

Third, that his financial situation is desperate.

In view of these things, President Huerta intimates that he has experienced a change of heart towards the American mediation proposals.

Fears Drastic Move by Wilson.

Huerta has been alarmed by the unfavorable tenor of recent debates in the Senate which promised President Wilson hearty support, and has started to River Lind that he was misled as to the attitude of the Senate.

He also thinks that the decision of President Wilson to read a message to Congress on Mexico is the forerunner of a drastic move on the part of the government which will sweep him out of power.

Navy Department reports today include the news of the sailing of the battleship California from San Francisco for Guaymas, and of the gunboat Nashville from Newport to Vera Cruz. The battleship New Hampshire has arrived at Tampico, where she will stay for several days, and the gunboat Tacoma has reached Vera Cruz.

That the United States has adopted a policy of allowing the federal troops in Mexico to receive practically unlimited supplies of arms and ammunition, was indicated by Secretary of State Bryan today when he confirmed the report that 40,000 rounds of ammunition had been allowed to cross the border at El Paso, Texas. This shipment is the first installment of an order for 400,000 rounds of ammunition and ten thousand rifles filed by an American firm, and which it is understood President Wilson has granted permission to be shipped across the border to President Huerta's forces.

The White House let it be known today that, no matter what sudden shift or turn the Mexican situation takes, non-recognition of the Huerta regime will continue to be the keystone of the American policy.

The bodies of Pascual Orozco, Sr., and other peace commissioners, riddled with bullets, were found in the streets of Bustillo, Guerrero, when the federal

Attempt to Wreck Springfield Train Derails Engine

Tie on Track Believed Placed There by Former Employe.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 23.—An attempt to wreck the Springfield express, known as Train No. 80, on the Main line of the New Haven road occurred at Newington, at 7:30 o'clock tonight, when the locomotive ran over a tie placed across the rails, was thrown off the track, but the train was automatically brought to a standstill by the air brakes, when the tie flew up and cut the air hose back of the tender. Officials declare they have a clue to the culprit whom they think a former employe who tried to wreck the express for spite. Twenty-five minutes before the accident a local passenger train passed the spot safely and of course the tracks were then clear. The cars were backed up to Berlin Junction, switched and sent forward with a new engine arriving two hours late. No one was injured.

X-Ray Gown Blocks Street; Police Out

Hartford Reserves Called to Disperse Crowd of Gazers.

HARTFORD, Ct., Aug. 23.—Hartford received its first public view of the new X-ray gown today and the result caused a hurry call for the police reserves. She, wearing it, passed the busiest corner of Asylum street at the busiest hour of the day. A crowd of men gazing fixedly at one point was what first drew the attention of the policeman on the beat.

The fact that their gaze was in the direction of the setting sun next came to his notice and then he finally sighted the gown in all its filmy, clinging glory. By this time the crowd has increased to a point where the passage of traffic was threatened, and finding his individual to move the hypnotized males unavailing, the policeman hurriedly summoned the reserves to clear the street.

Belmont Won by Miss Scott's Charms

Resemblance of Debutante to Miss Andrews Caused Betrothal Report.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—A certain resemblance between Miss Mimi Scott and Miss Margaret Andrews is believed, as much as anything, to be responsible for the report that Morgan Belmont was engaged to Miss Andrews. Paul Andrews, father of that attractive maid, denied the report with emphasis.

As a matter of fact, it is the winsome Miss Scott to whom young Belmont is so attentive, though he is also a friend of Miss Andrews.

Belmont was in Miss Andrews' company quite a bit, especially last season. This season, when he became an admirer of Miss Scott, casual observers, seeing him with her, would say: "Oh, yes, there's Morgan Belmont with that pretty Andrews girl."

Whereas, the girl, more than likely, was Miss Scott, a debutante of indisputable charms.

Rose Pastor Stokes Stranded in Ohio

Refuses to Make Charge Against Bellboy Who Stole Purse.

LIMA, O., Aug. 23.—Rose Pastor Stokes, socialist social settlement worker and wife of millionaire J. Phelps Stokes, is "stranded" in Lima tonight because of a robbery which she refuses to report to the police. She will not ask friends or hotel people for money, preferring to wait for a reply from a message to her husband. She has but thirty-five cents to her name. Shortly after she arrived her $90, practically all the money she had with her, was taken from her room. She discovered the loss, but refuses to inform even the hotel people of it, because she believes she knows the bellboy who took it. She does not wish to have him prosecuted.

"What is my $90?" she said, "compared with that boy's future? To report him would be against the precepts of my creed."

10,000 See Aeronaut in Plunge to Death

Sisters of George Augustine Faint at Cincinnati Fatality.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 23.—Ten thousand persons saw George Augustine, an aeronaut, plunge to his death this afternoon at Coney Island. After ascending about 200 feet, he cut his parachute loose from the ess balloon, but it failed to open and his body dropped like a plummet.

His two sisters fainted when they saw him fall. Their condition tonight is serious.

SMYRNA, Asiatic Turkey, Aug. 23.—The large Standard Oil Company depots here caught fire during the night and in a spectacular blaze 2,300 cases of oil were destroyed. Tanks containing tons of oil were endangered.

WOMAN GIVES HER LIFE TO SAVE BOY FROM DROWNING

Hingham Bather Throws Lad to Safety When She Collapses Under Strain.

WEAKENED NEAR SHORE

Mrs. Marjorie C. Marvin, twenty-eight years old, of Main street, South Hingham, sacrificed her life yesterday afternoon to save that of Wilder Moore, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Moore.

Mrs. Marvin was swimming with a number of children in Hingham Harbor about three o'clock. It was low tide, and Wilder, with his brother Frank, was on a raft about fifty yards from shore. As the tide came in, Frank made for shore and reached it safely, but Wilder, who cannot swim, stayed until the water had risen over his head.

Realizing his predicament was discovered, Mrs. Marvin, who is a strong swimmer and has been in the habit of teaching the boys of the neighborhood to swim, at once started to his assistance. She reached the boy and started for shore with him on her back. She managed to reach a point where the water was about to her neck when she felt herself weakening. She threw the boy toward the shore and herself collapsed, sinking from sight.

There were no other grown persons present, and the other children ran to the Hingham Yacht Club, some distance away, to get assistance. Members of the club found the body half an hour later. Dr. J. A. Peterson of Hingham, medical examiner of Plymouth county, pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

GIRL IS DROWNED AT SWAMPSCOTT WHILE MEN BATHERS LOOK ON

While one hundred men and women bathers stood in safe water and looked on yesterday afternoon, two boys saved thirteen-year-old Iva Anderson from drowning in the King's Beach undertow at Swampscott, and tried unsuccessfully to save her chum, eleven-year-old Alice Stone. The latter was drowned after the boys had made heroic efforts to save both.

The two lads are Earle Breckenridge, twelve years old, and Harold Morse, thirteen. They were aided, toward the end, by Leonard Benson and Theodore Le Blanc, who hauled them and Iva Anderson into a Metropolitan Park police lifeboat.

Alice Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stone of No. 40 Belmont avenue, Swampscott, was swimming twenty feet from shore with Iva Anderson. They were gripped by the undertow. Earle Breckenridge and Harold Morse plunged in to help the girls. None of the adults along the beach started in time to help the boys.

The boys managed to work both girls nearer the shore when they were unable to retain hold of Alice Stone.

When the three children had been taken ashore search was made for Alice Stone's body. It was found when ten-year-old Raymond Connell stumbled on it in a foot of water.

Howard Elliott to Live in New Haven

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 23.—It was announced today that Howard Elliott, the new president of the New Haven road, succeeding president C. S. Mellen, would make his home in this city. He has engaged quarters at the Hotel Taft for himself and family, commencing September 1. It was formerly announced that he would live in Boston.

Shots Fired in South End Chase

Fugitive with Revolver Caught After Policeman Fires.

Richard Coffey, nineteen, single, of No. 88 East Newton street, South End, was arrested late last night by Officers Frazier and Garland of the East Dedham Street Station, after a chase of nearly a mile through the South End. He was charged with carrying a dangerous weapon.

Coffey was noticed acting peculiarly near a man who had fallen asleep on one of the benches in Franklin Square Park by the officers, who started to arrest him. He saw the officers, started to run, and had gone but a short distance when he whipped a revolver from his pocket and pointed it directly at the officers. He pulled the trigger, but the gun misfired. Frazier then drew his gun and fired over Coffey's head. This frightened the alleged thief and he gave himself up.

THAW'S FATE IN CANADA NOW IN HIS OWN HANDS

Paces Ward in Sherbrooke Jail in Effort to Decide Whether to Submit to Deportation or Fight Charge Upon Which He Was Arrested: May Be Taken Across Vermont Line Next Wednesday

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 23.—Striding up and down in the hospital ward of the Sherbrooke jail tonight Harry K. Thaw tried to decide which of two propositions made to him by Canadian officials he should accept. They were:

1.—To drop the legal fight here and submit to deportation to Vermont without any court hearing.

2.—To plead not guilty of the charge on which he was arrested and to be held for hearing which could not take place before the October term of court.

Occasionally the prisoner would stop his exercise long enough to scribble a note to one of his squad of lawyers and have it dispatched with all haste.

The lawyers had left the decision completely to their client. He had taken full charge of the case and had issued so many conflicting orders that they declared he would have to reach a decision for himself.

Finds It Hard to Decide.

Thaw said to a newspaperman whom he received at the jail that he found it hard to decide which course of action he would follow. He had been disturbed over a dispatch from Burlington, Vt., quoting Attorney-General R. E. Brown, of Vermont, as saying that he had no doubt that the Matteawan fugitive could be extradited from his State to New York. Then a second later the prisoner, smiling, exclaimed:

"Matteawan will never see me again. Perhaps it will be better for Matteawan. For the first time in my life I have a group of lawyers in whom I have a group of confidence."

He intimated that he would not make any decision as to his future course before Sunday afternoon. Sabbath services will be held in the prisoner's room tomorrow. Thaw had wanted to go to church, but the authorities feared that an attempt might be made to "kidnap" him if he left the jail. They are taking no chances.

It is believed that Thaw will accept the proposal that he be deported to Vermont and there left to fight with the officials of that State and of New York for his liberty. He has intimated to a friend of the Thaw family now in Sherbrooke that he favored that proposal more than the other, but he wants to be sure of his ground.

Preparing for Deportation.

The assumption in official circles is that Thaw will be deported next Wednesday afternoon, or Thursday, being taken across the border into the State of Vermont.

"Instructions to this effect have already been sent to the immigration agents at Sherbrooke," said a high official. "They are Col. David Reynolds and T. R. Whitlan. Thaw is not to be discriminated against. He is to be treated just as hundreds of undesirables in the past have been handled by the Immigration authorities.

"There will be no ceremony attached to his deportation. He will be taken back over the border and into Vermont by the railroad that brought him into Canada.

"The law provides that the railroad shall transport him. It has done so in other cases and the authorities here see no reason to make an exception in the case of Thaw. He can pay the railroad if he wants to, but he doesn't have to."

The New York authorities have ceased asking Canada for Thaw. They apparently understand that he will be sent into Vermont and the question will then be up to New York and Vermont.

Will Drop Habeas Corpus.

If Thaw goes to Vermont, the habeas corpus proceedings before Justice Arthur Globensky will be dropped.

There is no doubt that Canada would like to get rid of the prisoner. According to the very highest legal authorities Thaw might wage his fight in the dominion for several years before his last resource was exhausted and the Canadian officials want to prevent this if possible.

One element of danger in Thaw was removed today when Roger Thompson, who aided his escape and is now a prisoner in the same jail, withdrew his previous threats and said that he would not reveal anything of the plans leading up to the escape from Matteawan. If all the details of the flight were known it might complicate matters for Thaw and give the New York authorities basis for demanding his extradition on the ground of bribery.

Thompson said that everything "has been fixed up." This indicated that he

IN the present wrangle over Harry Thaw, with its legal schemings, its accusations of undue influence and its juggling with law and order, one womanly figure stands forth illumined by the glow of pure sisterly love and unquestioning aid.

That is the figure of Thaw's "guardian angel," as she is called, his favorite sister, Margaret, or Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, as she is by marriage.

The friend whose aid is valued by Thaw second only to that of his sister is George Leish, his old-time companion, to whom Thaw looks most for guidance in the great battle of wits which will ensue when he is deported.

Hardly had Mrs. Carnegie arrived in Sherbrooke from her hurried rush from New York to answer her wayward brother's latest cry for succor, than she spoke words which have been her sisterly had been seen by a representative of the Thaw family and promised help in escaping from his predicament.

WARN SHERIFF OF PLOT TO RAID THAW JAIL

Thaw's attitude on the advent of Jerome in the case took a decided change toward evening.

"It's almost worth being deported to have Willie on the job once more," he laughed, "but I notice Jerome is not coming to Canada. He is wise in that decision and Governor Glynn will be a good deal wiser before that thing is over and when he begins to realize the strength of public opinion."

When he first heard that Jerome had been drafted against him by the New York State authorities he was deeply concerned. It was then reported that he had appealed to King George and President Wilson.

The prisoner received a postal card from Chicago this afternoon that is believed to have come from two of the men who helped him escape from Matteawan and accompanied him on the mad dash across the New York State line. The card read:

"Friend Harry:

Arrived safe. Will write later. Best regards. Hope everything turns out O. K.

(Signed) "Rob-Fred."

The card was mailed on August 20. Thaw said that for the present he would withhold the names of the men who sent it. Thaw conferred for some time late in the day with Louis St. Laurent, the Quebec lawyer engaged to look after the interests of Thompson.

When this ended Thaw said that Thompson was perfectly satisfied with the treatment he was getting.

Ex-Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, of Thaw's counsel, and George McLeish were in a conference at the Sherbrooke House tonight discussing the legal aspect of the case.

Thaw referred tonight to his escape from Matteawan as a great joke on Dr. Kilh. He recalled the latter's boast that he could not escape under his regime.

"And here I am," laughed Thaw, "only a short time after Kilby arrived there. E.lb is a good fellow, nice and wholesome, but with little judgment or ability."

"EDUCATED" THOMPSON HAS NO DESIRE TO "SQUEAL"

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—The break between Harry K. Thaw and "Educated" Roger Thompson, the chauffeur of the Thaw flight, has been patched up, despite all reports to the contrary.

Thompson denied yesterday any confession or any intention to "squeal" on Thaw.

Thaw is standing by Thompson and Thaw money is slated to pay any fine Thompson incurs at the hands of Canadian courts.

An interesting explanation of Thompson's reason for hanging around Sherbrooke, when he had every chance to make a clean "getaway" is that he was a collector for the gang which helped Thaw break out of Matteawan. He was to collect the escape money. This explanation is plausible and accounts for the $25,000 check which was sent so quickly.

Thaw did not need cash to engage counsel, once his identity was established. Any Canadian lawyer would jump at the chance to serve the Thaw family, sane or crazy. It is now believed by that that the $25,000 was to be given by Thaw to Thompson, to be "split" among the five helpers. But Thompson was arrested and all payments through him have necessarily been held up.

Thompson plans to play a trump card upon the authorities in claiming Canadian birth and immunity from deportation.

According to Thompson he was born in Toronto.

CANADIANS QUICK TO RID SELVES OF "UNDESIRABLES"

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Canadian authorities refuse to worry over legal technicalities. Witness of this is the story of the non-eugenic marriage of "Tom" Crowley's Chicago "dip," which just occurred at London, Ontario.

"Tom" came up from Chicago in the wake of a circus and accompanied by a Chicago damsel. "Tom" was nabbed while operating at the circus grounds.

Rather than pay for his keep in jail the immigration authorities were asked to deport him. But the woman admitted that she was not married, and said her name was Foley. She was evidently undesirable, and was slated to go along with Crowley to the United States, when a hitch arose. She claimed to have been born in Canada and lived here until she was four years old. This made her a Canadian and she could not be deported. But she was just as undesirable as she was before.

One of the immigration officers said to Crowley: "Ain't you ashamed to be travelling with a woman who isn't your wife?"

Crowley was chewing tobacco and paused long enough to ejaculate, "Naw."

"Will you marry the lady?" demanded the officer. "Not on your life." "Oh, yes you will. You will marry her or go to jail for a couple of years for picking pockets."

"That's different," replied the criminal. "Sure I'll marry her."

The lady was then visited and with the alternative of jail or matrimony quickly consented to embrace matrimony.

OSCAR VON HOFFMAN, friend of Harry K. Thaw, who baldly outlines his plans of new escape for fugitive.

Failure to Get Through Ticket Big Plot Blunder

"If Thaw had a railway or steamer ticket to any point outside of Canada he would be permitted to pass on unmolested. Apparently he had no such ticket."—Statement by Minister of Justice Doherty, at Ottawa, yesterday, when it was found that the fugitive had no through ticket to Detroit, as had been reported.

A Methodist minister was secured and the two were mated with sublime disregard for eugenics.

Miss Foley, in getting married to an American, became an American citizen. The pair was immediately pushed across the line.

MARKET PLACE ONE OF THE BIG SHOWS IN SHERBROOKE

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—When the reporters aren't too busy trying to interview Harry Thaw, Sherbrooke people like to take them around to the Lansdowne market.

Sherbrooke has met the high cost of living problem through this market. It is conducted by the city, and farmers and gardeners and cattlemen come and sell their products direct to the housewives.

At 8 in the morning the countryside is ready for business at the market. On all sides there are signs which read:

Any storekeeper who attempts to purchase supplies in this market before 10 a. m. will be prosecuted. The law provides a $20 fine for each offense. Any marketman who sells to storekeepers before 10 a. m will be fined $20.

Thus the consumers are given first chance at the market and the grocer and provision man has to take his chances afterwards. There are few such stores in Sherbrooke, but the Mayor of the city, who is a grocer, approves heartily of the municipal market.

All sorts of things are sold in the market, including flowers, preserves, jellies, bread, pastry, as well as meat and provisions. Buxom farmer's wives, cutting and selling meat, are one of the features of this market.

MAY USE YACHT IN NEW THAW FLIGHT

Chum of Matteawan Fugitive Makes No Secret of Details in Latest Plan.

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—A daring plot for a new flight for Thaw has been framed by Oscar von Hoffman, for years a chum of the Matteawan inmate. Von Hoffman takes no trouble to conceal the details, all of which have been carefully worked out. Here is the scheme:

The moment Thaw is turned back into Vermont or New Hampshire, as is expected, he will be arrested by the authorities of that State. A hearing will be demanded, with cash bail furnished in any amount for Thaw's appearance.

The next step in this scheme is to rush Thaw to the nearest seaport, have a fast yacht in waiting. Once on the high seas Thaw's plotters defy the world to stop him.

Oscar von Hoffman is an old friend of Thaw. His father is a big landed proprietor in the town of Cumbach, Kingdom of Bavaria, Germany. Cumbach is a peaceful community of 6,000 industrious Germans.

The name of the town may mean more to the average American when he is informed that it is the home of Culmbacher beer, a heavy, dark Bavarian beer which is much affected by those who do.

The elder Von Hoffmans owns 3,500 acres in Culmbach. There is a big hunting preserve and plenty of other healthy out-door sport for Thaw. There are also plenty of obedient Bavarian peasants on the estate who will do Von Hoffman's instant bidding and who will restrain Thaw in case any such control becomes necessary.

So desperate is Thaw's case felt to be by Von Hoffman and so confident is he that the plot will go through, that Von Hoffman did not hesitate to speak freely of it to an AMERICAN reporter. He said:

"The scheme is this: If Thaw is released by the Canadian government to the United States—as he undoubtedly will be from the way things are going—he will be turned back into New Hampshire or Vermont.

Will Demand a Hearing.

"In the natural course of events Thaw will be immediately rearrested the moment he is on United States soil again.

"He will demand a hearing. His lawyers will see that he is properly instructed. Bail can be furnished in any amount.

"Here Von Hoffmans paused and seemed to be cogitating how he could best express himself without saying too much about a delicate point.

He resumed his narrative abruptly, saying:

"Suppose Thaw is hustled by his friends to the nearest seaport on the New Hampshire or Maine coast. Let him be put aboard a private yacht, a fast one.

"I expect to be with Thaw through this. My plan is to take him down to Buenos Ayres in as good rest, several months if necessary.

"Later, when Thaw wishes, we will charter a yacht and steam across the Atlantic to a German port. Probably our going would not be heralded and probably Thaw's entry into Germany would be accomplished with as little fuss as possible.

"The main thing is to get Thaw into Germany. In the kingdom of Bavaria, in what is called the 'Upper Franconia" district, there is the town of Kulmbach, my birthplace. There my father has his estate. There are 3,500 acres. There is a big hunting preserve. Thaw could spend years there without annoyance. In case it should be necessary to prevent him from starting back to America—why the men on the estate will do as they are told.

Offers Ideal Refuge.

"The place is ideal as a refuge for Thaw, and there is no reason why this plan cannot be carried out. I am on my way now to New York to meet Thaw's mother and his sister and brother-in-law. I have telegraphed them to meet me at the Hotel Gotham.

Von Hoffman sent an innocently worded telegram, in arranging for the New York conference. It was addressed to George Lauder Carnegie at the Hotel Gotham and read about as follows:

"VERY GRATIFYING NEWS FOR FAMILY. HAVE MRS. MARY COPLEY THAW AND MRS. CARNEGIE MEET ME WITH YOU AT HOTEL GOTHAM TODAY. — VON HOFFMANN."

THAW'S SISTER HIS UNFAILING CHAMPION

motto ever since she was old enough to help her brother. These words were:

"Of course I shall fight for Harry. I always have."

The sister's love is practical as well as warm. When Harry Thaw is in a scrape—any trouble from murder up—it means law and law means lawyers and lawyers (for Harry Thaw) mean money and lots of it.

Mrs. Carnegie came armed with first-aid to the imprisoned—a check for $25,000.

All through her life Harry Thaw has turned to "Sister Margaret" for aid and never has she failed him.

As a youth she fought his battles, not pugilistic necessarily, but family ones, which were more serious. She has stood between her brother's reckless acts and family wrath many times.

Through the double ordeal of the two murder trials "Sister Margaret" was on hand to comfort the brother in his fearful predicament.

When Thaw was jailed in Sherbrooke the first one upon whom he called for aid was "Sister Margaret."

How Mrs. Carnegie dragged her husband on a flying trip to Sherbrooke, with full purse, to help her brother again, how she kissed him repeatedly and how she assured him all would be well with him—these things have been told as though they were matters of much news.

But these sisterly deeds are no new acts for "Sister Margaret."

For she says: "I shall fight for Harry. I always have."

HOW THAW FIGHT MAY COVER YEARS

Counsel Explains It Is Possible to Carry Appeal to High Court in England.

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 23.—In his quarters at the jail Thaw has the constant services of a stenographer, to whom he dictates for several hours daily. His lawyers refuse to discuss his conflicting orders to them, contenting themselves with saying that he is of "great assistance" in their tasks.

Their number was increased to six today by the arrival of Attorney Harry Hirschberg of Newburgh, N. Y. Five of the lawyers are Canadians and all were selected on the advice of George L. McLeish, a friend of the Thaw family, with particular reference to their political affiliations.

The way in which Thaw might keep his case in the courts for years was disclosed by one of his counsel, J. W. McKeon, of Montreal, tonight.

"Thaw might withdraw his habeas corpus writ and appear before a magistrate for a hearing on the charge brought against him of being a fugitive from justice in that he escaped from Matteawan, where he was serving a life sentence," said Mr. McKeon. "He might plead innocent and demand a jury trial, which would send him before the King's court.

"If found guilty an appeal could be taken on questions of law to the King's bench appeals side.

"The appeals side is a court of five judges sitting in Montreal. If any member of this bench dissented from a verdict of guilty, Thaw could appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada at Ottawa. If found guilty in this court he might appeal to the judicial committee for the King's privy council, provided the privy council grants him permission.

"The whole proceedings might take the case to England and before the King's privy council."

"Of course," added Mr. McKeon, "such a course is far from our intentions at present. Our sole aim is the habeas corpus hearing on Wednesday."

Sheriff Is Warned of Prison Raid

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Canadian authorities took prompt measures today to block a jail raid that was reported brewing in Harry K. Thaw's behalf.

St. Louis Gouin, premier of the province of Quebec, received warning of such a raid. He immediately telegraphed Sheriff Aylmer of St. Francis County to know if, in the sheriff's opinion, the staff of guards at Sherbrooke jail is strong enough to repel a raid.

Sheriff Aylmer telegraphed back that he had no fears but what his jail guard is ample to hold the place against any attack.

But the sheriff did add, significantly, that THE NEXT TIME THE PRISONER IS TAKEN TO COURT AN ARMED GUARD WILL BE ORDERED OUT.

JAIL "GOVERNOR" NEARLY DISTRACTED WITH THAW CASE

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Governor Le Force of the Sherbrooke jail is having his troubles, because of his custody of Thaw. Tonight he said:

"I am on the verge of prostration and if they don't get this thing settled I will be a sick man. I received right new prisoners today, making thirty-two in all.

"Today is cleaning day at the jail. I have four men in the yard working and I have to keep attending to Thaw. Lord knows one of these prisoners might jump the wall.

"My staff consists of three officers and myself, one keeps the books in the office and one out watching the yard and Thaw's friends.

"Two fine couch bed mattresses arrived tonight at the jail. They may be for Thaw. Thompson is in with three other men in the corner of the cell. Thaw he alone, as so many people call on him. To keep down work, the electric lights went out last night in the storm, but we got some oil lamps and had other candles today.

"Did it scare you?" he was asked.

"O, no, not me."

It was cleary all day and very quiet at the jail. Now and then the townspeople call, look around and go away. There is no noise save the big door slamming and the rattle of the big key to the room which holds Thaw. The key is seven inches long and old fashioned in style. It hangs from a small ring with three other keys which are smaller. The guard sometimes goes out to see people with these keys hanging from his little finger. Anyone might snatch them.

THAW DENIES HE WARNED EVELYN TO DROP HIS NAME

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 23.—Harry Thaw is exceedingly interested in the movements of his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. He asked one reporter about her latest movements and where she was living, but showed no interest in her little son Russell. The prisoner denied having sent his wife the telegram in which she was warned to take his name off the sign of the theatre in which she is now doing a vaudeville turn.

POPULAR VOTE WOULD FREE THAW, CRIES ALIENIST BACK FROM JAIL AT SHERBROOKE

Matteawan Fugitive Victim of Persistent Persecution, Declares Dr Britton G Evans

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—"If Thaw's release was left to a popular vote he would be liberated by a practically unanimous vote and the people would escort him to any part of the United States that he wished to go."

This is the esteem and general favor in which the slayer of Stanford White is now held by the general populace of the Dominion of Canada, according to Dr. Britton D. Evans, the famous alienist, who has returned from Sherbrooke, where he has been constantly with the prisoner.

He said:

"I have just returned from Sherbrooke, where I have been in close touch with Harry K. Thaw and the Canadian government's actions. Harry K. Thaw is resting his case upon the justice which he expects from the Canadian government and the Department of Justice.

"The people in and about Sherbrooke show great sympathy for Thaw. If his release were left to a popular vote he would be liberated by practically unanimous consent, and they would escort him to any part of the United States.

"I did not hear a man, woman or child express a single sentiment other than a desire that Harry Thaw be given full liberty, and I conversed with hundreds.

"The Canadians resented with great feeling the tactics resorted to by the New York lawyers and by the persons representing or claiming to represent the New York authorities. They refer to the proceedings and the methods adopted as the worst legal trickery, and show a decided feeling against the efforts to railroad matters through their courts, which are out of harmony with their usual legal procedure."

"I am of the opinion that the methods being employed by persons who claim to represent New York authorities come far from impressing the intelligent Canadians favorably, and the best attorneys of the Province do not hesitate to severely criticise the inconsistent and conflicting contentions made in the name of the law for the purpose of bringing Thaw back to Matteawan.

"And after listening to arguments and discussions in the hotel lobbies, the court house and on the streets I am strongly impressed with the serious and logical analysis they have made of this important proposition now before them.

"It does seem farfetched for the representatives of the New York authorities to present a number of contentions so illogical and unreasonable as those that have been placed by them in the hands of the officials of the court at Sherbrooke. The contention is made that Thaw is an undesirable citizen.

"The New York authorities take the trouble and exert themselves vigorously and lastly do notify the Canadians that Mr. Thaw is undesirable to the Canadians.

"The sentiment up there is that Canada did not ask for advice, legal or otherwise, upon this subject, and that they are fully qualified to determine when a person comes among them that is not acceptable to them socially or from a well defined legal standpoint. The Canadians further say that if Mr. Thaw is undesirable to the great degree indicated by the New York authorities it is difficult for them to understand why the New York authorities are so anxious and active in their endeavors to bring about his return into the State of New York. More especially, since the State of New York is not the place of his legal residence.

"They also contend that it is unusual for an individual, a municipality, a State or a government to seek vigorously and at great expense any person or thing not desirable.

"And I am inclined to the opinion that this conclusion is arrived at by logical methods. It would appear that New York modesty would allow Canada to determine the phases of Mr. Thaw's undesirability without any obnoxious intrusions.

"There is much talk of trumping up a charge of bribery and conspiracy, and it is plain that since there is a very well-defined anxiety or desire to impress upon the reading public and the Canadian authorities that Harry K. Thaw is a very insane man, the contention in the face of this marked mental derangement, his responsibility for bribery or conspiracy has neither logical nor legal basis, and this method resorted to for the purpose of hunting him down, following him up at great expense to return him to New York on an escaped lunatic makes this contention not plausible if it can be called being employed by persons who claim to a reasonable or sensible proposition.

"It may be pertinently asked why is there so much money and energy expended to keep Thaw in New York? The public ought to know this. It is unusual—extremely unusual. Such procedures may appeal to an excitable element who read without thinking, but to the intelligent readers on matters of things of this sort this systematic persecution conducted under the cloak of legal procedure is beginning to stir up a general inquiry as to the 'Why' of it.

"Does the fact of his having money or the fact that his family is possessed of money prompt this activity? Is it an attempt for notoriety? Is it professional vanity or disappointment?

"I contend that a parallel cannot be found in the annals of medical jurisprudence in any State in the United States in the last century, and I doubt if any such case can be found in the records of the criminal courts of this country or of any other enlightened country. I challenge any reputable student of medical jurisprudence to produce a case in which there has been conducted from year to year such an order of systematic persecution, which system of systematic persecution has been well paid for either from private sources or from the treasury of the State of New York, or that of New York City.

Geraldine La Force, Thaw's friend.

Jail "Sunshine" Cheers Thaw

Miss Tosses Flowers at Him

Little Geraldine Is One of Five Children of the "Governor" or Warden.

Of course Sherbrooke jail is not like Charlestown prison, a great gray bastion, where no children should ever be seen. This is a quaint, pretty, old French-Canadian jail fitted up with commodious living quarters for the governor down stairs, and forty or fifty cells for prisoners up above. The La Force children go to their front door and find themselves in an attractive country lane, with wild flowers by the roadside, and trees and grass. Or they may enter the jail yard, which is a garden.

Now Harry Thaw is not confined in an ordinary cell. He is located in what is the hospital of the jail when there are any sick people, which is seldom. He can look out of his window upon the governor's youngsters playing in the road, and it wouldn't be surprising if he could get out of the window if he wanted to, for the bars are thin and look very old.

But Harry Thaw has contented himself with smiling down at the youngsters, especially at Geraldine, who smiles up. The first day Thaw looked out the window little Geraldine happened to be alone in the lane. She looked up and espied his pale visage.

"Hello, mum," she piped up. "What are you in for?"

Thaw laughed heartily. "I am supposed to be a sick man," he explained.

"Poor man," replied the child. "Geraldine is sorry. Here, man." She busied herself picking roadside flowers until she had quite a bouquet. Then she remembered that she couldn't reach to him. So like a true descendant of old France, she kissed the flowers and threw them upwards. They did not reach the window, but Harry Thaw was much moved by the kind action.

"Thank you, little girl," he said. "Some day you may be glad you were kind to a man who has few friends."

THAW AROUSED BY REPLY OF EVELYN

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Harry K. Thaw flew into a paroxysm of rage in his cell-room today when he learned of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's "Yellow dog" estimate of his love for her.

He was shown a copy of a newspaper containing Evelyn's statement that: "Harry Thaw cares no more for me than he does for a yellow dog."

The article infuriated the prisoner. He ripped the paper in two with one motion of his strong, nervous hands. He threw the pieces on the floor and stamped upon them.

It was only a little while before that Thaw became enraged at the news that "Educated" Roger Thompson had threatened to "squeal" on Thaw if he (Thompson) is not freed from jail.

Thaw was told what Thompson had said. Its effect upon the prisoner was quick and sharp.

"Squeal!" screamed Thaw. "He's got nothing to squeal. He has no information of a damaging character against me. He can't get me in any worse. Let him squeal and be ——— to him."

Crowds continue to stand about the jail in hope of seeing the famous prisoner. Several times Thaw appeared at the window of his cell and waved a handkerchief.

"Gun Fighters" Were Tourists.

Considerable excitement was caused here when five men, each carrying a rifle, stepped from a Grand Trunk train and went together to a hotel. Reports flew from lip to lip that they were "New York gun fighters imported here to free Thaw. They turned out to be rifle enthusiasts who had been taking part in a shooting tournament.

After sending another telegram to ex-Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, Thaw issued a peculiar statement as to how he came to retain Louis St. Laurent, the latest addition to his legal staff.

"I had the honor to retain Mr. St. Laurent in behalf of Thompson because he is half Irish," said Thaw. "He is a brilliant man, half French and half Irish. Can you imagine a better combination to produce wisdom, sagacity and force? Half French and half Irish. Just think of it. My mother is half Irish, too."

Ex-Governor Stone lives in Pittsburgh. He was attorney for Thaw in the Thaw bankruptcy proceedings.

Report $25,000 'Tip' for Helping Thaw

"Big Dick" Received Very Fine Commission for Escape.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The plan that "Big Dick" Butler and his assistants so successfully followed in rescuing Harry Thaw from Matteawan was drawn up by two men who have been confessed friends of the slayer of Stanford White, and Butler was called to and given the commission, according to detectives who have been working on the case. They say the choice of assistants was left entirely to Butler and that one-half the $25,000 said to have been paid for the coup was delivered then and there. The other $12,500 was paid Butler last Saturday night.

Much talk of dissatisfied participants in the plot and of Butler's "holding out" part of the money he rifle and the detectives from Police Commissioner Dougherty's offices are working where the talk is loudest.

The Burns detectives have been re called for the time being. It is declared on the best authority that all suspicion of bribery within the Matteawan Hospital for the criminal insane has been removed and there is little evidence that Howard Barnum, the imprisoned keeper, did anything worse than prove himself careless and lax.

THAW IN GLEE BECAUSE "WILLIE IS ON THE JOB"

"It's almost worth being deported to have Willie on the job once more, but I notice Jerome is not coming to Canada. He is wise in that decision and Governor Glynn will be a good deal wiser before that thing is over and when he begins to realize the strength of public opinion."—Statement by Harry Thaw last evening, in commenting on the news that William Travers Jerome is to have charge of the case against him.

Vermont Officials and Jerome Confer

Begins Work of Arranging to Get Thaw into New York.

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—William Travers Jerome has been engaged, not to fight the battle out in Canada, but to assist the New York authorities to regain their prisoner, should he be reported into any other State than New York.

Jerome is already hard at work on the case, and today conferred with Vermont officials on the possibility of Thaw's being sent over the border at a point near Colebrook.

Jerome was selected because of his knowledge of Thaw and the Thaw case. From the first murder trial until the last attempt to prove White's slayer sane.

Thaw's increasing nervousness, not to say unmanageability, is one reason for rushing these escape plans to final arrangement.

Another element has just come into the case, too, in the confusion among Thaw's Canadian counsel. It is a case of "Too Many Cooks," (legal ones) in the first place, and a scarcity of responsible authority to whom the lawyers may look in the next.

The lawyers would like to know who is really in charge of Thaw's case, who will foot the bills and whom they are to consult pending Thaw's arraignment next Wednesday.

Thaw Hero with Society Women

SHERBROOKE, P. Q., Aug. 23.—Harry Thaw has proven a magnet for society women from the Summer resorts within fifty miles of here.

A Mrs. Hutchinson of New York—summering at North Hatley, Quebec, on Lake Massawippi—has been here daily, taking every chance to call a greeting to Thaw at his window or as he passes between the court house and the jail.

High-class automobiles spin up the street every day—each with its cargo of women and girls. The streets are filled with them. Their dresses light up the court room at the hearings.

Sherbrooke says there was never anything like it here before. Thaw's feminine admirers spend a good deal of time outside the jail, waving their hands or calling a greeting to him at his windows.

Which pleases Harry immensely. It is one of the bright spots in his tiresome confinement.

Through Ticket for Thaw Meant Liberty

Lack of This Failed to Give Him Claim as Tourist.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 23.—It was learned here today that Harry K. Thaw had no railway ticket for Detroit, Mich., when arrested on Canadian soil and cannot claim to be a tourist passing through this country. Thaw's lawyers allowed the belief to crystallize that Thaw was en route for Detroit when arrested.

Minister of Justice Doherty said today:

"If Thaw had a railway or steamer ticket to any point outside of Canada he would be permitted to pass on unmolested. Apparently he had no such ticket."

SAY THAW DROVE EVELYN TO STAGE

His Treatment of Wife Responsible for Her Decision, Declare Counsel.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—That Harry Thaw cares nothing for what becomes of his wife, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, is the declaration of John Reilly, counsel for Mrs. Thaw, who pleaded with Harry to support Evelyn in an interview at Matteawan.

Thaw told him, Reilly declares, that it was his desire to make Evelyn as unhappy and uncomfortable as possible.

"Thaw has said the compelling reason for his making an attempt to escape was his love for his wife, and because she returned to the stage. He said that simply to try to create the impression that she returned to the stage from choice. The fact is that her allowance was discontinued in June, 1912. It had been interrupted before and then continued.

"I went to see Thaw in Matteawan in September, 1912. I spent a whole afternoon with him. Among other things I told him that his wife had been forced to sell all her furniture. He said that he did not regard Evelyn as his wife, legally or morally. I told him she had pointed more that she could sell, and asked him if he could not do something for her. He said that he would take the matter under advisement. Then he said: 'I want her to try the case in court, and after I have beaten her I will take the matter up.'

"Finally I went to see Thaw once more, and reminded him that seven years ago he had taken Miss Nesbit from the stage, and that it would be very difficult for her to start her stage career again. Thaw's reply was:

"'I don't care what becomes of her.'

Mrs. Thaw, who was present, then took part in the conversation. She said: 'His saying that his attempt to escape was due to my return to the stage was just a cunning pretext, due to his desire to get public sympathy.'

"Do you reciprocate his alleged affection?" she was asked.

"I certainly do not," she replied. "I see him about as much as he loves me, and that is about as much as a priest loves Mephistopheles."

VERMONT READY TO AID NEW YORK SAYS GOVERNOR FLETCHER

MONTPELIER, Vt., Aug. 23.—Should Harry K. Thaw be deported from Canada into this State, he would be stepping "from the frying pan into the fire," both Governor Fletcher and Attorney General John Brown having declared that they will enforce the laws of the State and honor the request of the New York State authorities for his extradition, providing the request is made in proper form.

Governor Allen M. Fletcher, at his home in Cavendish last night said: "Personally I believe that Thaw will be sent over directly to the New York authorities. I don't anticipate that he will be sent into the State of Vermont. If he does come here we will carry out the existing laws having to do with extradition and will assist as far as it is in our power his immediate extradition to New York. That is, of course, if the request is properly made and we are satisfied that our course is entirely within the laws of the State."

Grateful Citizen Offers Him $500 for Stage Appearance

Fugtive Gives Town More Publicity Than $18,000 Worth of Advertising.

By F. J. M'ISAAC.

SHERBROOKE, Aug. 22.—If Harry Thaw can be detained in Sherbrooke until after the fair, or the Eastern Agricultural Exhibition, as it is grandly captioned, there isn't any doubt that all records for attendance would be broken. If by any combination of circumstances Thaw could be induced to show himself at the fair, the whole province of Quebec would be on hand.

Thaw is the greatest advertising asset that ever came across the border line into Canada, and don't imagine for one minute that Sherbrooke doesn't know it.

This is no dead city. It is small but pert. It believes in advertising; it yearns for publicity, and its leading citizens put their ear to the ground every night to hear the town grow.

Harry Thaw has come along and put Sherbrooke on the map. Never again will a Canadian or American make the humiliating remark "Sherbrooke," I never heard of the place. Sure you don't mean Cherbourg in France.

Campaign Called Off.

For the past three years Sherbrooke has been trying to put herself on the map. This little city of 19,000 people has dug up $18,000 dollars, nearly a dollar per inhabitant, and boldly purchased space, in the advertising pages of the magazines, issued bales of literature and pulled off a ballyhoo that would draw a multitude into the tent if it only had a good location.

But Sherbrooke's $18,000 sounded like a weak voice crying in the wilderness against the tremendous publicity campaigns of the big cities, and last year the advertising campaign was called off.

And now along comes a man escaped from a lunatic asylum, and lands this town in the front row of places where things happens, turns the eyes of the world towards the little French Canadian metropolis, and enables her citizens to bask in the bright limelight. And all this advertising isn't going to hurt the great exhibition of agricultural products a little bit.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, and this ill wind is living up to its reputation. Harry K. Thaw is reposing in the county jail. He is there because he wants to be, since there isn't much doubt that he is there illegally.

But as soon as he emerges he is liable to be pounced upon by the Canadian immigration officers, so he prefers the shelter of the friendly jail.

His food is sent in from the Magog Motel. The food is better than the name would indicate. The hotel is named after a river which flows through the town, and not after an insect, as might be supposed. Every morning he is visited by his squadron of barristers, advocates and King's Councillors, his flotilla of insanity experts and his fleet of reporters.

LOCAL CELEBRITIES OF SHERBROOKE.

S. Walter Smith, prominent boy scout, and Hazel Glasgow, who sympathizes with Thaw and sent him a bouquet.

Mayor Felix Hebert behind the counter in his grocery store.

Sheriff Kelsey of Colebrook, N. H., who assisted Sherbrooke to fame, at left, and the local letter carrier.

PRETTY WOMEN SYMPATHIZE WITH THAW; SEND FLOWERS

He is a very important personage and he likes it. Strangers flock to Sherbrooke and fill the hotels. Beautiful women send him flowers and expressions of sympathy. Photographers take snapshots of him whenever he sticks his head outside the door.

The main street is dotted with strangers, and the girls of Sherbrooke have taken to wearing their Sunday dresses for every day. All these things are mighty good for business and you don't have to tell the Sherbrookers about it.

Why, the manager of His Majesty's Theatre has made Harry an offer of $500 to appear one night at a performance of "Brewster's Millions," which comes to town this week, showing all the scenes of a Broadway theatrical director. He has also offered the visiting journalists the use of his theatre during their sojourn. He is on the job.

The population is all for Thaw. The first morning I arrived in town I was having breakfast at the New Sherbrooke House. The waitress was French-Canadian, but just as friendly as a Yankee girl who hustles trays in Manchester, N. H., or Portland, Me. We were discussing Thaw, for it is bad form to discuss anything else in Sherbrooke.

"What do you think of Thaw?" I asked a reporter who had been here several days.

Calls Thaw "Bug."

"He's a bug," he remarked confidently.

"Don't you go saying anything against Thaw," said the waitress, poising a cup of boiling coffee just over his right ear. "He isn't any more crazy than you are. And if he would go down to New York and polish off that wife of his, that would prove he was sane."

"Oh, I'm for him," the reporter hastened to inform her, and she set the cup of coffee down.

"All the French ladies in Sherbrooke are for Thaw. If he had murdered Stanford White up here they would have set him free and erected a monument to him. Men who defend their wives' honor are popular in Sherbrooke. The only member of the Thaw family they don't care about is Evelyn. They think she should have set up housekeeping with him at Matteawan. Most of the men agree with them, but there are a few exceptions. One is the Mayor.

The Mayor of Sherbrooke is in the grocery business. Just at present there is no city hall, and in the interim the grocery store of Mayor Felix Hebert is the city's headquarters, although there there are offices on the Main street where the council meets once a week.

MAYOR HEBERT WOULD SEND THAW BACK ACROSS BORDER

I found the Mayor in his little office signing official looking documents. He was called to the phone by a woman who wanted to buy a half a melon, and there was quite an argument on whether the Mayor ought to cut a whole melon and take the chance of the other half being ruined on his hands. He finally decided to take the chance.

From melons to statesmanship we sailed via the Agricultural Fair, which Monsieur Hebert assured me would be the greatest in the history of the Eastern townships.

"In the Thaw matter, I have no control," stated the Mayor, in precise English. "If I had I would deliver the unfortunate young man over to the American authorities. He has certainly suffered for his crime, and he has made a gallant fight, but that is not our affairs. He has no right in Canada if the United States officers want him."

"If he had been a man worth five thousand instead of five millions he would have been either dead or free long ago."

"But you admit he is bringing plenty of publicity to Sherbrooke."

"Male, eet. It is remarkable how his incarceration here has brought the city into the light, put it upon the map. I hope we shall be able to profit by it, and attract the attention of industries looking for sites to our city. We have wonderful waterpower here, and we have a municipal electric plant which furnishes power and light very cheaply, and makes money at that.

Cites Temperance.

"We offer a free site and water power at $15 a horsepower, which is much less than half what factories have to pay for electricity in many parts of New England."

The Mayor is evidently quite an orator for he talked in a manner quite impressive and said many things about the enterprise and energy of Sherbrooke. I remember one thing more.

"We have many hotels, but almost never do you see a drunken man on our streets. Our people are very temperate."

That may be, for just after I left the Mayor I saw the town patrol wagon. It was about the size of a light grocery wagon and if it didn't have patrol wagon on the sides and wear two red policemen on the driving seat I wouldn't have believed it.

There were no seats on this patrol wagon. Whoever was arrested sat on the floor or laid down. There was nobody in it when it passed, evidently out for exercising.

Several policemen were breaking and entering a building by the second story window, and when we remonstrated with them they explained that Chief of Police Al Boudreau had carried off the key of the storeroom in his pants, so they had borrowed a ladder from the fire headquarters next door and were burglarizing the place.

All these things make one think of Arcadia, which impression was increased by the sight of a postman in a jumper and farm hat, who explained that they were his Summer uniform, his Winter regalia being very impressive.

We saw a similarly garbed postman standing for twenty minutes looking in a store window at a mechanical contrivance. We know because we stood there too.

Prosperous Factory.

Just the same, Sherbrooke is metropolitan in many things. It if has no city hall it owns a magnificent county courthouse, has plenty of up-to-date stores and many large and prosperous looking factories.

Four railroads pass through the city, and since it is a junction point it has several good hotels. It contains six banks, 200 stores.

The immense waterpower is furnished by the Magog River, which drops 120 feet within the city limits.

So you see that this isn't any Rube resort, but a real city, hoping for a future as ardently as any Western boom town. In the office of the secretary of the Board of Trade, whose name is J. A. Cook, are all kinds of booklets praising the "Electric City," as it is fondly called.

There were all put out during the presence of the publicity commissioner, who has recently folded his tent. And in a few days Harry Thaw has given the town more publicity than all its campaign funds were able to secure.

URGE BIG CHANGE IN CURRENCY BILL

American Bankers' Association to Recommend Radical Revision of Glass Measure.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Resolutions radically at variance with the provisions of the Owen-Glass currency bill, now pending before Congress, were unanimously adopted today by the American Bankers' Association, at the closing session of their conference at the Hotel Lasalle.

A committee of seven bankers, appointed by A. Barton Hepburn of New York, chairman of the conference, will take the resolutions to Washington and there work for the adoption of the endorsed amendments. Those named on the committee are: James B. Forgan president of the First National Bank of Chicago; George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago; E. J. Hill, president of the National Bank of Norwalk, Conn.; R. F. Maddox, vice-president of the American National Bank of Atlanta, Ga.; Solomon Wexler, vice-president of the Whitney Central National Bank of New Orleans; Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis; Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis.

The important changes in the Owen-Glass bill, as recommended by the conference, include the following:

"That there shall be no more than five federal reserve banks, instead of twelve.

"That many provisions of the bill applying to national banks shall be optional, instead of compulsory.

"That national banking associations which do not come under the provisions of the bill within one year shall not be dissolved, as provided by the bill in its present form.

"That the federal reserve board shall consist of three members chosen by the President, three members elected by the directors of the federal reserve banks and the Secretary of the Treasury, instead of four members chosen by the President, and three others, to be ex officio, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Comptroller of the Currency."

Sues Maine Sheriff for False Arrest

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 23.—Francois Frechette entered suit this afternoon against High Sheriff Fred E. Stevens for $10,000, alleging false imprisonment. The action grew out of the arrest of Frechette today on an old warrant in a liquor case. The penalty for conviction under the indictment was a fine of $400, or, defaulting in this, four months in jail. When arrested Frechette claimed that he had settled the case against him.

Moving Pictures of Floating Hospital

A series of moving pictures were taken today of the Boston Floating Hospital, and mothers and children in automobiles on their way to the North End Park were included. The pictures will be displayed in the local theatres.

At present there are 108 permanent and 70 day patients in the wards. There are about 100 mothers. The hospital anchored in Dorchester Bay at noon and later went to the North End Park, where more permanent patients were taken on board.

Roxbury Piano Storage Salesrooms

His August Piano Sale Now On

Prices Still Low

J.P.Collins

Founder of the Roxbury Piano Storage Salesrooms. The man who has done more to keep down piano prices than any other dealer in Boston. The Largest Distributor of Pianos in America.

His Great Piano Sales

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of business, as the public knows, is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store down town, where they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where they get their profit DIRECTLY out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano loaf around on the floor of the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in, in DUE TIME a Sacrifice tag is clapped on to it, be it high grade, low grade or middle grade, and it is sold to the first man or woman who wants it for the price marked on the tag—not a cent more or less. The selling price is made on the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' "Expense percentage" basis, and is figured to let the accounts out clean and clear, without regard to profit—so you can see easily by this statement how these sales must necessarily be sacrifices. Someone's loss is your gain.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Splendid Piano Bargains In August Sale

Many fine new and second-hand upright pianos of other equally first grade makers will go for so little that you would hardly believe the prices if we quoted them.

Closing Week of the August Furniture Sale

Siegel Furniture has gone into more homes this month than in any previous August Sales. With few exceptions we've broken selling records every day. Have you shared?

Just One Week Remains for You to Share in the Big Savings. These Closing Days Will Prove the Strength With Which This Great Furniture Event Was Planned

To make such a strong finish, after such phenomenal selling, proves that the original preparations were planned to embrace the greatest month of furniture buying ever accorded a New England store.

Most sales expend their bargain strength early in the month. We have planned to have this final week eclipse them all. Now low, final clearance prices rule the selling all along the line.

CHASE EJECTED AT ROCKINGHAM; ACCUSES JUDGE

Agent, on Roulette Raid, Says Judge Hall Jumped Out Window to Avoid Issuing Warrant.

ARREST BY WATCH AND WARD

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 23.—The Rev. J. Frank Chase started a crusade here against the men running eighteen roulette wheels which he says his men found in operation on the grounds, but the crusade met with difficulties.

"When I tried to enter the Administration building," said Mr. Chase, "I was ejected bodily from the grounds.

"Then I went to Judge L. W. Hall to apply for a warrant. The judge jumped out of the back window and left word he had gone for an auto ride and would return next week. He was apparently dodging me."

"Ridiculous!" said Judge Hall by way of comment. "That would be an absurd thing for me to do."

"I was asked to investigate gambling at the park," said Mr. Chase, "by the Reverend Thomas Chalmers of Manchester, N. H.

"I had seven Watch and Ward men looking over the fair and we found at least eighteen roulette wheels making from $10 to $20 a day.

"I was refused admission to the Administration Building, and when I appeared with my badge it was torn off and the officer refused to let me in. Someone grabbed me and threw me bodily out of the grounds.

"Agent Parker of the society was kicked about by sympathizers with the owners of the wheels, and was rescued by a policeman. The roulette wheels were shut up at last when we got a warrant through the aid of County Sheriff Spinney. William Hassen of New York city was arrested and will appear in the District Court next week.

W. L. Dudley, manager of the park, declared that the wheels there were not gambling machines and that the New Hampshire authorities had never objected to them.

Shot for Slander; Woman Indicted

Mrs. Mary Pradello Says Man Told Lies to Her Husband.

WORCESTER, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Mary Pradello, the woman who came all the way from Italy to defend her honor in her husband's eyes, and shot her alleged traducer, has been indicted by the Grand Jury for assault with intent to kill. The trial will come in the Fall.

Pradello had left his wife in Italy and came here to work. He ceased to write her, and Mrs. Pradello found that a man was telling—so she says—lies to her husband.

She borrowed money, came to Worcester, bought a revolver, met the man she says slandered her, and shot at him. He was not seriously hurt.

Baby Falls Into Tub of Hot Water

Melvin Johnson, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Johnson, No. 214 Somerville avenue, Somerville, last evening fell into a tub of hot water and was seriously scalded. Mrs. Johnson was preparing to give the child a bath and left the kitchen to secure its nightdress. While she was gone the child fell over the side of the tub into the water.

Trolley Strike May Tie Up Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 23.—Interurban lines entering this city were experiencing trouble in running cars today, as the result of a strike of conductors and motormen ordered by a newly organized union. The walkout may completely tie up all Indiana roads.

The men demanded a scale of wages of from 30 to 35 cents an hour. The present scale is 21 to 30 cents. The roads refused to arbitrate or to recognize the grievance committee in any way. About 600 men are involved.

"Prenatal Cafes in Boston" Plan Now for Better Babies

E. W. PRENDERGAST, BOSTON'S "PRENATAL" BABE.

Back Bay women of wealth and influence, under the leadership of Mrs. William Lowell Putnam of Boston and Manchester-by-the-Sea, have mapped out a "Better Bostonians" campaign—to instruct expectant mothers of Greater Boston.

The women who have planned the campaign are all members of the Women's Municipal League of Boston and their official title is "The Committee on Infant Social Service." Mrs. Putnam, who is a sister of President Lowell of Harvard University, is the chairman and leading spirit in the movement. The other members of the committee are: Miss Mary Strong, prominent settlement worker, who makes her home at No. 43 East Canton street; Mrs. J. W. Bartol, No. 1 Chestnut street; Mrs. R. S. Bradley, No. 125 Beacon street; Mrs. Bayard Thayer, No. 12 Arlington street; and Mrs. Albert Thorndike, No. 237 Beacon street.

Three Aims of Organization.

The coming campaign of these infant social service workers involves these three things:

First, the establishment of prenatal restaurants for expectant mothers in Boston.

Second, the publication of a bulletin to these mothers, including advice to the fathers as well.

Third, the continuation of the system of nurse visitation and supervision that was started as a small experiment four years ago and which has shown a steady improvement in the health of many patients, and has resulted in the bringing into the world of 1,295 perfectly sound and rugged babies.

The prize baby of them all is Edward William Prendergast, now almost two years old and son of Mr. and Mrs. William Prendergast of No. 6 North Mead street, Charlestown. He is a fine, healthy and strenuous example of what prenatal care of a mother will do for the coming baby.

At her beautiful home among the pines at Manchester-by-the-Sea, overlooking the blue expanse of ocean, Mrs. Putnam gave an American reporter an outline of the campaign her committee is planning in order that more healthy children like Edward Prendergast may be brought into the world.

The first Prenatal Restaurant in the country was opened this last week at No. 526 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, New York, by Miss Mabel Parker, the Good Angel of the Babies of New York. The "Angel" was amazed by the rush of expectant mothers who applied to her for feeding. On the opening day there was not room for a tenth part of them. Immediately steps were taken to organize an association in New York to take over the work of the Prenatal restaurant. College professors, settlement leaguers and many wealthy New York women are charter members.

Plan Five-Cent Dinners.

Upon hearing of Miss Parker's plan, Mrs. Putnam at once got into communication with her with a view to establishing a Prenatal Restaurant in Boston. "It is a big idea," said Mrs. Putnam. "In a way it has been tried in Paris, and I am glad the movement has come to this country."

In the beginning the plans for Prenatal Restaurants involve a noon meal only at five cents a person. There will be broth, meat and vegetables. At least once a week the women will be instructed on the things they eat. A lecturer in language understandable by all will inform them plainly of the value of certain foods. Every woman thus directly instructed will gladly help an outside friend with what she knows and thus indirectly spread the benefits of the Prenatal Restaurants.

Previous to the Prenatal Restaurants will be made for proper cooking in accordance with the religious propensities of the women cared for. Under this plan Catholics will be furnished with special food on Wednesdays and Fridays, and nothing but "kosher" cooking will be given Hebrews.

TRIAL DATE MRS. EATON'S NEW CARE

Woman Accused of Admiral's Death Superstitious Over October 13.

Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, who is in Plymouth jail, awaiting her trial on October 13 for the murder by poison of her husband, the late Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, U. S. N., of Assinippi, is superstitious about the "hoodoo" date named for her trial to begin. She said yesterday in her jail cell:

"Why couldn't they have made it October 14 just as well? My punishment is hard enough to bear without this added burden."

Sees Ill Omen in Date.

As a matter of fact, when Chief Justice Aiken of the Superior Court named October 13 he merely set the opening day of that week, Monday. But Mrs. Eaton sees some ill omen in the way the date falls.

When Plymouth county people jam into their county courthouse for the opening day of the trial they will behold a woman changed from the robust matron who pleaded "not guilty" so heartily at arraignment.

Jail life all Summer, lack of exercise and institution fare have combined to tell on Mrs. Eaton.

Mrs. Eaton was essentially an outdoor person. On her Assinippi farm she fed the poultry, attended the garden, took long walks and, for a woman of her build, was amazingly active.

Sheriff Porter and his wife, the matron, have allowed Mrs. Eaton as much exercise in jail as was consistent with regulations. They have made her meals as palatable to her as possible. They have not fretted her with finely drawn rules. Mrs. Eaton and her counsel appreciate this rightly.

Courage Is Still Good.

But Mrs. Eaton has found, like many another prisoner, that jail is jail and is not liberty. She is thinner. She has aged. Mental trouble has told on her, as well as the physical restraint.

But her courage is unabated. She is serenely confident of acquittal.

In a few weeks a special venire of 100 talesmen will be issued. The talesmen will be ordered to report at Plymouth courthouse on Monday morning, October 13. From their number the twelve jurymen are to be selected, barring some unusual number of disqualifications.

District Attorney Albert F. Barker of Plymouth County, who will prosecute Mrs. Eaton, has been getting what rest he could, preparatory to taking up his most important capital case.

Miss Sawtelle of Petersham Oldest 'Phone Operator

Cash Prizes Awarded—Now Who's the Oldest Telegraph Operator?

Miss Hattie O. Sawtelle of Petersham is the telephone operator that has seen the longest continuous service in New England, according to the returns sent to the Sunday AMERICAN in its search.

Miss Sawtelle beat out her nearest competitor, Miss Elisabeth Wentworth, of Boston, by a bare six months. Both operators were appointed in 1883, thirty years ago. Miss Sawtelle started in January and Miss Wentworth in July of that year.

Miss Sawtelle was found by W. H. Shea of Northampton, who on August 17 wrote to the AMERICAN as follows:

The oldest telephone operator in point of service that I know of is Miss H. O. Sawtelle, Petersham, Mass. Thirty years or more in service.

This was received by the AMERICAN on August 18, at 10:15 a. m.

The AMERICAN investigated Miss Sawtelle's record and found that the title belongs to her. She receives a $25 prize, as does W. H. Shea, who "discovered her."

NOW WHO IS THE OLDEST TELEGRAPH OPERATOR?

The search for the street car conductor and the telephone girl with the longest continuous service has aroused so much interest that the AMERICAN has been asked to conduct a similar inquiry into other lines.

"What telegraph operator has seen the longest continuous service?"

The AMERICAN will give the same awards in this search—$25 to the discoverer and an equal amount to the operator sought.

The contestants must be in active service now.

Replies must all be in by Friday, August 29.

MOVE ON TO CLEAN UP OLD ORCHARD

Gambling Openly Carried on Sundays, and Modesty on the Beach Needed.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Aug. 23.—Open defiance of law has stirred the citizens to action. Rev. Alexander Hamilton, pastor of the Methodist Church, is heading a movement to stop the many gambling schemes going on and to prevent indecent scenes among the bathers on the beach.

In an interview, Mr. Hamilton said:

After my service last Sunday evening I went down to the beach to investigate conditions. There is enough to be seen there to justify reasonable complaint over the way gambling schemes are carried on. Places of amusement are open on Sundays and a general lawlessness prevails all over. Decent people do not dare to be numbered in such a class as come down to the beach without any restraint upon modesty in their manner of lolling upon the beach.

These conditions must be known to the municipal officers, but nothing is done to stop them. I do not believe that a majority of the permanent citizens of this town want these unseemly conditions to prevail.

As yet they do not seem to have entered a protest vigorous enough to put a stop to the law breakers. The time is coming when a majority of our best citizens will act together in a way that shall be effective in securing enforcement of the law against indecent exhibitions, against gambling and other conditions which would be condemned by any self respecting person.

Secretary E. W. Burnsoud of the Civic Alliance, who has also been making investigations, says:

There is altogether too much looseness in dancing the Bunny Hug on the beach. While the Tango is under the ban for Sundays, there is the way that many bathers express themselves and dance the Bunny Hug.

Why I bought curios as decent-minded person would care to show.

There is a low taste prevailing among the amusements and it exists no doubt to attract a low crowd. Some of us are here to have a good time, but we believe that we can get that good time without lowering our standards of morality.

OVERCOME BY PAIN AT BOX

Officer Palmer Makes Strong Statement About New Remedy, Var-ne-sis

Among the many statements made relative to the work of Var-ne-sis, the stomach and rheumatic remedy, which is being introduced at Riker-Jarvis drug store, corner Hanover and Washington streets, none are more remarkable than that of Officer George B. Palmer, who lives at 23 Eighteenth street, Lowell, Mass. He said:

GEORGE B. PALMER.

"I had been a sufferer for so many years that I hardly knew what it was like to feel well. For 25 years I was troubled with dyspepsia. I had to be careful of what I ate, was unable to drink coffee, eat meats, fried foods or pastry; in fact, I had to watch my diet at all times. About five years ago rheumatism began to make its appearance, and, to make matters worse, I had a weakness of the kidneys. This condition became so bad that at times I had to give up my work, and remain at home for a period of several weeks, suffering from sciatic and muscular rheumatism. Once the pain become so bad that I could not reach my box to ring in without assistance, and had to be helped to the nearest drug store.

"I tried many remedies, but the rheumatism always mad. Its appearance in damp weather. I read in the papers of Officer Buchanan's case and inquired of him personally. His reply thoroughly convinced me of the merit of this medicine, and I immediately secured some. After being on the treatment a short time I began to feel better, my rheumatism gradually disappeared, stomach became stronger, kidney trouble vanished, and I can now eat anything I care to. I have gained 15 pounds, out in all kinds of weather, and not a sign of the old trouble. I certainly feel grateful to this man and his remedy."

Those living out of town may secure the remedy at any reliable druggist's, or write to W. A. Varney, Lynn, Mass., for the newspaper devoted to rheumatics.

It was stated that Mr. Varney or his physician would continue to meet the public at the Riker Drug Store, corner Hanover and Washington streets, every day and evening to explain more about the remedy.—Advt.

MRS. OELRICHS SAYS HUSBAND TOOK $500,000

Cause of Estrangement Ten Years Ago Revealed in Deposition by Former Theresa Fair.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—For more than a decade there has been mystery over the strange estrangement of the late Herman Oelrichs and his wife, Theresa Fair Oelrichs of Newport, daughter of the late Senator James G. Fair. The report at the time of their separation was that it was due to money troubles. That this report was the correct one would appear to have received full corroboration in a sworn deposition by Mrs. Oelrichs filed in the local courts on August 20, in which she makes the direct charge that her husband converted to his own use $500,000 worth of bonds belonging to her and took other moneys belonging to her to speculate for himself.

The deposition was made in a suit brought by the First National Bank against Mrs. Oelrichs, her sister, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and Charles Oelrichs, to determine ownership of $850,000 remaining in that institution's possession from the estate of Mrs. Oelrich's late husband.

In this deposition Mrs. Oelrich says in part:

"I told Mr. Oelrichs he had taken $500,000 worth of bonds out of my safe deposit box without my consent and unless he made over the entire Fairmount Hotel property at once to me I would bring suit and have him arrested for stealing my bonds, which it was, nothing more nor less.

"He told me if I did not allow him to retain those bonds he would be obliged to go back to Oelrich's and Co. as a clerk, being penniless, having spent and lost everything he had in the world.

"I saw he was in bad condition, and said: 'If you're willing to make over the Fairmount to me, absolutely, and give up all rights to the money which my sister has given you, I will allow you to retain those bonds for Hattie.' They will bring you in an income of $20,000 a year, but you must promise me when you die to make a will leaving them to your boy.

"He said he would. I said: 'Very well, then; If, will not allow you to retain them, and will overlook the fact that you have lost $300,000 of my money in the North German Lloyd and Oelrichs Company, and that you bought 10,000 shares of lead with my money to put in your own name! . . .

A Sad Story of Tight-Lacing

New Health Boom for Boston

Scene (First Act): Park Square Restaurant; Actors, Young Lady, Doctor and Nurse.

A dull sickening thud has established Boston's reputation as a health resort.

The thud was accomplished by Mrs. Gustav Weinsmiller of Columbus avenue, Roxbury. But the thud was made possible by Boston's salubrious climate.

Boston's reputation as a stylish city also has something to do with the case.

The thud took place in a Park square restaurant. Patrons had noticed Mrs. Weinsmiller eclipsing herself at one of the counters, with a hot chicken pie, some Hungarian goulash, apple pie, a glass of milk and some coffee jelly.

They paid no particular attention when she got up and started for the door. Then came the thud.

The patrons looked around—and were amazed and distressed to see Mrs. Weinsmiller apparently sleeping peacefully on the floor.

Off to the Hospital.

They jumped from their chairs. They patted her hands. They chafed her arms. They poured glass after glass of water on her brow.

Mrs. Weinsmiller slept on.

"Get a doctor—get a doctor," some one yelled, at last, and a doctor and a nurse came and removed the slumbering Mrs. Weinsmiller to the Boston Polyclinic Hospital at No. 14 Park square.

"What a small waist she has for such a plump girl," commented the nurse. They measured the waist, and it was just twenty-two inches.

"I think her cor—or—that she's laced too tight," said a young lineup, and he blushed.

They investigated. Sure enough. Scissors and a sharp knife loosened the—garment—and Mrs. Weinsmiller opened her eyes, smiled a dewy smile, then rolled off the cot and kissed the hem of the nurse's apron, and then kissed the astonished young lady's hand.

She could speak no English, but a German physician talked with her. Here is her story:

Healthful Climate, This.

I am nineteen. I have always been—well rounded. I came from Germany, May 25, and married my May 27. I weighed 200 then.

The wonderful air here—the life and all agreed with me. I found my weight increasing.

I have gained fifty pounds since I came. I weigh 250 now.

But I dared not confess. I wished to hide it. So I laced.

My waist has not grown an inch. I am still twenty-two inches.

So that thud—when Mrs. Weinsmiller went to sleep on the restaurant floor—has established Boston's reputation as a fashion and a health resort.

MRS. GUSTAV WEINSMILLER, who found Boston climate too healthful to reduce her avoirdupois.

Fund to Fence in Dangerous Wharf

The wharf on Albany street at the foot of Union Park street, because of the recent drowning of children, is to be fenced in. A fund, through popular subscription among residents of the district, with which to erect a six-foot fence, is being raised by Joseph E. Ferreira, who has led the agitation for better protection at the wharf.

SEEKS TO REFORM MEN IN COURT

Judge Sullivan Believes a Good Talk Does More Good Than Jail.

Make the courtroom a place of correction rather than the jail, is the plea which Judge Charles S. Sullivan of Charlestown sends forth to his brother judges everywhere, through the Sunday AMERICAN today.

Judge Sullivan has constantly brought before him this class of delinquents charged with drunkenness and petty crimes, in whom he declares he usually succeeds in finding the "human" element—the manhood.

"And once you are in touch with a man's true side, a courtroom appeal will go a long way toward re-starting him on the right road," says the judge.

"I believe in giving a man with a family, not two, but three or four chances before he is sent away," he continued. Drunkenness is rather a disease than a crime and it is the duty of the judge to treat is as such.

"Once I learn that a man is telling me the truth—is honest—I realize that there is a chance for him, and I endeavor to improve that chance for his benefit.

"Many people come into court for trivial who are what might be termed victims of circumstance. A court room talk with such persons is often far more efficacious in bringing them to their true sense of right and wrong than prison punishment would be.

"It is wrong for a judge to treat a prisoner who has come before him several times previously as one worthy of no interest. There is no correction by indifference. Once put a man on the defensive, gain his confidence, argue it out with him and you are on the right track."

Workman Killed in Three-Story Fall

The Boston police are investigating the death of William Clifford, fifty-two, of No. 32 Palmer street, Arlington, who fell three stories yesterday through an open window at No. 101 North street and was killed. Clifford was at work on the fourth story of the building occupied by J. J. Cunningham & Co. No one saw him fall.

WANTS OWN P. O. DISTRICT.

Malden merchants are soon to circulate petitions to the Postmaster-General asking that Malden be set apart as a separate postoffice from the Boston district. The Board of Trade of Malden declares that the city's service will be improved by becoming a separate office again.

ASK DEATH PROBE AT MATTAPOISETT

People Want All the Facts in Fate of Nathan Nelson, "Man of Mystery."

MATTAPOISETT, Aug. 23.—Leading Mattapoisett citizens today united in demanding a rigid investigation by the county authorities into the circumstances surrounding the finding of the body of Nathan B. Nelson, in the water off the town pier, August 14. Nelson was called Mattapoisett's "Man of Mystery," because he never referred to his past life and nothing of it was known to the people here.

Headed by Rev. C. Julian Tuthill, pastor of the Mattapoisett Congregational Church, the people today decided to ask District Attorney Albert F. Parker of Brockton to act.

"Death by drowning—accidental or suicide," was the finding of Medical Examiner Charles E. Morse of Wareham.

Nelson was last seen alive thirty hours before his mutilated body was found floating in the waters of the bay.

"It is too easy to commit crime in Mattapoisett," declared Rev. C. Julian Tuthill tonight. "Several fatalities with mysterious circumstances that have happened in Mattapoisett which really warranted investigation by the county authorities, were passed over lightly.

"Unless action is taken in this case within a week we shall call a mass meeting. It is known that Nelson lived in dread of some enemy. His past was never known.

Nelson came to Mattapoisett seven years ago. He was believed to have been a resident of Connecticut. He married Ella Hathaway of East Mattapoisett, who is quite well-to-do.

Lynn Man Held on Charge of Bigamy

Prisoner Brought in for Drunkenness Proves Man Wanted.

Becoming suspicious of her husband, Mrs. George A. Moody, wife of a shoebunker of Lynn, residing on Union street in that city, set the police at work and Moody was arrested on a charge of bigamy. The police charge he has two wives living, and that a third recently died.

It is charged that he married first twenty-four years ago in Salem, identity of the wife unknown; the second in Haverhill, and the third, a Miss Lizzie Carter of Lynn, in that city, December 5, 1906, claiming in the latter instance that he was a widower.

A warrant was issued for his arrest, but he could not be located. Yesterday a man giving the name of George A. Moody was brought into the police station on a charge of drunkenness, and it was found it was the same man, and the warrant was served. Moody is forty-five years.

Five Arrests After Fire in Hanover

Held Pending Investigation Into Railroad Blaze.

Edward McDonough, William O'Brien, Patrick Quinn, Frank McDonald and Peter Timm will be arraigned in the Hingham court tomorrow morning on a technical charge of drunkenness pending an investigation into the fire yesterday which destroyed the Phillips, Bates & Company grain elevator, the Hanover railway station and freight house, three freight cars and two small railway buildings, totalling a loss of $20,000.

The prisoners were rounded up during the day in various places. Quinn was captured in the woods and O'Brien in South Hanover. McDonald was found working in the rubber factory and was arrested on a warrant.

MEDFORD HOME LOOTED.

The home of Horace Guild at No. 57 College avenue, Medford, was ransacked by thieves last night and several hundred dollars worth of valuables secured. This is the third break in this vicinity within a week.

FEAR CAMBRIDGE GIRL IS PRISONER

General Alarm Sent Out for 16-Year-Old Alice Porter, Missing Since July 22.

A general alarm was sent out yesterday for sixteen-yearold Alice Porter of Cambridge, for whom grave fears are entertained. She has been unaccountably absent since July 22, from the home of her aunt, Miss Jennie Campbell of No. 238 Elm street, Cambridge. Miss Campbell fears her niece has been lured away and is being detained somewhere.

Age—Sixteen years.
Height—Five feet, four inches.
Weight—118 pounds.
Light hair and blue eyes.
Clothing—Light pink dress, blue hat, trimmed with white ribbon, lace and willow plume; black pumps, black stockings.
Jewelry—Signet ring and silver ring with chip diamond.

Miss Campbell said:

"I cannot imagine what could have become of my Alice. She has not been in good health recently. On the afternoon of July 22, she went out for her daily walk. She had $1 in her purse, and was dressed only for a walk.

"She could not have gone on the stage, for she has never cared about such things.

CURRENCY BILL OPPOSITION STOPS

Measure in Its Present Form Is Endorsed by the Administration.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Following the strong endorsement given the Glass-Owen currency bill by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan last night, opposition to the bill was broken today in the House Democratic caucus.

The bill as it stands was given distinctive administration approval. It will pass the House Democratic caucus and will pass the House without material change and without delay.

Leader Underwood said today that he thought the majority of the Democrats were ready now to vote on the bill in its entirety and that but little more time would be required for the consideration of amendments.

But for the farewell entertainment tonight to Francis Burton Harrison, the new Governor-General of the Philippines, the bill would be approved finally at a night session of the caucus.

Adjournment was taken until Monday with the vital agricultural currency amendments undecided. The Henry-Hagenbuchanan amendments providing for the issue of money on cotton, corn and wheat warehouse certificates will be rejected.

Chairman Owen of the Banking and Currency Committee is to substitute language clarifying provisions of the bill and making more definite the power of bankers to accept such certificates for discount and rediscount. By a vote of 30 to 20 the caucus today rejected an amendment by Harrison Miles increasing from 5 to 6 per cent dividends permitted to be paid on the stock of the regional reserve banks.

Protests have been received from bankers against the five per cent rate because their money can earn a higher rate of interest in other investments and interests rates are going up all over the world.

There was defeated also an amendment by Wingo, Ark., to prevent stockholding interests in more than one bank in a given regional district from controlling the selection of an elector from each of such banks to name directors of the regional reserve banks. Many amendments proposing changes in the phraseology of the bill were voted down.

No Petticoat with This X-Ray Skirt

Newport Naval Set Wonders Who Daring Woman Was at Ball.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 23.—All the men in the naval set—women, too—are eager to learn the name of the woman who went to the dance on the battleship Idaho in a very fancy skirt and no petticoat.

The lace in the skirt was of open and generous design, allowing more than casual glimpses of an shapely netter limbs as ever graced a ball.

The woman is a pronounced brunette, seemingly of Spanish origin. Her favorite dance is the Tango—judging by the abandon and skill with which she executed it.

John D. to Preach to Deaf Mutes

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 23.—If present plans are carried out, John D. Rockefeller, through an interpreter, tomorrow will preach a short sermon to delegates attending the national convention of the deaf here. Mrs. Elmer E. Bates, chairman of the local committee of entertainment, announced that Mr. Rockefeller had consented to the plan. The sermon will be delivered at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, of which the oil king is a member. Afterward he will shake hands with the deaf delegates.

Arbitration Treaty with Japan Expires

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The arbitration treaty with Japan expired by limitation today and a supplementary treaty proposed to extend its provisions remains locked upon by the Senate. Means of arbitrating the California and alien land questions or other disputes no longer exist, unless a special agreement should be made.

THE RULE OF THE BANDIT IN MEXICO

POWERS URGE HUERTA TO GIVE IN TO U. S.

troops forced an entrance into that town, according to a special dispatch from Mexico City.

According to the cable, Zapatista prisoners told the soldiers that Emiliano Zapata allow the commissioners with his own hand while in a frenzy of anger at having been forced to abandon the retreat which had served him in many times of stress during the two years he has been closely pursued. Zapata is said to be hiding in Guerrero.

A. Francis Du Pont, auditor of foreign affairs of the Du Pont De Namours Powder Company, a nephew of United States Senator Du Pont of Delaware, is in this country, after fleeing North in the steamer Mexico with 200 other American refugees.

Mr. Du Pont is filled with a sense of injustice at the foreign policy of the government at Washington. He was for six weeks amid the worst turbulence of the Mexican revolution and has come to believe that the only solution of the situation lies in one of these three courses by the United States.

Advocates Intervention.

1. The intermediate recognition by President Wilson of Huerta as the head of the present government; or

2. Sending a strong force of United States soldiers across border and stationing them in Mexico City to restore order; or

3. Taking over the French loan by American financiers, and the offer of New York banks to finance and aid the present Mexican government.

He said:

"Several Americans and myself on August 15 were dining at the Chapultepec, a restaurant overlooking the park which surrounds the castle.

Dined During Firing.

"Cannon and gun shots are as frequent in Mexico these days as the toot of auto horns in New York, so that when several volleys were fired on the Passeo del Reforma we did not consider it serious and continued with our dinner.

"Suddenly the proprietor of the cafe, his face pale, rushed into the room and shouted, 'Flee for your lives.'

"That was enough. We knew the insurrection had broken out again over our very heads.

"Our auto was drawn up outside the door and we all jumped into it pell mell, speeding to the business place of Derber Caribbe, one of our party.

"Arriving, we were more than ever convinced that the new outbreak was serious, because we found that over a hundred other Americans, with their wives and children, had gathered there. For a moment all was quiet. Naturally we turned to the American embassy for protection and information.

"What was our surprise when we telephoned them and could gain absolutely no information. We waited a half hour longer; the women were becoming hysterical. No news came, and the sound of shooting continued in the streets. Within two hours after we had heard the first shots, 200 of us were on our way to Vera Cruz. It was our only possible chance to save ourselves."

DECLARE HUERTA PLANS TO STAND FOR RE-ELECTION

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23.—The Huerta administration made another attempt to force the hand of the United States today.

The statement was made by a high official of the government that the proposals of President Wilson, made through Envoy Lind, demanded that Huerta resign his office and also withdraw his name from the election to be held in October.

"General Huerta has rejected both of these demands," said the official, who stands close to the presidential president. "The president will certainly be a candidate for re-election. He has no intention of withdrawing from the race."

The announcement that Huerta had decided to stand for re-election came in the same manner as did the declaration that Huerta had served an ultimatum on the United States demanding that his administration be recognized within 12 hours. Like that announcement this is subject to change.

Outside of these attempts to stir up President Wilson, Huerta is "marking time." There is no doubt that the administration is in a bad position financially, and this fact alone is expected to bring about a solution of the problem.

The permanent committee of Congress held a secret session tonight. It is rumored its members attempted to induce Huerta to comply with Washington's request.

Woman Burglar Arrested in Revere

A woman burglar, attired in an abbreviated bathing suit, was arrested by the Revere police last night, at the residence of Morris Bloom, No. 106 Hitchborn street. The woman, who gave the name of Zuzana Sabrenski, and said she had no home, was discovered prowling about the Bloom house about 10 o'clock. The police were notified by phone and found the woman in the pantry. She was covered with a horse blanket and taken to the police station.

BACK TO EVE IN ATTLEBORO? NO!

Police Head Proposes to Arrest Women to Check Immodest Dress Movement.

ATTLEBORO, Aug. 23.—Chief Charles E. Wilbur came out today with the first statement by any police head in New England of what a girl or woman should and should not wear to be properly dressed for the street.

The chief is rampant against what he calls the "Back-to-Eve" movement among the women.

"There is surely something wrong when a woman has to display her garters in getting on a street car," says the chief.

The "X-Ray" gown is barred, as a matter of course.

Any woman who is in doubt about the Chief's rules for modest dress has only to come to the police station, let him get a peek at her gown, and he will tell her right away if he thinks it is proper.

Sends Out Warning.

The Chief's crusade for dress reform began with the advent here of a young woman in a white suit, so diaphanous that Patrolman Arthur Gaffney and Lieutenant Albert Seera (both bachelors) knew hardly what to do. So they appealed to the Chief. The latter came out with a statement in the local paper to this effect:

> Any woman or girl immodestly dressed upon the street will be arrested and brought into court. All cases will be prosecuted.

The Chief says, in regard to his crusade and what women should wear:

Chief's Statement.

Unless there is a speedy change of styles in women's dress, there is hopeless degeneracy ahead of the next generation. The downward tendency has been very marked during the past few years. I am not posing as a moralist, mind you, but there is a limit beyond which people should not go. There is reason in all things. I want to protect the morals of the young in the stand that I have taken.

Whenever women so far forget their native modesty that they go about the streets only partly dressed it is time to call a halt. If this foolishness in dress is allowed to keep on it will be "back to Eve" in a few years, and civilization will have disappeared. The way some women dress is enough to invite open insult from men, and they should have nothing to say if men take them at their own valuation.

Cites Inconsistency.

For women to expose themselves in such bold and immodest apparel and then to appeal to the police for protection from insult is the height of inconsistency. I have no sympathy for that type of women. They are more to blame than the men whom they entice. What do they wear such things for if they are not openly seeking the company of men? If I should see such a woman on the streets of any city, I should immediately take her for an immoral woman and treat her accordingly.

The place for them is in the shunned district and not upon the public street flaunting their persons to the gaze of the coming generation.

The other day I witnessed a young woman in a light shirt board a car in Attleboro square. In order to get aboard she raised her skirts to her knees and then climbed into the car. Some young fellows were also watching her and one of them remarked how beautiful the scenery was in that particular locality that evening.

Some Parents to Blame.

It has got so that young men holler to one another across the streets and point when they see some particular freak of nature in a slit or X-ray skirt.

Such women are either looking for advertising or they are woefully indiscreet. In some cases parents of young girls are especially to blame. Women with more vanity than brains need to be shocked into a sense of propriety, and that is why I have given orders that all extreme cases of dress shall be brought in to me by the patrolmen, so that I may pass upon them. I mean to prosecute all extreme cases and I put a notice in the papers last Tuesday to that effect.

How Girls Must Dress in Attleboro to Satisfy Chief

SLEEVES—Sleeves must come down at least to the elbow.

WAISTS—No peek-a-boos. Waists must also be of sufficient fullness.

SLIT-SKIRTS—No skirt to be slit up more than six inches.

X-RAY—Skirts to be of opaque material or, if of gauzy material, sufficient petticoat and other underwear should be worn, so that the limbs cannot be distinguished when the wearer stands in a strong light.

HOBBLES—Skirts must not be so "hobbled" that the wearer cannot board a street car without making a display of hosiery.

HOSIERY—No transparent stockings, but sufficiently thick so the flesh is not visible through the mesh.

GIRLS VICTIMS OF COCAINE GANG

Lured Into Use of Drug and Held by Fear of Exposure in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 23.—Stories of a regular and organized system of cocaine traffic conducted by a trio of white slave cadets, who teach girls the lure of the drug and then hold them as slaves through fear of exposure, created a sensation here today and last night a number of the city's lodging house keepers planned to ask the police to put a stop to the traffic.

The cocaine trade, it is said, exists in the district about Snow, Chappel, Burrill and Westminster streets, and it was yesterday declared that one of the drug stores on Westminster street sold cocaine to certain initiated customers, during a regular and highly remunerative business.

Daring Holdups Stir Providence

Pretended Patient Takes Doctor's Money at Gun Point.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 23.—Two daring holdups last night, one at the point of a revolver, sent police reserves scouring the city in search of the holdup men, all thought to be connected with the "cocaine gang," whom the police allege are resorting to every unlawful method to secure money to obtain the drug.

Early last evening a man poorly dressed entered the office of Dr. Louis S. Frink at No. 897 Broad street. He said he had consumption and wished to be examined. Scarcely had the doctor started his test, when the man whipped out a revolver and demanded the doctors money. He obtained $3 and fled the building.

Shortly after two men held up an ice cream wagon driven by Gestona Malsitino, at the corner of Hamilton and Lexington streets. The screams of the driver frightened the men away.

Maine Forests Are Swept by Flames

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 23.—Forest fires were sweeping over several sections of Maine today. Seven fires in the vicinity of Bridgton came from the Western Promenade here, in Central Maine a fire was raging near Pettis Pond. Small fires were reported near Augusta. One encouraging fact was that few fires have started in the wild lands.

Sheriff Leads Hunt for Maine Wild Man

DURHAM, Me., Aug. 23.—A posse of citizens headed by Deputy Sheriff M. G. Stackpole started out today to hunt down the wild man who has been terrorizing this community for a week. They followed lighter tracks to Old Mill pond, where they found a small supply of milk, which the wild man is supposed to have got by milking cows in the fields.

Those who have seen the man say he is of medium height and rude except for a piece of burlap twisted about his waist. His hair is long and he has several weeks' growth of beard. Additional help has been asked of High Sheriff Fred E. Stevens of Auburn.

Man Hunt in Woods Near Bethel, Vt.

BETHEL, Vt., Aug. 23.—In response to a message from Deputy Sheriff Paul C. Titchum, of Rochester, Vt., a posse of men under the leadership of Constable Alvah Wheeler of this town, started a search for James Buckman, formerly an employe of the Eastern Talc Company of Rochester, who, following a serious charge, fled the town. He is believed to be hiding in the woods near here and his arrest is expected at any hour.

CASSIDY EXPOSES AMAZING SALE OF FILTHY CANDY TO CHILDREN OF SOUTH END

Wormy Confections Dealt Out at Washington Street Store. Shocking Conditions

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Mrs. P. J. Burke, an estimable matron, who lives at No. 7 Taylor street, South End, recently bought some decayed candy at the confectionery store of Zevitas Bros., at No. 1135 Washington street, corner of Dover.

Down at Nantasket Beach, a few hours later, she gave some of the candy to her nineteen-months'-old baby daughter Mary. She also gave some to the child of an acquaintance playing near.

Mrs. Burke ate some of the candy herself. It was the ordinary brand of nut caramels, wrapped in those paper. She found the candy wormy.

Later she called me on the telephone, and I went to her home and saw the candy. To make sure she had not bought an odd lot I bought some of it myself. I found Mrs. Burke had not overstated her experience.

Revolting Details.

I have often told you stories of candy containing shellac, soapstone and burnt umber, the stuff you paint your house with. You may have believed those stories exaggerated.

Believe me when I say that the conditions I found while investigating the way this Zevitas candy was manufactured are too vile, nauseating and revolting to ask you to read the details.

You will have to take my word for it that some of the things I saw at the Zevitas store, and the care of James Koufos at No. 819 Washington street are unfit to print.

I bought one-half pound of the nut caramels at the Zevitas store last Monday. The caramels were wormy. Four days later I bought some more. The second lot was worse than the first.

I sought some information from the clerk as to how often and how much of this candy was being sold to the children of the South End.

Conversation with Clerk.

Here's the conversation I had with him:

"Do you sell this kind of wormy stuff to children?"

"Sure. You can't keep worms out of nuts in the hot weather. Once in a while we see worms and then we throw the candy away."

"How can you see the worms through the paper?"

That was a staggerer for the clerk.

"Oh, we sell it all the time. You can't help it."

"Where's the proprietor?"

"He's down to the other store, No. 819 Washington street. They make the candy on the third floor and sell it from there."

I went down to No. 819 Washington street. A man was behind the counter who said he was the proprietor. Above the door was a sign: Zevitas Confectionery."

The proprietor gave his name as James Koufos. I learned he also got his candy from Zevitas upstairs over his store.

By this time he was growing suspicious. Probably he had received a phone message from the store at 1135 Washington street.

I called for one-half pound of chocolates. They were on display in a case, marked "Chocolate Montelidons." 30 cents a pound.

As Mr. Koufos now thoroughly suspicious was carefully choosing the candy piece by piece, I said, "Oh, daughter Mary. She also gave some to the child of an acquaintance playing near.

"Be careful. Give us the first you come across."

Mr. Koufos threw bar and nuts into the tray. Waving his hands he shouted angrily, "Get out of here."

I wanted to know why the proprietor was so unwilling to sell goods in a public store displayed for sale. I offered the money, the price of the candy. But the proprietor refused to sell to me.

He admitted he sold the bad stuff, and in his broken English refused all further information.

Returned With Inspector.

A few hours later I returned to the store at 819 Washington street. This time I was accompanied by Inspector Thomas Jordan of the sanitary department and Inspector of Provisions John J. Carr. Both were assigned by Dr. F. H. Mullowney of the Board of Health, with instructions to "go through the places from top to bottom."

Accustomed as I am to visiting filthy candy factories, I saw a little the worst place I was ever in.

On the third floor of No. 821 Washington street was the factory. Scattered about a filthy floor, littered with candy sweepings, lay unwashed utensils thick with grimy chocolate.

A mess of unused peanut candy with nefarious kinds of sugar candy lay in a sticky mass in a tray. "What are you going to do with that stuff, work it over into new batches of candy?" asked Inspector Jordan.

"Oh, no," Mr. Zevitas said, "we throw it away."

"Well, then, why don't you throw it away? What do you keep it around here two days for?"

Down in the cellar was a literal mass of filth. Underneath a dirty counter stood a dirty mass of chocolate three feet deep. It carried a few dead flies on the surface. Just like up stairs in the candy factory the glucose barrel had a few dead flies for good measure on its uncovered surface.

Condemned Nuts.

The broken earth floor was thick with grime and mire. An ice cream freezer stood dirty in the middle. Everywhere were evidence of filth and dirt.

Inspector Carr condemned the nuts and Inspector Jordan ordered an entire new floor built and proper sanitation installed.

Bottles of the synthetic flavors made of ether were on the shelves. The cool air dips were close by. There wasn't a screen in the place. Nothing but dirty brooms, mulk for use, and unsanitary refuse barrels of no apparent use. The fine escape in the rear was a mess of filth.

Koufos, the proprietor, was not so defiant the second visit. He was busy sorting out the worm-eaten caramels.

At the Washington and Dover street store Inspector Carr found the red tag of the Board of Health, bearing the word "Condemned," on a tray of caramels. One of the lady patrons of the store came up with a clerk and wanted to buy some.

"Too late," I told her.

Children Seeking Candy.

And all the while women and children were coming into the store trying to buy this rotten candy.

These are the kind of places I have been telling you about. Out in the front store are the clean white coated clerks. Shining metal rails and glass cases hold the goods temptingly displayed.

But down in the darkness of the cellar or in the filth-lined lofts where these candies are made swarm the disease laden flies. You see the white coats, the glass showcases. You don't see the grim and the filth of the factory.

It's there in the candy you buy. You get it all.

MRS. HATTIE C. MILES, one of the three women who will wage vigorous campaigns for election to the Progressive Town Committee of Framingham.

Women Fight for Town Committee

Framingham Progressives Neglected to Secure Filing of Nominations.

FRAMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Hattie C. Miles, Miss Mary E. Baisley and Miss Lillian Kehew are preparing to wage a vigorous campaign to be elected to the Progressive Town Committee, no matter whether the town committee authorities later decree that they are disqualified to serve in those offices.

On account of the men's neglect to file nomination papers, the names mentioned above are the only candidates whose names will appear on the primary ballots. There should have been four names, but Mrs. St. Clair, the fourth candidate, forgot to sign her acceptance of the nomination paper.

Sixteen men were candidates for the Progressive town committee. The four women came out for the nominations, too. Both tickets were certified at the local election office, and were forwarded to Progressive State headquarters in Boston.

It was taken for granted that State headquarters would file the papers at the State House. The women, with genuine persistence, went to the trouble of prodding the State committee, so that their ticket was filed. The men's ticket was not.

Brandegee Raps Wilson on Tariff

Declares President Will Be Turning Somersault by Approving Bill.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—"If the President of the United States approves this tariff bill after what he said in a message to Congress four months ago he will have turned as complete a somersault as his party," said Senator Brandegee today during a hot debate upon the declaration of Senator Simmons that the Democrats had in no way considered the policy of protection in drafting the bill.

Senator Brandegee said that Wilson had promised that no legitimate industry would be injured, and intimated that this promise would be kept only by maintaining a protective policy. He declared that the conditions which would follow the passage of the bill—which he dubbed "a collection of absurdities and inconsistencies"—would result in placing "a little wreath of lilies of the valley" upon the grave of the Democratic party three years hence.

Urge Dewey to Go to Perry Memorial

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 23.—Mayor Baker of Cleveland was expected in the city tonight to personally urge Admiral and Mrs. George Dewey to attend the Perry centennial, to be held in Cleveland September 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Admiral Dewey said: "I wrote Mayor Baker yesterday, declining the invitation. Because of my age and the ill health of Mrs. Dewey, I am declining invitations to all functions. If I was accepting any I would certainly go to Cleveland, where the battle of Manila Bay is to be reenacted, because of the unusual cordiality of the invitation.

HINT UNFAIRNESS IN ROCKLAND RAID

Hotel Thomas Untouched; Seizures in Hotel Pleasant, Pool and Lunch Rooms.

If Harry Thaw had never taken the milky way out of Matteawan Rockland people would still have plenty to talk about today in the case of the Hotel Thomas and what didn't happen to it.

Recently Police Chief Michael E. Stewart of Rockland raided the Hotel Pleasant, Ed. Smith's lunch room and "Jerry" Ryan's pool emporium.

These places are on Union square. So is the Hotel Thomas, Thomas J. Sullivan owner.

The Hotel Thomas was not raided and sundry Rockland folk are chattering.

The raid is credited, in the first place, to the investigations carried on by Rev. Mr. Pringle of the National Reform Bureau. The story goes that Mr. Pringle sent detectives, or "spotters," to Rockland to dig up evidence of illegal selling. The "spotters" put up at the Hotel Thomas.

Later, it is said, Mr. Pringle came to town and, from reports of his men, secured three search warrants from Judge Kelly of Abington District Court. The police, headed by Chief Stewart, raided the pool, the lunch room and the Hotel Pleasant, seizing "wet goods" in all three places.

New Name Is "Rum Square."

At the preliminary hearing Judge Kelly coined a name of his own for Union square. He termed it "Rum Square," which was all the rage until some wag thought up "Sullivan Square," in gentle reference to Proprietor Sullivan of the Thomas.

The moment the raids were made some body raised a shrill yell of "Discrimination."

The Good Government Association, which is looked to by many to promote justice and reform, hastened into print with a declaimer of any responsibility for the raid.

Proprietor Sullivan of the Hotel Thomas says:

If I had been breaking the law, I should expect to suffer. And I would have no kick coming, either. The fact that the spotters could get no evidence on this hotel leaves me out of it entirely. If those other fellows were foolish enough to sell to strangers, they were taking chances.

James A. Tirrell, a lawyer, secretary of the Rockland Good Government Association, said:

I am chairman of the political relations committee of the G. G. A., and it is our business to investigate and issue a report of the actual conditions as we find them. I assure you that the G. G. A. has absolutely nothing to do with the present state of affairs. Had we been behind the raids, it would have been "all or nothing" at that time.

We are not so sure but that there may be a tail tied to this affair, and future developments may prove interesting.

Barry Defends Chief.

Chairman Barry of the Selectmen, who is also editor of the Rockland Independent, calls it all a "squabble of rival liquor interests." He adds:

So far as the Selectmen are concerned, nothing has been done officially by the board toward the discipline or censure of the chief of police, nor is any such action contemplated so far as I know.

Police Chief Stewart says: "I don't care." His statement is:

I am not worrying at all over the talk that is going around town about me. I am unconscious of any discrimination on my part in making the raids that were ordered by the warrants.

Scouring East in $10,000 Bond Hunt

Believe Thief of Lee, Higginson & Co. Valuables Has Fled to West.

Up to a late hour last night neither the police nor Lee, Higginson & Company, had heard anything of the $10,000 worth of negotiable bonds stolen from the company Wednesday afternoon. Every bank and brokerage house in the East has been notified of the larceny. Special agents have been assigned to different brokerage houses to personally see any bonds that are offered for sale. The police are inclined to believe that the thief is a stranger in Boston and that after getting away with the bonds left for the West.

3 Women Hurt; Heels and Hobbles Blamed

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—Continuing its grudge against high-heeled boots and hobbles, the Pennsylvania Railroad has given publicity to three more accidents in which women were hurt descending steps at stations or alighting from trains.

Following an order instructing trainmen to pay particular attention to the width of skirt and height of heel of women passengers, every accident of this character is reported here. The Pennsylvania believes that when the women stop wearing hobbles and high heels the number of injuries will be reduced.

FOXBORO, Aug. 23.—Edward Aulis, fifty-four, of Central street, received serious injuries this afternoon when he was knocked down by an auto operated by Leander Jordan, also residing on Central street.

HULL STIRRED UP BY GRAFT CHARGE

Selectman Galiano Defies Anyone to Place Evidence Before District Attorney.

Up to the hour of going to press last night Captain Alfred A. Galiano's "defi" was still doing the "Come one, come all" act up and down Hull shore, with no takers.

He is a member of the Hull Board of Selectmen and has been for twenty odd years.

His "defi" is a challenge for any lady, gentleman or child to show graft in Hull and to trot right upto the District Attorney of Plymouth County with their charges, while they are about it.

According to members of Hull Civic Association, the challenge may be taken up. Galiano was moved to plain language at a recent special town meeting, called on request of the Summer residents, when the Civic Association had several articles to be voted on and every article was voted down by a majority of 129 to 42. He said:

Selectman's "Defi."

"I have been called a grafter. My associates have been called grafters. What I want to have done, now, is to have the District Attorney of Plymouth County given any concrete facts about graft in Hull and I'll lawyer of the town or anyone else, and let the District Attorney go after the grafters.

Plymouth County, especially along the South Shore, has become aroused over this talk of graft. Captain Galiano, and the other members of the Board of Selectmen, John Smith and James Jeffrey, are determined to make an issue of this talk and force somebody to action.

These three men, Smith, Galiano and Jeffrey, have been called the "Big Three" by their opponents. It has always been a sort of hard scrabble for these men, but somehow or other they always win out.

Hull has 576 registered voters. The last census gave it a population of 2,703. This increases nearly five times during the Summer months.

Reform Association.

An association has been formed called the Hull Civic Association, and at the first town meeting that it called it started the ball rolling so fast that from one end of the little town to the other, nothing is heard even in the hot weather, except "What is the matter with Hull?"

James Jeffrey, who is town clerk as well as a member of the Board of Selectmen when asked about the trouble was strong said:

"The Summer residents apparently object to the way the money is being spent, but they refuse to become voters here. They want to run the place by opinion. They oppose a new town hall because it may cost $50,000 or $100,000, yet at the special town meeting nine-tenths of the people who wanted to get into the premises couldn't get in. The tax rate of Hull is high this year, but it will be the low rate of every city and town in the State high, for the rate of the State and county taxes are higher than ever before."

W. S. Eaton's View.

W. S. Eaton, on the other hand, one of the leaders in the new association, is just as outspoken against the way the town affairs are handled. He said:

"They use steam roller methods at the special meetings. We don't get a fair hearing. No charge of graft, have been made as far as I know, although Captain Galiant said he had been called a grafter in the special town meeting."

Providence Girl New Tennis Star

Miss Miriam Phillips Defeats Experts While Visiting Montana.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 23.—About the same time when Maurice McLoughlin and the other stars from California were carefully sweeping the Eastern contestants off the tennis courts at Newport, in the national championships, an Eastern girl was defeating all comers in a Western championship contest.

Miss Miriam Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Phillips of East Providence, is the girl. She is visiting exJudge William T. Pigott at Helena, Montana, and was persuaded to enter the State tennis tournament there.

She defeated Marietta Greenfield in the finals, 6—4, 8—7 and 6—3.

Miss Phillips is a student at Rose Mary Hall, Greenwich, Ct., and won the junior tennis tournament two years ago at the Point Judith Country Club. She drives her own automobile and plays hockey like a streak of lightning on skates.

Police Make Girl Sew Up Slit Skirt

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 23.—So great a crowd followed a girl wearing the first slit skirt seen here, that the police were forced to rescue her. Then they promptly took her to a milliner's shop and had the slit sewed up.

MAN HURT IN RUNAWAY.

A horse hitched to a delivery wagon became frightened on Tremont street yesterday and bolted. Frank McMullen of No. 832 Parker street, Roxbury, was driving; another team. The two collided and he received contusions when he landed on the pavement.

CAREER OF POISON VICTIM LIKE BOOK

Novel Found Beside Dead Manicure Parallels Story of Her Life.

Near the couch on which Mrs. Marie Beaucher Le Maire was found dead under mysterious circumstances in her manicure parlor at Norwood ten days ago, was a novel telling a fiction story strikingly similar to the little French woman's own life.

The authorities, still baffled by the many puzzling features of the tragedy, expect that Professor Whitney's report of his chemical analysis of the woman's organs and the strange waste pills found scattered about her, will clear the mystery and perhaps show it to be a case of murder.

Meanwhile, the stacks of souvenir post cards, the letters and other effects have given a glimpse of the victim's life, but nothing with greater directness or emphasis than the novel which she had been reading shortly before her death.

Parallels Career.

This book deals with a plot that parallels in an amazing manner the pathetic career of the woman who tried so hard to support herself and two children. She took it out from John P. Welsh's newsstand the day before she died. "Mirabel's Island" is the title of the narrative of adventure, love and tragedy.

It tells of the experiences of a young Englishman shipwrecked on a lonely island off Scotland and meets a beautiful American girl.

She tells him her name is "Mirabel," and that she was married on the island by an irate father to prevent her from meeting them and as punishment for her indifference to a husband to whom she was married under duress, and whom she said she loathed.

The young man falls madly in love with the young woman, and she returns the admiration, but in secret. When he confesses his infatuation she tells him that it is impossible for them to wed, as she already has a legal husband. She tells him that in spite of their separating she must remember her vows and duty.

There follows a commendable test of self-control, of mutual adoration, of anguish due to the restrictions raised by the young woman, and then they promise to wait until the domestic tangle has been unravelled and she is freed.

Through exciting chapters the writer carries his readers until the middle of the brute whom Mirabel supposed to be her father, following the murder of her husband at the erstwhile father's directions.

It develops that Mirabel's real father was fabulously wealthy and that he left his estate to her, but that the brute believe father and the husband whom she was forced to wed had conspired to rob her. Mirabel marries David Lindsay, the shipwrecked Englishman.

Expect Report Soon.

Professor Whitney is expected to report to the Assistant Medical Examiner Pratt of Dedham early this week. Upon his finding will depend the action to be taken by the authorities. Chief Lavers of the Norwood police thinks Mrs. Le Maire died as the result of foul play. Dorrier Attorney Atherton is also at work into the case.

Of all the leading library it was said that Mrs. Le Maire liked stories of love and of domestic complications. She usually read a book in one night.

Shiloh Colony Is Ruled by Prophet From His Prison Cell

Followers in Boston Prepare For Cruise in West Indies

Inspection of Maine Town Fails to Substantiate Charges of Starvation.

While the Holy Ghost yacht Barracouta lies down in the harbor, and the yacht "Kingdom" is being outfitted near Portland, devout followers of Frank W. (Elijah) Sandford are holding daily prayer meetings in a Massachusetts Avenue hall, preparing for a proselyting tour to the West Indies and Africa.

The tour is undertaken upon the direction of Sandford himself—who is serving time in Atlanta prison for manslaughter. Sandford has a vision telling him to preach to the heathen in the West Indies and Africa. He communicated these orders to his followers, and they are planning briskly for the trip.

The recent death of a child—Hayden Jones—in the colony, which was at first attributed to starvation, has started a controversy over the Holy Ghost and Us faith. An attempt is under way to drive the colony out of Shiloh.

Shiloh is the little Maine town where the Holy Ghosters have their headquarters. M. A. Leger of No. 325 Union street, Lynn, a former member, is one of those who is fighting for the end of the colony.

"Shiloh is a plague spot," he says. "Men and women and children—all but the elders, are being actually starved to death. They become weak and enfeebled, easy prey to disease.

"Over a hundred children have died since the colony was formed—many from starvation.

"Three hundred persons are living there today, and there isn't enough food to go round. They spend their time praying for money."

Faithful to Sandford.

The Holy Ghosters have not wavered in fidelity to Sandford, although he is serving time for manslaughter. They draw an analogy between his fate and that of the Saviour, and they are confidently awaiting his return to them from prison.

Nobody has tried to usurp his job. The orders come from a prison cell and they are obeyed as implicitly as though the prophet were still ruling in his temple.

To get to Shiloh you drive over from Lisbon Falls. It is about three miles over an incredibly bad Maine road, full of hills and hollows. The Lisbon horses have to include many of the qualities of mountain mules to get along.

After a while you see Shiloh. You can't miss it. The temple stands upon the brow of a hill, white and spreading, with towers and minarets. It is impressive, until you approach, when it reminds you too much of the prevailing style of architecture at Revere Beach.

There is one thing that you notice as you approach Shiloh—the countryside loses it unkempt appearance and assumes the aspect of a French or English landscape, well kept, neat, pretty, with many vegetable gardens, plenty of flowers which are carefully cultivated, and attractive little farmhouses.

Whatever else the Holy Ghosters are they like things to be pleasant to look upon and they know how to till the soil.

There are more than forty farmhouses belonging to the Shiloh community, in which dwell as many families, differing in no way in appearance from other Maine farm families not under the ban.

Upon the wide slope in front of the Great House a score of men were cutting grass with wide sweeps of their scythes. The reporter drove past the tiny village postoffice. The cemetery and up the slope towards the Centre of the Religion.

As the carriage approached he saw that the doors to the structure were flashlighted like engravings out of the Bible, showing ancient temple portals.

TYPES OF SHILOH CHILDREN

The Rev. Mr. Tupper met the carriage and courteously inquired the business of the visit. It was soon explained.

"It is true that the Jones boy was called away," he said, "but it was not due to any neglect of ours. He was a twin, and the stronger of the two. He and his twin brother went swimming with several other children and that swim had no effect upon the weaker twin at all. The sick boy, whose sickness may or may not have resulted from his visit to the swimming pool, was treated by prayer and died as so many die under medical treatment."

"It is charged that he was weakened with starvation."

"That is not true," said Mr. Tupper. "The children are not starved. They fare as well as any children."

"The health officers say that some of them are rather flabby from a vegetable diet."

"We are not vegetarians," replied Mr. Tupper, rather surprised. "We eat whatever food the Lord provides. Our children eat meat as well as vegetables, they have milk and eggs and all that they need."

"It is charged that you only have six cows to provide milk for one hundred children."

"We have six or eight cows, but we do not rely upon them. We buy milk every day. You can look at the children who are passing. Do they seem to you ill nourished?"

Prim little boys and girls were moving about like chickens in a barn yard.

"What is the ordinary menu?"

"Why, it is that of all farmers. Some days we have one thing, some days another. We believe in variety of foods."

"How many people are there in your community?"

"Altogether about 500."

"Is that more or less than belonged when Mr. Sanford was here?"

"About the same."

"And how do you people live?"

"By work. We believe in work, but not for wages. We believe in a community of interests and all work for the common good."

"We have many hundreds of acres of land under cultivation. Most of our men till the soil. We have trades here in the big house."

He conducted the visitor about and showed him a millinery establishment. A dozen women were employed in making hats. The hats were not Parisian in style, but not unlike the display in the window of any village millinery shop, and the reporter was informed that many hats made in Shiloh are worn by the country folk in the vicinity of Lisbon and Lewiston, with profitable results for the Shiloh treasury.

There was also a shoemaker's shop which employed a dozen hands, a printer's shop where the Holy Ghost newspaper is published, dressmaking rooms and similar establishments.

"How does your community get its revenue since the work you do barely provides for the communal needs?" Mr. Tupper was asked.

"Ours is a simple faith. We believe that the Lord will take care of us. We know that he will provide what he needs.

IRISH UPHOLD U. S. RIGHTS IN CANAL DISPUTE

Chicago, Aug. 16 1913.

Hon William Randolph Hearst,
San Francisco.

The sentiment of the United Irish Societies toward your Chicago papers, the Examiner and the American, has always been one of appreciation. Often in the past we have admired your manlish advocacy of the cause of liberty, and the 15,000 Irish Americans at the companies of marching the Irish liberty monument, were [illegible] your message in favor of home rule for Ireland.

Tara Hill, once the symbol of the real United Irish nation, has been [illegible] of Parnell, Redmond and [illegible] and we believe it will [illegible] the home rule [illegible] in the [illegible] Examiner in the near future, a comprehensive account of our recent demonstration and emphasize its significance [illegible] party.

Signed JAMES T. CLARKE,
President United Irish Societies.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—One of the great Irish demonstrations in this country and one that is expected to have its impress on the British home rule bill, now [illegible] in Parliament, was the thirty-eighth annual picnic of the United Irish Societies of Chicago, held at Brand's Park, in this city. Fifteen thousand persons viewed the park during the day and evening, and more than $7,000 was realized for the home rule cause.

President James T. Clarke of the United Irish Societies read to the assembled throng a telegram from William Randolph Hearst favoring home rule, which was greeted with warm approval.

One of the important features of the day was the resolutions prepared in advance and passed by unanimous vote, opposing the British contention over the Panama Canal tolls.

The resolutions strongly uphold the view of the United States that this country having built the canal and paid for it without aid, should have the right of passing her own ships through it without paying tolls and that this action of the United States is entirely within its rights as a nation and not subject to the criticism of any other nation.

Praise for Redmond.

The work of John E. Redmond, the parliamentary leader, in forcing the home rule bill to the verge of final passage, also is highly commended.

The resolutions and part of the peroration are:

We congratulate the people of this Union upon the approaching completion of the Panama Canal. When our fortresses are bulked and our guns set against the sea, when its gates are freely open to our flag and its subjects to the rest of the world, it will mark the decline of British power that now controls every international waterway on the globe.

England rose to greatness because every ocean highway sent its cargoes beneath her guns. But when our colonial labor is added to a third of the world's coast line and all the shipping of the Western hemisphere will pay homage to our power and obedience to our command.

America Can Defeat Deceit.

With jubilee rejected and waterway complete America can stand in peace and safety, undeceived by the soft hand extended from the East by one only and the flaming sword of war flashing in the West from another.

We send unanimous greetings to John E. Redmond, his compatriots and his party, and we stand in wonderment before the miracle he and his followers have wrought. The oppressed have left the prison; the performer has left the stage; the hunted has left his hiding; the crushed has resumed his strength; and Ireland stands with sceptre of power and the word of command, and called by her Celtic antichrons, is giving law to the British Empire.

That as a part of the American we say to the nation, "We adhere to the advice of the father of our country, 'We should keep clear of entangling alliances,' and when favors are to be bestowed or friendships made it will be with men and people who mingled their blood with ours on American battlefields in freedom's cause."

Be It Resolved, That as a nation we must yield no prestige and abandon no military or marine right at the command or request of any foreign nation on earth.

Be It Resolved, That our hearts shall remain true, our purposes fixed and our support unwavering until an Irish parliament and an Irish government stand in the midst of Erin to make the laws for the Irish people as did the parliament on Tara in the ancient day.

Mr. Hearst's Message to Irish-Americans

"I Believe Sincerely in Home Rule for Ireland."

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—James T. Clarke, president of the United Irish Societies, has asked that a message from William Randolph Hearst be given to the Irish of America. The telegram was read by Mr. Clarke at a celebration of the Irish societies in Chicago, August 16. The celebration included a great demonstration in favor of home rule, and Mr. Hearst's message expressing his belief in the justice of the home rule principle was greeted enthusiastically. Mr. Clarke wired Mr Hearst asking that the message be given to the newspapers of the country for publication. The telegram follows:

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—As an American believing ardently in liberty and opportunity, in equal rights and equal justice, I believe sincerely in home rule for Ireland.

If I were an Englishman I would believe with even greater earnestness in home rule not only for Ireland, but for every individual integral part of the British Empire.

I would believe in genuine home rule and in general home rule. I would believe in home rule which would insure complete independence in local government for every State and in a general government which would afford every State equal rights, equal liberty and proportionate representation.

Such just and genuine home rule is the best and perhaps the only remedy for the threatened decadence and possible dissolution of the British Empire. The preservation and perpetuation of the British Empire in its full prestige and power are only to be found in a voluntary federation of independent States, not held together loosely by compulsion, but molded into an imperial entity by the natural and the national living forces of mutual confidence and interest.

If I were an Irishman I would take pride in this fight for home rule, first because of the benefit I was helping to confer upon my country and my own countrymen, and, secondly, because of the benefit which will inevitably ensue to all other sections of the British Empire and to other nations throughout the world. (Signed) WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

MOTHERS OF BACK BAY COMPLAINED ABOUT FERNCROFT

Raid Followed Charges That Students and Girls Were Being Corrupted.

"DUKE" SECURED EVIDENCE

The complaints which caused the sensational raid on the Ferncroft Inn, Middleton—one of the best known and most frequented resorts of automobilists in the east were made by Back Bay mothers of wealth, prominent college dames and many other representative people, it was learned yesterday.

A leader among the complainants was Dean LeBaron R. Briggs of Harvard University.

Other widely known men who objected to the inn were: Rev. Dr. Lodicot Peabody, head of the Groton school, and Dean Alfred E. Burton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It has become known that most of the complaints were made in writing to Rev F. H. Allen, president of the Watch and Ward society. Agents were sent out. It is said that they brought in detailed reports that young women from Boston and the North Shore summer colonies and students from Harvard, M. I. T., Phillips Andover, Groton and other schools were being demoralized by conditions at the famous inn.

Charged Evil Influence.

The evidence was handed to the State police and the raid resulted "The Ferncroft Inn held an evil enchantment for many young men and women," write one complainant. Dr. Peabody wrote of a mother who was told that her daughter and a Harvard student were constantly going to the inn. Many other young women and other students were numbered among the best patrons of the place, Dr. Peabody charged.

Spurred on by complaints from these representative people the Watch and Ward people went about gathering evidence in an unusual and thrilling manner. An agent, dressed as a gentleman of leisure and carrying cards engraved "Duke d' Annunzio," became a well known visitor at Ferncroft. He carried alleged credentials from an Italian consul which stated he was a real duke.

Mingled With Guests.

He arrived at the inn daily in a handsome limousine. The "Duke"—aided by two bogus mining engineers as confederates—mingled with the guests, turkey trotted, drank champagne with the young women who frequented the place, claims he played roulette and otherwise observed conditions from the "inside."

"I should worry," said the agent, in telling of his experiences in gathering evidence; "I hobnobbed with the best Back Bay people, and I fooled them completely."

In his own defence Harry E. Mansfield, proprietor of the inn, who was arrested in the raid for maintaining a gaming nuisance and violating the liquor laws, states that he allowed nothing but decorous conduct at the inn. He says he was unable to control the people once they were outside his property.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, JR., Edison's friend and the "mystery" boathouse at Gloucester where he has perfected his non-interferable radio impulse mechanism which may revolutionize methods of modern warfare. Here the house have been sent out the "phantom" boats which have so startled natives and mariners.

CAN NOW STEER AIRSHIPS, BOATS AND TORPEDOES BY WIRELESS

John Hays Hammond, Jr., Son of Famous Mining Engineer, Perfects Plans for Controlling Different Engines of War from the Shore—U. S. Government Closely Watching Every Experiment —Inventor Is Only Twenty-eight Years Old

AFTER a series of experiments lasting many months, John Hays Hammond, Jr., twenty-eight years old, son of the country's foremost millionaire mining expert, Yale graduate, and the electrical wizard, who has recently dumbfounded Gloucester fishermen with his "phantom" boats operated from the shore, has perfected a mechanism for operating a torpedo by non-interferable radio impulses from a land station, which is likely to be adopted by the Washington navy officials as the greatest invention yet known for coast defence protection.

By further application of the principles Young Hammond will be able to control airships and boats from land stations.

The importance of such power to control torpedoes under water and bomb dropping aircraft in time of war cannot be overestimated.

It is his great aim also to perfect a life boat which may be sent with no life savers aboard through the surf to stranded ships.

"There are different ways of looking at 'world peace,'" says the inventor. "If you can go to a nation and show them an article costing $2,000 that will put out of commission a battleship worth $12,000,000, you have done something to really discourage huge armaments."

The perfection of this marvelous wireless torpedo device necessitated many patents. It cost thousands of dollars and the labor of a corps of government mechanics, professors, and highly trained experts all at work under the Yale man's direction.

Greatest Secrecy.

So important does the Navy Department at Washington consider the discovery that the greatest secrecy has been enjoined upon the workers at the Hammond Laboratory at West Gloucester, and next month a board of army and navy officials will gather there to witness torpedo experiments by the new interference wireless method.

Hitherto it has been possible to operate a torpedo from shore at an eight-mile speed, but the control has always lacked the fundamental essential of immunity from interference by the enemy. That is, a hostile battleship against which a land-operated torpedo might be directed, could, with its own wireless radio impulses interfere and inactivate the torpedo land station.

Mr. Hammond's invention makes such interference a boomerang for an enemy, for with his new device, in case interference is attempted, the radio forces impelling the projectile instead of losing their efficiency are strengthened and the torpedo is drawn towards its target at an increased rate of speed.

Today the interest of military officials not only belonging to this country but all the great powers who have secret agents here, is centered about the young Gloucester inventor's device.

In the little bay near Gloucester's mouth, beneath the lofty [illegible] tower the twin finger-like wireless masts 360 feet high, which Mr. Hammond built at a cost of $20,000, [illegible] foot "house boat" recently for wireless control operations. [illegible] Inventor, standing at a mysterious keyboard in his laboratory, can at will put through its paces out in the bay three, four miles from [illegible] a 12 mile speed, turning, stopping, starting forward again or interfering [illegible] happens to be anyone.

"Phantom" Craft Afloat

The predecessor of this "home boat," the "Radio," a speedier type, was operated by wireless waves at a thirty-three-knot rate—an equal in speed to the fastest torpedo boats. When the navy experts heard of this and satisfied themselves as to its truth, they requested Mr. Hammond to continue his experiments with a slower type with the result that the Hammond "house boat" was refitted for the radio [illegible].

Strange tales are related by old Gloucester "salts" of the phantom craft without [illegible] which, late at night, as the [illegible] thinned into the harbor's mouth, [illegible] past at that turned [illegible] around and crossed their

WILSON SUPPORTS WAR ON TAMMANY

Administration to Back Mitchel and New York Fusion Ticket; Murphy Picks Slate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—John Purroy Mitchel, collector of the port, will take the fifth backing of the national administration in his candidacy for Mayor on the fusion ticket.

It was learned today that this decision was reached Friday night at a conference at Mr. Mitchel's home, at which William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury and one of the President's chief advisers, and Norman Hapgood, chairman of the fusion committee of 100, were present.

Following the receipt of the news in Washington that Charles F. Murphy had picked Edward E. McCall, chairman of the Public Service Commission, as the regular Democratic nominee, Secretary McAdoo came to New York and went over the entire municipal political situation with Collector Mitchel and Hapgood.

Secretary McAdoo is said to have brought word direct from the White House that the President will not attempt to disguise the fact that he is opposed to the Tammany nominees and favors the election of Mr. Mitchel and the entire fusion ticket.

President Wilson is said to have reached a decision after receiving a communication from his political adviser, Colonel E. M. House. Hapgood visited Colonel House at his Summer home at Beverly, Mass., ten days ago and explained to him the fight that is being waged in this city against Tammany Hall.

This action on the part of the National administration means the final break between the President and the New York organization.

The Democratic delegation committee met today and put through the slate selected by Charles F. Murphy. The Tammany City ticket will be

For Mayor—Edward E. McCall.

For Comptroller—Herman A. Metz.

For President of the Board of Aldermen—Joseph A. Goulden.

The platform, which was presented by James A. Foley, chairman of the committee on resolutions, calls for the segregation of vice, home rule, efficiency and economy.

Segregation of vice has never been attempted here.

Mrs. Mackay Is Back in Society

Weary of Seclusion, She Tries to Win Elite of Portland.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 23.—Mrs. Clarence Mackay, who took up a legal residence here, perhaps as a preliminary to suing her millionaire husband for divorce, has tired of her plans to remain in seclusion. Two months as a society recluse was enough for Mrs. Mackay.

She has now blossomed out in all her social radiancy and is doing her best to get acquainted with the elite of the city of Portland. Chilled by her retirement and distant manner following her arrival the society people of this city are "on the fence" so far as Mrs. Mackay is concerned. They don't know just how to take her.

"White Way" Club Newport's Latest

To Have Theatre, Tango, Tea and Most Everything Else.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Carl Berger, it is reported, is planning a special private Gay White Way for Newport's elect, to which only "members of our club" will be admitted.

There is to be a theatre in which will be produced for the privileged members some Broadway successes. There will be a restaurant with wine and song, and a large dancing floor for bunny hugs, turkey trots and the rest.

Just where the new club is to be situated is a dark secret.

Gov. Tener to Build at Salisbury Beach

Plans Erection of $10,000 Bungalow Near the Granite State Line.

SALISBURY, Aug. 23.—Governor John K. Tener of Pennsylvania says he would rather live in Massachusetts than anywhere except in his native State. To prove this assertion he has purchased a tract of land at Salisbury and will erect a $10,000 bungalow. Governor Tener has spent several Summers at the beach, but wants to own his own villa. Now that the controversy over the ownership of the beach property has been settled by the courts, he will start work at once on his new home.

The cottage will be located at the north end of the beach close to the New Hampshire line.

New Triplets for South Boston Home

Twins and Triplets Run In the MacLachlan Family.

For the second time in five years triplets were born the past week to Mr. and Mrs. James MacLachlan of No. 37 Barrett avenue, South Boston. The new triplets are girls. Their total weight is fifteen pounds. The last set of triplets, two boys and a girl, lived only a short time. There are three children living beside the triplets. Mrs. MacLachlan's great aunt had triplets twice, and another aunt had twins. Mrs. MacLachlan is the fifteenth child in a family of sixteen, and her husband is the tenth in a family of eleven.

"Castle Walk" Trot Is Newport Favorite

Society Danced It All Night at Jennings Ball.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—The "Castle Walk" has not only supplanted all other lively dances but almost all other forms of amusement at Newport. It was danced continuously from 11 o'clock till 3 in the morning at Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings' affair, and was resumed at Mrs. French Vanderbilt's.

Mrs. John Astor introduced a new fashion at the Jennings dance. She wore a short skirt, ten inches from the floor, which gave ease and grace to her dancing. Her costume was of white and black chiffon.

Francis C. Welch Champion "Biker"

Francis C. Welch of Hull—one of the best known trustees of large real estate holdings in Boston—has taken up bicycle riding as a pastime and for exercise.

Welch in the old days played third base for the "Boscons" and has kept up his interest in athletics. He is a big man, with good muscles.

He sometimes rides as far as Worcester on his bicycle coming back by train—or reverses the process—when he makes a day's outing.

CHURCH SPLIT BY RIVAL PREACHERS

MATTAPOISETT, Aug. 23.—The split over the question of who shall be minister has disrupted the Baptist Church here. Joseph Sykes, who has acted as preacher of the church, but who was given out of a meeting of the church Thursday night and stoned along the streets till he took refuge in a friend's house, says he will conduct the services tomorrow night.

The trouble started because members of the church, it is said, like Rev. Percy Caswell, pastor of the Baptist Church of Portsmouth, N. H., to take charge of the Thursday night meetings.

William T. Faunce of Boston owns the church, and pays the Rev. Percy Caswell his salary. Sykes is a distant relative of Mr. Faunce.

When Caswell's friends sought to have him take charge of some of the meetings, Sykes reported to Faunce, and Faunce came to the meeting last Thursday. Mr. Faunce rose and pointed at the Rev. Mr. Caswell.

"You're not a man of God, sir," he cried. "The pulpit is no place for you. You have no right to call yourself a Christian minister. The deacons of this church ought to be ashamed of themselves for allowing you to usurp a place in these meetings."

Instantly an uproar arose. Someone switched off the lights. Someone else got a hold on Sykes' collar, and Sykes went through the door headlong.

Thanks to Wilson from Peace Meeting

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Aug. 23.—The twentieth Universal Peace Congress held its closing sitting today. The delegates voted to hold the next Peace Congress at Vienna in 1914, and it was decided to take to that congress the invitation to hold the congress of 1915 at San Francisco.

The thanks of the congress were cabled to President Wilson for his attitude on peace.

The question of the fortification of the Panama Canal was resurrected today by Professor Slayton of Washington and Professor Slocum of Colorado, who secured the adhesion of the congress to a motion asking the United States government not to fortify the canal.

"Necklace Girl" in Double Wedding

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 23. At the First Congregational Church this afternoon two daughters of Mrs. James W. Hull of No. 40 Appleton avenue became brides.

Miss Helen Edwards Hull married Walter Cyrus Belknap of Plainfield and Miss Caroline Kellogg Hull married William Cornelius Korthaus Aster of Schenectady.

Mrs. Kellogg is the sixth bride of the fourteen necklace girls established in 1901. The girls bought a necklace, each girl wearing it in turn, until her marriage. The chain has fourteen gold beads with smaller ones in between. As soon as a girl becomes engaged her initials are inscribed on one of the big beads.

Boy Babies Only in Nahant Colony

Stork Seems to Have Run Out of Little Girls.

Down at Nahant there is much interest in the activities of a certain long-billed bird. People are wondering among other things, why he always picks his gift from the "boy baby" side of his hamper.

There have been a remarkable number of boys among the new arrivals on the North Shore this year. Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thomas of Washington are the latest to receive congratulations. Mrs. Robert Amory, Mrs. Joe Lovering, and Mrs. Philip Dalton are also learning to say "sonny." Mrs. Lovering, the youngest of the Baron sisters, is a sister of Mrs. Jack Greenleaf and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Benjamin of New York.

'Attleboro Cocktail' Is Used as Medicine

But Police Object to Ginger Beverage and a Crusade Begins.

ATTLEBORO, Aug. 23.—The "Attleboro Cocktail" is the latest "anti-Irrigation" wrinkle. It comes all mixed and bottled. It is supposed to be ordinary Jamaica ginger.

Its trail was made too public suspicions. Tests showed the contents to be 83 per cent. alcohol. Chief Wilbur objected when he found it was being taken as a beverage instead of medicine.

He seized forty-seven bottles from John F. McQuillen's shop. McQuillen and his wife were about to start on their vacation. Chief Wilbur let them go, but McQuillen must face the court on his return. Drug stores and groceries are to be watched to discourage the Jamaica ginger thirst.

Dignified Dances Get Tango Tips

His work in successfully operating the wireless telephone has attracted the interest of all the foremost experts upon the subject. Here is one of the experiments in radio-dynamics which has caused the already more or less surprise-immune corps of employes at the Hammond estate to gasp with amazement.

Several of the employes were in the laboratory.

"Now," remarked the youthful wizard, "I'll show you something."

"Lights on," Mr. Hammond suddenly cried. Instantly the room was flooded with rays from the surrounding bulbs.

"Lights off!" Off went the lights.

Nobody said a word.

John Hays Hammond Jr. has 600 patents on original inventions that he has perfected since he began his experimental work at West Gloucester a few years ago. For some time his experiments have been thought important enough for the government to watch closely and army electrical experts are among the regular workers at the Hammond laboratory. With these, [illegible] is a sergeant of the regular army and from time to time the Naval Board sends other officials to investigate different experiments undertaken by Mr. Hammond. Apparatus is also loaned from Washington and little by little the work has grown of such interest to the war board that today the daily work within the walls of the laboratory is as much a secret as would be maintained at any one of the different naval experiment stations.

However, Mr. Hammond still has [illegible] direction of all undertakings that go on here and is regarded [illegible] as an authority in electrical work.

Just now the wireless house boat is the chief object of interest to both Mr. Hammond and the government [illegible] fifty-foot craft [illegible] at high speed, [illegible] altogether safe and sane boat, equipped with wireless antennae, strung fore and aft to receive the radio pulsations which emanate from the station on shore. Below in the cabin of this little craft there is a small case, say the size of the cedar chest in the attic at home, where the Winter furs are packed. This contains the machinery.

Mr. Hammond's method of operating a wireless boat falls into the last class. It is as if a clock were fitted with a band which, if operated from a distance, could be made to stop on any hour or minute, the hand needing to pause, say two seconds, before the energy would be exerted.

Before Mr. Hammond invented a method for effectually preventing the antagonistic wireless waves from interfering with a from-the-land driven boat [illegible] would go a [illegible] the problem of [illegible]

Dr. Chase and Dennett Plan "Pure" Colony Will Follow Christ, Tolstoi and Emerson Mrs. Chase Will Aid "Soulmate" in Village

THREE PRINCIPLES IN REMARKABLE LOVE TRIANGLE

Hartley Dennett, Mrs. Chase and Dr. Chase.

Be pure according to the teachings of Christ.

Be peaceful according to the teachings of Tolstoi.

Be thoughtful according to the teachings of Emerson.

These are the three cardinal principals that induced Dr. H. Lincoln Chase, a Brookline physician for thirty years, to give up his lucrative practice and remove to East Alstead, N. H., where he intends to establish a community life with kindred souls and will prove that the above principals can be lived and make for happiness. Associated with him are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Chase, and Hartley Dennett. Already Mr. Dennett [illegible] as he can conveniently leave Brookline after selling his attractive home, No. 22 Kennard road.

Dr. Chase is an authority on the training of children and will give the results of his long experience to the town's people. He will be also in every civic improvement of the village and will aim to [illegible]

The presence of Mr. Dennett in his home has caused some comment, but they [illegible] the same views about life and both teach them by example and precept.

Dr. Chase has been identified with the board of health of Brookline for twenty-two years. He was the first to introduce [illegible] and was head of many improvements in the town where the best part of his life has been spent.

The community life that will be established may be the beginning of a project which may spread to other towns. Anyway, Dr. Chase hopes to interest other villages in his cardinal principles.

Three Cardinal Principles.

Dr. Chase said:

The three cardinal principles that will be emphasized there are purity, peacefulness and thoughtfulness. My wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Chase, Hartley Dennett and I will get together in our home life and follow out these principles.

Don't understand me as meaning by purity that this refers to the body [illegible] It will be made to [illegible] the body [illegible] included in that word purity. Christ in his teaching had no narrow idea of purity. We have in many ways limited that word in our application.

I want to have its meaning broadened. The country town offers special inducements for this. People there have more leisure. They are not distracted by so many things or conditions. Everything that we do will apply to the community. What will make the country town ideal? Why do we need to make people pure? But pure in no conventional sense.

Widest Meaning Intended.

In other words, we intended to give the widest meaning to this term. Everything that will improve the country town must come under this head of purity.

With the practice, that I hope to have there as a physician, I shall aim to show my interests in every individual and in every movement for the betterment of the community.

Then in our community life we shall discuss the teachings of Tolstoi. It is the teachings of nonresistance. This is what I mean. Be peaceful. The kingdom of God upon earth consists, according to Tolstoi, that all men should be at peace with one another. Never quarrel over the simplest thing. Peace among men is the greatest blessing that can exist upon this earth, and it is within reach of all men. This is the true religion. It is the extinction of enmity among mankind.

[illegible] shall weave Emerson into [illegible] Why Emerson, you say? Because he teaches us to talk. It is one of the hardest things to think.

The essays of this philosopher will be used.

The following will be our watchword. It is from Emerson's essay on character:

"[illegible] nothing will [illegible] satisfying as the [illegible] good understanding, which can subsist, after much exchange of good offices, between two virtuous [illegible] each of whom is sure of himself and sure of his friend."

That's what Emerson says.

May this not explain the relation of Mr. Dennett in our community who [illegible] with us in thinking the right thoughts that will help along this project at East Alstead. Emerson thinks well. We want to think rightly. There is no [illegible] destruction of one's plans. If you can look [illegible] upon certain movements you then have the gift of thinking.

We propose to learn how to think up in East Alstead.

Newport's Newest Beauty 6 Feet 2

At Least That's the Impression of Reporter Who Saw Her.

NEWPORT, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Mitchell Henry is Newport's newest and most amazing beauty.

Apparently Newport's taste has veered from the petite and dainty, for Mrs. Henry, according to report, stands six feet, two inches, in her stockings.

Not that any reporter was ever given the chance to measure. It is simply an estimate. Mrs. Henry is an English woman. On her last trip across she came with the Duke and Duchess of Manchester. They visited the Goulds at Lakewood. They are now visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt at Oakland Farm. Mrs. Henry was Marion Raegner, daughter of Louis C. Raegner. Mitchell Henry's father was a parliamentary luminary. He built Kylemore [illegible]

Plumbers Decide on Settlement Plan

Election Is Postponed to Monday's Meeting.

Jurisdiction settlements to prevent future friction in the various branches of the industry occupied so much time at yesterday's session of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters & Helpers' convention at Ford Hall that other resolutions and the election of officers had to be postponed until Monday morning.

Under the plan of settlement differences will be referred to a joint committee in each locality.

Mice May Reveal Cause of Cancer

Investigators at Harvard Sure Disease May Be Inherited.

That cancer may be inherited is the latest discovery made through a series of odd experiments with common house mice, at the Collis P. Huntington research laboratory, an adjunct of the Harvard Medical School, by investigators under the direction of Dr. E. E. Tyzzer.

Over three thousand mice have been employed in these experiments and Dr. Tyzzer's report to the cancer commission upon his discovery has caused much discussion in the medical world.

Dr. Tyzzer is as yet unwilling to make public the actual steps by which he has reached his initial discovery.

Urges Fire Device for Public Schools

Sounding of Gong Would Release Doors Dividing Building.

Fire hazard in public schools will be taken up for discussion by Frank Irving Cooper, appointed by Governor Foss as the State delegate to the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene when the convention opens at Buffalo, N. Y., tomorrow morning. President Wilson will attend the opening exercises. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, will serve as the presiding officer.

Dr. Eliot Returns from Mt. Desert

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot and Mrs. Eliot have returned from their Summer home at Southwest Harbor, Mt. Desert Island, Me., and yesterday appeared strolling down Summer street. They were on their way to the South Station where they took the train for a week-end visit out of town. Both appeared in the best of health. Dr. Eliot has a deep sun tan.

Rush Work on Annex to Brighton School

An annex to the Brighton School, which will contain additional facilities, is being erected and the work is being pushed in the hope that the new rooms will be ready for occupancy when the fall term opens.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Here in White Linen Gown

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt passed through Boston on their return from the Marshfield Fair, bound for Newport. While here, they registered at the Copley-Plaza. Mrs. Vanderbilt attracted considerable attention in a gown of white embroidered linen with a dark blue silk coat. Her hat was a smart tan straw, trimmed with blue wings.

AT SUMMER CHURCHES.

Two well known Boston clergymen will preach at Summer churches today. The Rev. Thomas Van Ness of the Second Unitarian Church, Brookline, will preach in the morning at the Union Church, Prospect Harbor, where he has his Summer home, and the Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, of the First Church, Quincy, will preach at the Unitarian Church, Bar Harbor.

SPELLBINDERS TO STIR PENINSULA

Lively Contests Ahead in South Boston Promise Plenty of Excitement.

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

"Dodgers," not of the African kind but [illegible] legislative variety, will be the [illegible] topic of spellbinders in several of the South Boston wards during the canvass for votes in the House fight next month. "The Purchasing Power of a Dollar" will be another subject dwelt upon.

Several soap boxes used in previous campaigns were broken up for kindling wood and are to be supplanted this year by automobiles for speaking purposes. Some of the spellbinders will use the [illegible] and incidentally bespatter their contestants with verbiage of the fire and brimstone variety.

Street corners in Wards 13, 14 and 15 are to be sprinkled to keep down the dust, so that it will not interfere with the larynxes of the orators who are to be posted there to exercise their lungs on any subject that runs through the dark recesses of the brains of their owners.

Candidates to Speak.

One of the House candidates in Ward 15 scheduled to discuss the "Dodger" question is former Representative Michael J. Reidy. He is mentally equipped with facts and figures about dodgers and intends to bring them forcibly to the minds of his constituents. Representative Lydon of the ward, editor of a local publication, WILL be heard.

Up in Ward 14, Tommy Casey is whooping it up for his House candidacy. So is Lawyer Cronin. "Con" Shea, who used to be heard on questions affecting Ward 17 politics, is now a resident of the ward. He is a spellbinder and expects to voice his sentiments on several matters. Candidate Casey feels confident Shea will endorse his candidacy and has made arrangements to have him occupy the platform in the hall of the new Ward 14 municipal building.

After Third Term.

And then Councillor Edward Collins, a son of the district, is up for renomination and feels satisfied that he will get a third term. His opponents are Representative William J. Sullivan of Ward 13, Councilman Timothy J. Buckley of Charlestown and former Alderman Frank J. O'Toole. The latter is a vote getter, has the support of leaders all over the city and is regarded by Collins as a formidable candidate. Senator Timilty is said to be backing O'Toole.

Councillor Collins stands strong with the Grand Army of the Republic because of his activity in caring for the [illegible] at the recent reunion of the Blue and Gray forces at Gettysburg.

Councilman Buckley expects the backing of Mayor Fitzgerald. Buckley stands strong with Mayor Barry of Cambridge and is confident of carrying the Cambridge wards of the councillor district. Present indications point to a close vote for the three candidates. Roxbury, the home of O'Toole, will be the battle ground.

Reverse $406,175 Fessenden Verdict

After a court battle lasting for several years, Professor Reginald A. Fessenden, the inventor of many electrical devices, yesterday heard Judges Brown and [illegible] in the United States Court of Appeals reverse the $406,175 verdict awarded the inventor by a United States District Court jury against the National Electric Signaling Company and others. Judge Aldrich dissented from the opinion of the other two judges.

Marshfield Church 175 Years Old Today

Two Anniversary Services and Exhibit on Celebration Program.

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 23.—Two anniversary services, luncheon to delegates and friends and an historical exhibit at the home of Miss Sarah E. Leonard, will be included in the celebration today of the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Second Congregational Society (Unitarian) of this town. Former pastors and parishioners are here for the anniversary.

At morning service at 11 a. m. there will be prayer by Rev. Ernest A. Thomas, and sermon by Rev. John W. Day of St. Louis. At the afternoon service Israel H. Hatch will deliver an historical address. There will be brief remarks by former pastors. Miss Alice Sampson will be soloist.

Rev. J. D. Colbert of Wakefield Dead

Rev. John D. Colbert of St. Joseph's Catholic Church on Harvard street, Wakefield, died yesterday. He was born in Boston in 1855. He was ordained by Cardinal Gibbons on December 21, 1878. He held pastorates in Winchester, Plymouth, Lowell, East Cambridge, Roxbury, Hopkinton, South Boston and Wakefield.

Governor Orders Charities Probe

Economy Board to Investigate the Charges Against Institutions.

Governor Foss has directed the State Board of Economy and Efficiency to make a thorough investigation of the intimations of graft and charges of extravagance and mismanagement, made by the State Board of Charity as [illegible] part of inspections of 157 charitable institutions in the State.

"It is high time to put an end to such conditions," said the Governor last night, "and I shall do all in my power in that direction. Conditions in many of the charitable institutions of the State, in the [illegible] for the insane [illegible] have been deplorable for years. I have made several efforts to improve conditions, but [illegible] powerful county political machines have been able to prevent the carrying out of my plans."

Teachers Gather for Salem Meeting

[illegible] from all parts of the country will journey to Salem to attend the congress known as the Institute for Commercial Teachers. The congress will be opened tomorrow, August 25, at the State Normal School, and will remain in session to Friday, August 29. The meeting is one of national importance, and much enthusiasm is shown locally in the congress as hundreds of teachers are expected to be present.

BOARD AGAIN TO SEEK 'L' PEACE

Arbiters to Meet Tomorrow, After Company and Men Failed to Reach Agreement.

The following statement was given out yesterday by James J. Storrow, chairman of the arbitration board on the differences between the L road and its employes:

Representatives of the Elevated Railway and the Carmen's Union met at the State House this afternoon for a further conference looking to a settlement of their differences.

The representatives of the two sides took up the question of a possible settlement without arbitration. After about an hour's discussion it was agreed by representatives of both the company and the Carmen's Union that it would be necessary for the arbitration proceedings to go on. Chairman Storrow was asked to call a formal meeting of the arbitrators. He accordingly announced a meeting of the arbitrators for Monday at 10:30 in the State House, room 130.

After two days of private conference, at which the two sides failed to reach a satisfactory agreement a hearing has been set for Monday before the special arbitration board.

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

(From Feminine World.)

The use of creams on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cuticle. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, overred, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, clearing in the morning with soap and water. It takes a week or so to complete the transformation.

The ideal wrinkle eradicator is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results.—Adv.

Mrs. Etter, "Healer," to Be Tried Tomorrow, Says Sick Cure Themselves

AMERICAN REPORTER SEES MANIFESTATIONS AT SOUTH FRAMINGHAM

New England Watching Contest Between Police Chief and Devotees of New Cult

If you ask Mrs. Maria Beulah Woodworth Etter how she accomplishes the "cures" which have set South Framingham by the ears, she answers, "I don't. The sick do that themselves, by faith."

Nevertheless Chief William M. Holbrook has called Mrs. Etter and her assistants into court and arrested them with obtaining money under false pretenses, because they are conducting a "revival" at Montwait Chautauqua grounds in South Framingham, where the sick come to be made well. New England is watching with interest the developments in the fight between a New England chief of police, hard-headed and practical, and the devotees of one of the strangest of the new cults which has appeared in this country of isms and dogmas.

The case against Mrs. Etter, the Rev. C. B. Fockler, and Earl Clarke, comes up tomorrow. It will be heard in the First District Court at South Framingham. Meanwhile, the three are under $300 bail, and Framingham is all stirred up over the strange wailings that come from the Chautauqua grounds.

Process of Treatment.

Here is Mrs. Etter's process of treating a patient:

1—The patient comes to the platform at one of the new cult's meetings. The cult calls itself the Pentecostal Apostolic Faith Movement, by the way.

2—The patient reclines in an easy chair.

3—Mrs. Etter begins to gently stroke the patient's back and arms and neck.

4—Musical instruments of all sorts begin to play.

5—Mrs. Etter's assistants, twenty or thirty of them, begin to dance about the patient's chair. They a—kick.

e—lean over the patient and yell.

6—The patient's legs and arms begin to twitch.

7—The patient begins to kick.

9—The patient begins to sing.

10—The patient lapses into unconsciousness.

11—The patient lies in a trance.

Mrs. Etter and her assistants are kept busy treating sufferers. After the treatment, collections are taken up, magazines and pamphlets are sold, and then more treatments are given.

Besides those "psychical ecstacies," the cult holds two or three meetings a day. At these meetings the worshippers stand erect, then begin to sing, then to about, then to yell. Then they pray, then they sway on their feet, then clap their hands, then chatter, then shake their fists, then wiggle their lower jaws in a grotesque fashion, then get red in the face, then begin to look dazed, and finally collapse in a trance and lie for minutes or hours just as they fell.

Chief Not Alarmed.

The chief, Mr. Holbrook, was not alarmed when, after he had summoned the cult-heads into court, one of them said:

"An Ohio chief of police did this. Three months afterward he became insane, and he is still mad."

The chief has an idea that the "cures" are really hypnotism. But Mrs. Etter says:

"If the cures through me of the lame and halt, the deaf and dumb and the blind were effected by hypnotism, do you think for a moment I would permit my husband to lie on his bed a helpless cripple?"

Thousands have been attracted to Montwait by remarkable stories of wonder-cures effected by Mrs. Etter and her assistants.

From almost every State in the Union, even from such distant points as Los Angeles and New Orleans, there have come to Montwait all creeds to attend the meetings conducted by Mrs. Etter. Confessing that she is nine years, although she looks [illegible] Mrs. Etter, who has a face unusually pale, and eyes [illegible] black and snapping fire, is of [illegible]. For thirty-five years she has been a revivalist.

The sun was not high above the horizon when a photographer for the AMERICAN started for the camp grounds. From the distance, aided by the intermittent [illegible] of song and [illegible]

Hurrying up Hill.

The first noise one comes to is that occupied by the Etters and Mrs. Etter's [illegible] noted here.

[illegible] there were all were hurrying up [illegible] yards away.

[illegible] were young boys and girls, [illegible] and maidens, men and women of all [illegible] including patriarchs far past [illegible] the top of the hill.

In the small auditorium, were [illegible] from those of tender [illegible] and feeble, taking part in the [illegible].

[illegible] faces to the east, eyes [illegible] by their emotions and [illegible] singly oblivious to everything. [illegible] took no notice of the visitors. On [illegible] faces of all there was a visionary [illegible]. Hymns were sung and hosannas [illegible].

All this by those yet able to be about. Others, overcome by their emotions, were [illegible] on the floor, apparently unmindful [illegible] other worshippers save when some one would cover the prostrate form of a woman, with a coat or shawl.

For some this exaltation continued for hours, for others but a short time. But [illegible] declared, when they awakened, it was in the correct word, that they had suffered no ill effects from their trance-like condition, and had enjoyed a vision of the Christ.

The Healing Meeting.

Then came the healing meeting in the main auditorium. This was preceded by testimonials by many of the 400 present and the asking of prayers for relatives and friends. Just as sure as the latter had professed to be in the faith, so would they be cured of all bodily ills. One of the speakers assured the gathering:

"This meeting, which began at ten in the morning, showed but little animation until Mrs. Etter and her aides arrived. She, however, showed the great vital force and magnetism she possesses by the way the tenor of the meeting changed when she mounted the platform. Mrs. Etter, Fockler and Clarke, after enthusing all by their exhortations, called for testimonials, and for those seeking the Holy Ghost to come forward.

"Men and women obeyed the commands. They sat in chairs on the platform. Sister" Etter and "Brothers" Fockler and Clarke worked over them.

"Mrs. Etter encourages them with her hands on their arms or on their head or the back of the neck. And one of the participants declared with the passage from Mrs. Etter's hands that she experienced a glowing sensation up and down her spine.

"'It is,' she declared, 'that wasn't Mrs. Etter's hypnotic influence; it was the spirit of the Holy Ghost entering my body through Mrs. Etter's arms.'"

One Girl's Experience.

Happiness reigns supreme at the grounds. But none is in such a joyful mood as Miss Jessie Van Duzen of Knoxville, Pa. She is twenty-six years old and was seriously ill two years ago. This is her story:

"Two years ago at my home in Knoxville, I was thrown from my father's carriage in a runaway. I was badly injured and suffered from pressure of the spine. This resulted in my losing almost entire control of my right leg. I could scarcely use it in walking. Different doctors and surgeons treated me, but I showed no improvement and was practically an invalid. When I heard of Mrs. Etter, I decided to come here. I was very weak. But I had faith, and, when I went to the platform and laid hands on Mrs. Etter and she prayed with me, a cracking sensation went down my spine. I became helpless and soon was lay-down on the floor.

"Two hours later I awoke and arose of my own volition. Can you imagine my surprise and joy when I found my pain was gone and the lameness had disappeared?

"The night meeting, which is the largest attended of all, is carried out on lines similar to the gathering at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Etter Talks.

Said Mrs. Etter to the AMERICAN:

"Nothing is done here but what is promised in the Bible. We do not use mesmerism or animal power, but simply the Holy Spirit, by which the body is delivered from disease and restored to health. The Bible proves that today people enjoy this blessing of divine healing which is a redemption blessing.

"It is not my contention that I heal people. I know that they are healed at the meetings I conduct. The vision I received in the long ago caused me that the Lord had set his seal on me. And I then told the Lord I would go about saving souls and this I have done ever since."

Democrats to Meet at Ward 23 Outing

Cleveland Club to Hear Leaders in State and City.

Democrats from all sections of the State will attend the "home-coming" of the Cleveland Club of Ward 23, Saturday, at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury. Chairman Patrick J. Brady of the Ward 23 Democratic Committee heads the committee of arrangements.

On the list of speakers are Mayor Fitzgerald, Lieutenant-Governor David I. Walsh, James Phelan, Representative Conway of Ward 23, former Representative John F. Hoar, head of the Ward 24 Jefferson Club; former Congressman John A. Kolber, James J. Storrow, John R. Murphy and Congressman Peters.

Will Undergo Minor Repairs Before Trial Trips at Rockland.

Preparatory to her standardization trials over the Rockland course, the Rivadavia, Argentine dreadnaught, will anchor in Nantasket Roads tomorrow to undergo minor repairs and to coal. The trials will be in the first week in September.

The Rivadavia experienced several difficulties while steaming in the Brooklyn navy yard, where she had her hull painted, after her launching at the Fore River Shipbuilding Works in Quincy. Captain Joseph I. Kemp of Brookline, who is connected with the Fore River Company, is in command. The trials will be in charge of R. O. Wellington.

CAT IS A VEGETARIAN.

BANGOR, Me., Aug. 23.—The tale of a cat in Augusta which "occasionally" eats cucumbers is outdistanced by the story of Poco-bontas, a big tomcat owned by Miss Marjorie R. Jordan of Vinalhaven. Pocobontas is a strict vegetarian. He not only devours cucumbers, potatoes, string beans, carrots, beets, turnips and parsnips, but he pulls them from the vine himself and lugs them to the kitchen to be cooked for him.

ORANGEMEN ARE REPORTED AFTER CONSTABULARY

"Bobbies" Have Got Themselves Into Peck of Trouble by Actions in Londonderry.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

[illegible] of well-drilled men [illegible] known as the Royal Irish Constabulary [illegible] particularly designed [illegible] powers [illegible] out of [illegible] the founder [illegible] Sir Robert Peel [illegible] has got itself [illegible] when [illegible] of trouble [illegible] Orangemen [illegible], no less.

[illegible] were [illegible] in London-derry [illegible] riots as the police of any American city would take care of in half an hour and the whole world was told [illegible] that the Nationalists and the Carsonites were engaged in a mighty combat. In fact, some of the dispatches were lurid enough to make the world stop its activities to read the news. It really looked as if the Carson civil war had begun.

A recital of the facts makes simple reading. The police got orders to clear the streets of a disorderly crowd, and in doing so practiced considerable head-whacking. But a serious blunder was made by the officer in charge of the [illegible] were hit, at least so the Carsonites say. And now the Royal Irish [illegible] hitherto the Orangeman's [illegible] pet and brightest glory are being execrated every evening in the lodge rooms of Sandy Row. Such an awakening to rank disloyalty has not occurred in Ireland since King Billy first raised his standard by the Boyne. The idea of [illegible] in Ulster and the heads of the [illegible] and patriotic" getting struck by police clubs!

Grim Fact There.

Yet the grim fact is there. The bobbies did turn out to defend law and order, and now King Carson and his men shriek for a parliamentary inquiry into the conduct of the police.

When the trouble broke out the constabulary authorities drafted extra police into Londonderry. The Orangemen say that the big battalions of reinforcements were made up of men who are all Nationalists. [illegible] when they got orders to charge they went at the job with a [illegible] that was altogether too [illegible]. Batons in hand, they chased the [illegible] up hill and down dale [illegible] and alleys, over roofs and in and out of back yards and even [illegible] counters. Wherever they caught up with the fleeing [illegible] there was something doing, with the soft end of the batons. Then came peace, and law and order sat again enthroned.

Now, there is [illegible]. The City Council of Derry, largely composed of [illegible] because they [illegible] refuses to pay for the extra police.

Accuses Police

The Council goes further and accuses the imported police of having Nationalist sympathies, that they are Home Rulers, in fact, and in their riot work at Londonderry they were actuated by their desire to stand well with the future [illegible] Parliament.

The times are changed indeed in Ireland when the Royal Irish are so accused.

A new order of things has come to [illegible] in Dublin Castle [illegible] bureau [illegible] have begun to realize that there is some writing on the wall.

In future conflicts with riotous assemblies, whether in Belfast or elsewhere, the rioters will be made to understand that in the preservation of peace and enforcement of the laws, whether those laws be enacted at Westminster or in Dublin, the policeman's baton "must know no brother."

There probably will be a parliamentary inquiry into the Londonderry incident, but it looks now as if Premier John Redmond will be the man to appoint the commission.

The Irish police force is a splendid body of well set up, [illegible] drilled men. The force is 12,000 strong, a ridiculous force for a country the size and the peacefulness of Ireland.

It was never meant to be a police force as the title goes in all other civilized countries. It was, from the beginning, used as a political engine by Dublin Castle to terrorize the great majority of the people in their legitimate aspirations to obtain national self-government.

Obnoxious Advanced.

Promotion within its ranks came only to the man who made himself conspicuously obnoxious to the people and their leaders. And the slightest suspicion in the mind of a superior officer that a subordinate was at all sympathetic with the masses of Ireland's population made that subordinate a marked man. He never went a step higher.

This regime produced from out of the membership of the Royal Irish Constabulary as bad a race of petty tyrants as ever cursed the life of any people who were supposed to [illegible] government.

[illegible] great [illegible] now [illegible] triumphant ending [illegible] Mr. Parnell could not open his mouth [illegible] a word [illegible] that he was [illegible] writers [illegible] almost directly into Mr. Parnell's [illegible] the extension of from 200 to 300 [illegible] whose chief [illegible] know that if he had only [illegible] his [illegible] promotion was as certain as the rising of the sun.

Most Crimeless Country.

Ireland is today the most crimeless country in Europe. At session after session of the Superior Criminal Court or assizes the judges are [illegible] presented with a pair of white gloves by the [illegible] signifying the absence of serious crime in the [illegible].

[illegible] Royal Irish Constabulary [illegible] larger [illegible] police force of New York city [illegible] London is [illegible] new order of things that is to come.

[illegible] "vested interests" of the army of police [illegible] that will be created by the disbandment, is a problem with which the new Irish parliament will fortunately not have to deal. It must be taken care of by the imperial parliament at Westminster.

Nymphs Gambol Under Sharon's Autumn Trees

Florence Noyes to Open Dancing School

Forms Clad in Diaphanous Robes May Sport Beneath Fall Foliage.

Rhythmic dancing performed beneath the Autumn trees by fair nymphs clad in Grecian robes or other filmy and diaphanous material which renders the motions of the body less impeded, may be witnessed soon at the Sharon School of Florence Fleming Noyes, the world-famed exponent of Terpsichorean culture—for though the Noyes School is supposed to open in the Spring, so widespread has been the appeal to the Sharon teacher for Fall classes that the early opening is now being seriously considered.

It was Rodin, the great French sculptor, who declared that Florence Noyes possessed the most graceful figure of all women.

Recently her dancing has captured the hearts of Newport, and her appearance at the opening of Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James' sunken gardens caused a sensation.

Commodore and Mrs. James had planned "The Masque of the Blue Garden." [illegible] were seated in an improvised stadium looking over a stretch of [illegible] pools and fountains with a beautiful expanse of lawn to the wooded vista beyond.

[illegible] were sprites and nymphs and [illegible] and they danced in the rays of [illegible]. Mrs. Noyes was Amphitrite. She was [illegible] the throne [illegible] in a huge sea-shell on the shoulders of six tritons.

They lowered the shell, and there, nestling in its pink centre, was the woman [illegible] Sea Goddess. She rose and loosened [illegible] away from her shoulders. Before her lay a shallow pool [illegible] played from a score of [illegible].

[illegible] into the pool and [illegible] the splashing streams from the fountain [illegible] a beautiful Grecian dance [illegible] toward the audience.

Between the shallow pool and [illegible] lay a deeper basin into this Mrs. Noyes dived—and disappeared. The effect was miraculous.

Mr. and Mrs. James were in fancy costume, she as a noble Italian woman of the sixteenth century and he as another Cosimo de Medici. After [illegible] the guests gave rein to [illegible] light in turkey trot.

Framingham Papers of Democrats Lost

Therefore Candidates of That Party for Representative Not on Ballots.

FRAMINGHAM, Aug. 23.—Political circles are stirred by the discovery today that the names of the Democratic candidates for Representative will not appear on the official ballots owing to someone's neglect to file the necessary papers.

The names of Mark Annis and John J. Slattery are the Democratic nominees, who will be omitted.

Edwin G. Gasvin, chairman of the Democratic town committee, says he received the papers for both men, but handed them to Morris Fitzgerald, who put them in his safe. Fitzgerald says he gave them to William H. Walsh to take to Boston for filing. Walsh says he gave them to Secretary O'Leary of the State Committee. O'Leary insists that he filed with Secretary of State Donahue all the papers he received from Framingham. No trace of the Slattery-Annis papers can be found.

Decision Wednesday on Tire Co. Receiver

Judge Dodge at another Federal Court hearing in the case of the Walpole Tire and Rubber Company, a $4,500,000 corporation, stated that next Wednesday he would render a decision regarding the appointment of another reciever for the company. Robert M. Fisher is at present the receiver and yesterday's hearing was due to a desire on the part of a number of the creditors to have additional receivers appointed.

ADDRESS BY DR. M'ARTHUR.

Boston ministers will be addressed Monday, August 25, at 10.30 a. m., in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple, by the Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D. D., of New York city, who has been supplying the pulpit of Dr. Courtland Myers during the latter's vacation.

Lawrence a Bishop 20 Years October 6

Elaborate Plans for Anniversary of His Consecration.

The twentieth anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Lawrence will be observed on October 6. On Sunday, in the many parishes of the diocese, sermons will be preached commemorating the event.

The anniversary service will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, where all the bishops of the New England diocese are expected to be present.

In the evening, in Symphony Hall, a meeting will be held. There will then be presented to the bishop a carved desk and chair of Irish oak.

FIVE FREE BAND CONCERTS TODAY

City to Be Host at Marine Park, Common, Franklin Park, Wood Island and Jamaica Pond.

[illegible — concert programmes for the five parks; only scattered words legible, e.g. "International", "Star Spangled Banner", "Wood Island Park", "Coast Artillery Band", "Grand Fantasia", "Concert March", "Memories of Vienna", "Songs of the Sunny South", "Star Spangled Banner"]

Suggest Brooks for Trinity Pillar

Shall the figure of Phillips Brooks or some of the former great New England churchmen be carved upon the tenth stone pillar in the front colonnade of Trinity Church and thus be elevated to a place among the immortals of old.

Dr. Alexander Mann, the rector of Trinity, and many of the prominent church people there want the tenth uncarved stone to be commemorative of the Episcopal Church in America. There are others who feel that to place the figure of a preacher of modern times among such an array of illustrious prophets would be quite out of keeping with good taste. Bishop Seabury, Bishop Griswold, and Bishop Brooks have been mentioned for the position.

DOES NIGHT AIR AFFECT MOTOR?

Experts Say That Automobile Runs More Smoothly in Evening.

Does an automobile motor run more smoothly at night than in the daytime? That good old moot-a-but again been refined and despite endless discussion, there never has been given a really satisfactory answer.

Nine out of ten people who have driven now and do late in the afternoon, and their belief is supported by the opinions of engineers and others who maintain that in some way nightfall brings to its usual more power and smoother running. For personal testimony of this belief would be to the effect that there is a difference makes little impression on the widespread belief. Therefore, it is not likely that the statement of the engineer in charge of a long non-stop endurance test of a motor, to the effect that though the outer air had free access to the engine, the records showed a difference of only 1 per cent. between night and day running, and that was in favor of daylight, will have much effect.

Various theories have been suggested to explain the phenomenon, if it really exists; but whether the increased moisture content of the atmosphere at night is responsible, many of the gas, whether in the form of a more dense charge or in the greater weight of oxygen, or the lower temperature of the engine in the atmosphere by reducing after a hot trail of the sun's heat has been dissipated by radiation, or whether it is through the combination of these theories or in other names, is of less immediate and practical importance than the fact itself, which is to whether or not the facing of night actually is responsible for increased power.

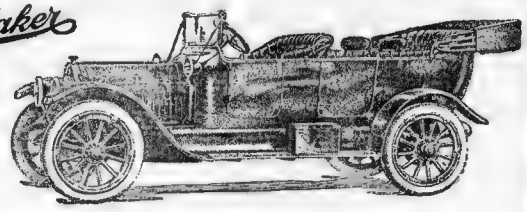
The "SIX" $1550



When You Get Acquainted With This "SIX" You Will Surely Want One

A drive in the Studebaker "SIX" will charm and convince you.

If there has ever been confusion in your mind concerning the qualities of a worthy Six, your questions will be fully answered after you have driven this "SIX".

And even if you are aware what some good sixes can do, you will enjoy a greater glow of satisfaction when you drive this car.

As you sit behind the alluringly smooth and responsive motor, no one will need to tell you why you like it. You will know perfectly well.

The instant and full answer to your call for increased speed or power, the sure and perfect response to your control, the quietness, the absence of vibration, the sheer thorough-bred ability of this "SIX" to do all its work without strain or perceptible effort—these things will prove a never-ending delight.

It is as hard adequately to describe this "SIX" as it is always difficult to describe any new and more perfect instrument.

BUT—the Studebaker "SIX" will win you, as sure as ever you sit behind the wheel.

Studebaker "Six" Engineering

The design of a fine six-cylinder car, especially in the motor, calls for exceptional skill and wide experience.

Efficiency at all speeds and the absence of vibration, which are the unique advantages of a worthy Six, can only be attained by the most scientific engineering.

To attain perfect results we use experimental laboratories of large size and full equipment, where every idea built into the Studebaker "SIX" has been proved correct beyond the possibility of error.

We work by knowledge, not by theory.

Every ton of steel we buy is first made according to Studebaker formulas and later rigorously tested to be sure it is up to standard.

Throughout the manufacture, which is carried on entirely in our plants, from forty huge power hammers which forge out over 250 parts for every Studebaker "SIX", to the last operation, accurate to the one-thousandth of an inch, the "SIX" is built with a scrupulous regard for fine work and the best materials.

Studebaker Standards of Luxury

From the beautifully balanced chassis to the deep upholstery and complete equipment, the "SIX" shows careful attention to appearance and comfort.

It is, of course, electrically lighted and started.

The auxiliary seats, making ample room for six-passengers, are exceedingly comfortable and yet may readily be folded to one side.

The painting is lustrous, requiring twenty-four operations, including many days of drying and aging, before it is finished.

We use Studebaker-Jiffy storm curtains, the most ingenious improvement ever made in automobile curtains.

The Studebaker "SIX" is a car of complete comfort and strikingly handsome appearance.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY FROM THE ATLANTIC TO THE PACIFIC

The Cost of Its Construction Is Virtually Assured by Business Firms and Individuals Interested in Good Roads

By J. C. KERRISON.

Massachusetts [illegible] of the excellency of her roads, can well appreciate the good that is to come from a national highway that will connect the Atlantic with the Pacific Coast and no doubt there are a number of public-spirited men and motorists who will be glad to do their small part, financialy, to build this wonderful highway.

The Lincoln highway, as it is to be known, is to be built by a great popular fund to be raised among motor car owners and manufacturers and public-spirited citizens. There already has been subscribed to the general highway fund nearly half of the ten million dollars to be raised by popular [illegible].

This present [illegible] the fulfillment of a dream of years ago when the national [illegible] commenced to advocate the construction of such a roadway. Then the great difficulty was in securing the necessary financial backing and support, but since the coming of the automobile there has opened up resources which today make possible what years ago was but a dream.

$5,000,000 SUBSCRIBED.

In other words, the motorists of the country have so far progressed with the plans of this road that the manufacturers as a whole have [illegible] certain percentage of their profits [illegible] a period of three years. This, however, is not of a sufficient amount [illegible] about the entire construction of the coast-to-coast highway. It is necessary to secure about five million dollars more, and this, it is hoped, will be raised by popular subscription from motorists and public spirited citizens [illegible].

Keenly appreciating what this highway means to the [illegible] Alvan T. Fuller, the pioneer and prominent automobile dealer and [illegible] of Boston, has, at the invitation of the Lincoln Highway Commission, made arrangements so that the [illegible] motorist and the private [illegible] every week in [illegible] the construction of this highway.

He has [illegible] books of [illegible] forth that the individual [illegible] either five or ten [illegible] to the transcontinental highway [illegible] of such a sum of money [illegible] receives [illegible] a membership in the [illegible] together with a [illegible] to his car [illegible] when there of bad [illegible] towards bringing about what [illegible] the desire of the American [illegible] construction of [illegible] France and [illegible] of this great [illegible].

This arrangement on the part of Mr. Fuller is [illegible] simply and solely to advance the interests of the highway, he personally in a measure contributing heavily to the cause. In speaking of the opportunity now presented to the individual to contribute towards the road Mr. Fuller said:

Road Means Lot to Nation.

"The construction of this road means a great deal to the nation as a whole. It is not what might be termed a "sectional advantage" as the road will open up the means of lawful vehicular travel of all [illegible] without [illegible] changes under [illegible] circumstances that are now lacking.

"The matter is a commercial proposition and the value of the road cannot possibly be estimated [illegible] of [illegible] over a mile of road [illegible] greater than it will be upon the completion of this thoroughfare. The [illegible] of New England is as keen [illegible] to the highway as are [illegible] of the Middle [illegible] Far West.

Bad Roads Cause Waste

"I saw the statement once that the energy, material [illegible] and time wasted in this country [illegible] of bad roads amount to the [illegible] of $400,000,000 annually. [illegible] and may be no exaggeration [illegible] It is known that [illegible].

Out of most extravagant [illegible] some kind of satisfaction. Nevertheless, while the money wasted in extravagance of dress, travel, etc., is wasted to the individual, it is not lost to the world, as it goes to artisans and laborers, [illegible] waste of bad roads is lost forever.

"I am pleased the Lincoln Memorial Highway [illegible] good road from coast to coast, will make money for [illegible] incidentally [illegible] Massachusetts, which [illegible] should add [illegible] in the [illegible] consumption [illegible] every [illegible].

Six Travel 3,000 Miles for $150

While two cents per mile is the lowest rate of steam railroad fare now in existence in this country, and in some localities the charge is as high as three or even four cents per mile, I. C. Emerson, a motor enthusiast of California, has recently completed a 3,000 mile automobile trip in which the rate of fare per person totaled only five-sixths of a cent a mile.

"And we had a more enjoyable trip than we could possibly have had on the railroads," said Mr. Emerson, in discussing the record he made. "We drove our 30 horse power Overland miles and miles away from the railroads, seeing things that the train traveller never [illegible] and probably never will. Our route covered approximately 3,000 miles in California and Oregon at a total cost of $150 for everything, tires, inner tubes, oil, gasoline, garaging and even team hire, when, on two occasions, we struck [illegible] that nearly buried the little Overland out of sight.

This is an expense of but five cents per mile, and since there were six people in my party, the cost per mile for each passenger is only five-sixths of a cent. There isn't a steam railroad in the United States that will give 3,000 miles of delightful travel at anywhere near this figure."

Want Law Against Overloading Trucks

The solution of the problem which is so seriously affecting the truck industry in Baltimore, is State legislation requiring larger tires," says C. W. Martin, manager of the motor truck tire department, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio.

"City Engineer McCay should have proposed a law prohibiting the overloading of motor trucks instead of suggesting that [illegible] trucks be barred from certain streets in Baltimore.

"The motor truck with its wonderful and unparalleled growth has become an economic necessity and such a restriction would work hardship on society. If there were legislation requiring that a certain width tire should be used to take care of the load there would be no danger of cutting up the streets.

"Overloading is the most serious problem that confronts truck owners today. The evil is so prevalent that I would not [illegible] surprised to see some such bill [illegible] early sessions of many [illegible] legislatures. Such a bill, beyond [illegible] passed wherever presented without question as its logic is [illegible]."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

George M. Winslow, a piano dealer of Waukesha, Wis., is a recent highly pleased convert to the sound theory that motor delivery is distinctly worth [illegible]. Since Mr. Winslow bought a [illegible] Kissel Kar a few months ago, he has kept that fact persistently [illegible] in his local newspaper advertisements, with what he declares to be very satisfactory results. He has found that people generally appreciate [illegible] superior reliability and speed of [illegible] delivery and are tempted to make their purchases from merchants employing it.

SEEK GREATER GAS ECONOMY

Manufacturer Adjusting Car for Road Running Rather Than Acceleration.

The car with a sane fuel economy and also a sane acceleration is getting a little more attention than it did a year ago. In the [illegible] a few years ago [illegible] in the [illegible] the car was the one [illegible] press all the way down [illegible] accelerator pedal [illegible] the back of [illegible] would hit him a reminding blow of the car's ability to accelerate, and tire adjustments later told of the cost of such grandstand attractions. The [illegible] per gallon of gasoline constituted an additional chapter to such absurd driving.

Sane acceleration is partly due to carburetor [illegible] adjustments are [illegible] for 1914 as compared with [illegible] makers are displaying the [illegible] of adjusting their carburetors for road running and economy, rather than easy starting and irrational acceleration. What does this mean? It means that the carburetor is so set that hand cranking would be almost impossible but cranking with a self-starter at 125 to 150 revolutions per minute is entirely successful.

Such a carburetor adjustment gives greater fuel economy [illegible] running, an object most desired [illegible] when fuel economy and [illegible] efficiency are on the lips [illegible] sane engine and car makers. This [illegible] of self starter economy is one [illegible] of greater attention and car owners who are not getting that mileage [illegible] which their neighbors are [illegible] up their own ways by seeing if the carburetor adjustment is set to give the best road running, rational acceleration and perhaps relatively easy starting.

Cadillac Men Have a Vacation

Although this is the busy season in the automobile industry, the Cadillac Automobile Company of Detroit has [illegible] to its time-honored custom closed its factory for the next two weeks in order that its employes might have a two-weeks' vacation. Ever since the Cadillac company has been organized its officials have felt that those who work for it should have at least two weeks vacation out of every year and in order that [illegible] may be the case they have invariably closed their plant.

This vacation period will not affect the Cadillac Company to any considerable degree, as the office and parts departments will be open for business during that period.

Alfred Measure, manager of the Cadillac Automobile Company of Boston, said yesterday: "Business for 1914 at the Cadillac factory has started with a boom such as has never before been experienced. On July 31 the shipments reached the enormous total of 276 cars for that day alone, the retail selling price amounting to more than $500,000.

"This is a world's record for high-grade cars. The shipment of 1914 Cadillacs up to July 31, totaled more than three times as many as the 1913 cars shipped up to August 31 of last year. This shows pretty conclusively the great volume of business this company is doing at the Detroit plant and is indicative of the high standard given to Cadillac cars throughout the country."

RECIPE FOR HORSE-POWER.

Take the cylinder bore of any motor, divide it by two, square it, multiply by 3.1416, multiply by the stroke, multiply by the number of cylinders and divide by 7.5. The result will be a very close approach to the correct horse-power, as implied by the American Automobile Association's standard of rating for competitive events.

Grand Prix Will Limit the Tires

There Will Be No Gasoline, Tire or Spare Part Pits at Big Races.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—After limiting the supply of gasoline, it is proposed to limit the number of tires to be used in the next French grand prix. If the proposed rules meet with the approval of manufacturers and the club committee, the cars to line up in the 1914 French grand prix will have a limited supply of gasoline in a sealed tank and seven tires, including the four on the road wheels, with which to cover a distance of 500 to 550 miles.

If the motor uses more gasoline than is allowed, or if more than three tires are blown out, that particular racer will have to drop by the roadside. The gasoline allowance has not yet been decided on. It certainly will not be more than 14.1 miles to the gallon, as allowed this year. It is quite possible that it will be less, for this year's racers all finished with a big supply of gasoline in hand. When once the race is started, the competitors will have to fight it out altogether unaided. There will be no tire pits, no gasoline pits, probably no water supply, and no spare parts.

It is believed that these rules will tend towards all round efficiency, and will bring into prominence the necessity for closer attention to sound tire construction and a design of car which will economize tires. This year's race already has proved the wonderful efficiencies obtained under limited fuel rules, the cars built under these rules more closely approaching the standard product than any set yet seen on a race course.

It is felt by European makers that it is time to seriously tackle the tire problem, not only so far as it concerns the tire itself, but also as regards the car as a "tire-eater." Both phases of the problem have been neglected.

Chicago Firm Buys 48 White Taxicabs

Another big taxicab sale consisting of fifty vehicles was reported by the White Company of Cleveland yesterday, closely following a sale of sixty-three White cabs to the Taxicab Company of California, which was announced a few weeks ago. The purchaser was the Owen H. Fay Livery Company, of Chicago, one of the largest cab operating companies in the Windy City. Their order calls for forty-eight taxicabs and two forty-horsepower touring cars.

These two purchases by the largest companies in their respective territories are believed to mark the end of experimental work by firms who operate large fleets of cabs. Actual experience during a number of years has determined the most suitable and serviceable cab and a large percentage of the taxicab equipment in this country is undergoing a process of standardization.

The California concern operated nineteen White cabs for almost two years before [illegible] out its fleet to eighty-two. The Chicago company, however, has not used White cabs but has noted their work in the hands of other companies and was largely influenced by the decision of several big operators to employ White taxicabs exclusively.

M'K. WHITE QUITS MARION.

W. McKay White, who was chairman of the great tour of the Indiana automobile manufacturers to the Pacific Coast, has announced his resignation as advertising manager of the Marion Motor Car Company of this city. Though he declines at present to divulge his arrangements it is generally understood in automobile circles that he has been making plans for some time to re-enter a field of business endeavor to which he gave his attention previously.

POLISHING STEEL PARTS.

An excellent compound for polishing the unpainted steel parts of the car such as the tubing of the steering gear and the control rods, may be made by mixing soap and fine emery powder into a paste. This will remove any rust that may have formed and will leave the rod smooth without scratching it.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TO BE DISCUSSED

It Will Be Topic Second to None at American Road Congress in Detroit.

[illegible] roads legislation will be a [illegible] Association, for its membership represents [illegible] the entire country. [illegible] is the day of the week for the road users and the program which Chairman George C. [illegible] promises to be an [illegible] one [illegible] the road [illegible] greatest [illegible] will be sent to the [illegible] to supply one of its [illegible].

DEALERS SHOULD SPECIALIZE.

"Casino" Decides an Auto Purchase

[illegible] have been made upon a [illegible] of a coin, but it [illegible] good old card game "Casino" to decide the question for an R-C-H purchaser whether the car should be a roadster or touring model.

Weber Brothers, R-C-H dealers at Jackson, Mich., tell the story. For some time they had been demonstrating the models of the R-C-H to this particular customer. They had succeeded in convincing both he and his wife of the [illegible] the ex[illegible] of the decision as to type of car [illegible] touring car or roadster.

[illegible] the ever smiling Webers [illegible] nearly disrupted by an automobile. Mr. Buyer wanted a touring car, while Mrs. Buyer was equally strong [illegible] a roadster. To settle [illegible] the suggestion that the [illegible] decided by a game of [illegible] Mrs. and Mr. [illegible] the Webers [illegible] umpires during its progress. [illegible] somebody had to lose, and in this instance Mrs. Buyer abided by the decision of the cards, with the result that now both they and their friends are enjoying their R-C-H touring car.

ENLARGE VELIE PLANT.

The plant of the Velie Motor Vehicle Company at Moline, Ill., is undergoing an enlargement to take care of the increased production for the 1914 season.

PRACTICE BEGINS FOR ELGIN RACES

Big Field of Stars to Start in Events Friday and Saturday Next Week.

Official practice for the Elgin road race on Friday and Saturday next will commence on the course tomorrow morning. Most of the drivers are now camped there awaiting for the opportunity to see what speed they can make upon this far famed course.

This year both the Chicago Automobile Club trophy and the Elgin trophy contest have attracted some of the best drivers in the land, particularly in the latter event. The Chicago Automobile Club trophy contest comes on Friday and will be contested for by seven drivers, the most famous of which are De Palma, Wishart and Mulford.

The Elgin event will be held Saturday when fourteen men will compete for honors. This Elgin field resembles to a considerable degree that which competed for the 500-mile trophy at Indianapolis. Dawson, the former winner of the 500-mile race; Grant, the two-time winner of the Vanderbilt; Ralph De Palma and Bob Burman are the topliners in this event, and it is safe to say that they will make some interesting going. Both races are at the 300-mile distance, and it would not be at all surprising if the former record was shattered.

This "On-Air Cure" In No-Rim-Cut Tires Costs Us $1,500 Daily

No Other Maker Employs It

Done to Save Blow-Outs

Another big and exclusive economy.

No-Rim-Cut tires are final-vulcanized on air-bags, shaped like inner tubes. All other tires are vulcanized on iron cores alone.

We cure the tires on elastic air, because they are used on air. Thus the rubber and fabric adjust themselves to actual road conditions. Every part of the fabric bears its share of the strain.

Curing involves a tremendous compression. When this is done on an iron core, the fabric often buckles. This wrinkled fabric escapes its share of the strain, and that leads to countless blow-outs.

We add to our cost $1,500 daily to save those blow-outs by this "On-Air Cure." And no other maker does that.

Our Treads Alone Are Rubber-Riveted

This occurs near the breaker strip — the rubber strip at the base of the tread in every well-made tire.

We use a patent fabric woven with hundreds of quarter-inch holes. The tread rubber is forced down through these holes. Thus hundreds of large rubber rivets are made to prevent tread separation. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse.

This is done in no other tire, because we have exclusive use of this patent.

GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO

No-Rim-Cut Tires

With or Without Non-Skid Treads

How We Alone End Rim-Cutting

Then we control the No-Rim-Cut tire, which makes rim-cutting impossible.

The braided wire bands, which make this feasible, are controlled by secrecy. No one else can make them.

No-Rim-Cut tires end this waste entirely. That we guarantee.

No Extra Price

We offer you tires that can't rim-cut—

With "On-Air-Cure" to save blow-outs—

With the rubber-riveted treads—

Yet they cost you no extra price.

No-Rim-Cut tires, with these costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than clinchers. We brought the cost down by our multiplied output. Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. Some lesser tires cost more.

All these economies, which we alone employ, add not one penny to the price to you. That's why Goodyear tires outsell any other tire. Our dealers are everywhere.

"Fear Marriage? I Guess Not!"

By Fred. Duprez.
A Merry Vaudeville Monologist.

IF I don't look happy, that's my business. I've been married for four years, and it doesn't seem like more than twelve. Before I married dearie I held her hands for three hours. If I had let go she would have killed me.

I met the partner of my joys down the rocky road of life's bottomless pit at the beach. Introduced to her by a man to whom I owed five dollars. Believe me, he'll never get the five. But it was a funny thing—do you know, the more I saw of her the better I liked her? No, you're wrong.

She looked very well in the water, especially when she was in up to her neck. The only way she could improve her appearance was to go in deeper. Still, she looked a little better out of the water, when she was fully upholstered.

Here's where the romance crowds in. One day she got a little too far out and I rescued her. Well, lots of times it doesn't pay to be a hero. Father saved mother from drowning, too, and I know why he didn't want me to take swimming lessons.

But I love every hair on her dresser, just the same. And she has, oh, such beautiful teeth—both of them. I spent a dollar ten while I was down at Nantasket with her last night. Would have spent more, but that's all she had.

I'll never forget the night I went to propose to her. She knew what was coming, all right, and led me to the rustic bench in the garden. We were supposedly very comfortable, but in truth I was feeling rather annoyed because I was sitting on a very unaccommodating grapevine, with burrs on it. She, of course, in all the glory of her upholstery, didn't feel it.

Well, we sat there, without saying anything at all, and finally one word led up to another, and then suddenly I looked right at her in her good eye and said, "Kitten"—I used to call her "Kitten" because she was one of a litter of twins—I said: Kitten, do not for a moment allow me to stand in the way of your marrying me.

All there was to the rustic bench stuff, so I next went to see father. You see, a wedding in a family is a big event to father. It sometimes gets him a home. Anyhow, father and I had been hoozing friends together, so I didn't fear him—not I.

I can't see what it is that makes young fellows fear marriage. Before I was married I didn't know what fear was.

The Week-Enders—With the Jibbooms at Squallville

By LEWIS ALLEN

"SQUALLVILLE!" shouted the conductor, and Hunter and Mrs. Hunter and little Willie alighted from the train.

A red faced man, wearing a yachting cap, white flannel trousers and jersey greeted them.

It was Mr. Jibboom.

"Leave your bags right on the porch and hurry," said Jibboom and, without going into the cool and inviting bungalow at all, he rushed the Hunters down to the wharf where, some hundred yards from shore, a little sloop lay at anchor. Mrs. Jibboom was just rowing back to shore in the dingy.

She waved a welcome to them. She wore a short blue flannel skirt, white canvas shoes and a sweater. As she reached shore she sized up Mrs. Hunter with a bit of annoyance.

"My dear," she said, "that nice new white percale and those satin shoes and that chiffon hat—why did you dress up?"

"Why I thought"

"You know we positively live on our yacht"——

"What's the yacht, Paw?" asked Willie.

"Oh, that will be all right," said Mrs. Hunter, who would have given five dollars to have been able to swat Hunter with something, he grinned so fiendishly at her.

"Tide's getting lower every minute, don't dare take Aphrodite in. Aphrodite's the yacht, explained Mrs. Jibboom.

One by one they were rowed out to the yacht. Willie made it without accident. Hunter slipped getting over the gunwale and scraped his shin. He said something that made Willie giggle and Mrs. Hunter offered her opinion of anyone who would teach an innocent boy to use such language.

Then they up anchor and started. There was a fair breeze but being inshore, Jibboom had to tack.

"Look out," he yelled, "we're coming 'round!"

The boom swung over sharply.

"Ouch!" remarked Hunter.

The boom took him in the head and his hat sailed in a circle and floated out to sea.

"Here's an old cap," said Jibboom, laughing.

Hunter put it on.

"Ouch!" he repeated. He removed the cap and looked at it.

"Oh, I forgot. I stuck some smelt hooks in the band to keep from losing 'em," laughed Jibboom.

Hunter soothed his gouged forehead with his handkerchief.

"If Aphrodite makes the point all right, we'll get away in time," said Jibboom, anxiously.

"Oh, I know 'bout her," chimed in Willie, "she's a woman what comes up on the beach without nothin' on"——

"Where have you been taking that boy?" sternly demanded Mrs. Hunter.

"I seen a pitcher of her in a book," added Willie.

"He meant Aphrodite. He's been reading tales from mythology," said Hunter, indignantly.

Jibboom laughed. Then he scowled. With the sinking of the sun the wind died down, the sails lost their tautness and flapped uselessly.

"We must make the point," muttered Jibboom, and he and Hunter took the oars and tried to propel Aphrodite. There was fifteen minutes' strenuous work. Hunter was about all in. Then there came a gentle thud and Aphrodite would go no further. Five minutes later she was sitting calmly on a mud flat, with half a mile of water between her and the shore and the whole Atlantic between her and Europe, which was the nearest land due east.

"Dash it all, if that fool train hadn't been ten minutes late we'd a made it, now we'll be here until two o'clock to-morrow morning!"

"That'll be nice," said Hunter.

"I'll get supper, then we'll play bridge. The time will soon pass and the moonlight is delightful," said Mrs. Jibboom.

A minute later she emerged from the tiny cabin and asked Jibboom for the matches.

"In the match box," he said.

"None there," she replied.

He felt in his pockets. So did Hunter. They both felt in their pockets one hundred and eighty-four times. There were no more matches there the 184th time than on the first time.

And so they had sardines and bread and butter.

Hunter wanted to smoke. He chewed eleven cigars from stem to stern without a smile. A cooling breeze came up, blowing from shore. It brought out a swarm of mosquitoes. Willie went to sleep on a cushion.

They started to play bridge. On the second hand a gust of wind took seven cards off the checker board they were holding on their laps to play on and sent them out into the slugiow waters. It was too dark to recover them.

Mrs. Hunter wrapped Hunter's coat around her feet to keep the mosquitoes away. She found the coat in the stern of the boat. Looking in a pocket she found some matches.

"You might have looked in your coat," she said.

Jibboom went aft and talked to the stars real earnestly for ten minutes. He was evidently a pious man, since he mentioned a lot of Bible n. . But they lighted the oil stove and got a fairly good dinner and the tide came in, so they started for shore.

When they got in as far as possible they looked for the little row boat. It was gone!

It developed later that Willie, lying on the knotted rope, found it uncomfortable and untied it and let the boat drift away, not pausing to learn what was on the other end of the ro

But in an hour it was high tide and they got the boat up on the beach so they could wade ashore. It was dinner Mrs. Hunter, having no desire to ruin her skirt, removed her shoes and stockings and started to wade. So did Mrs. Jibboom. Then someone from a nearby private yacht swung a powerful search-light along the shore, revealing the ladies and Mr. ... as a rare treat. Hunter laughed so heartily he stepped on a rock and fell in, wetting Mrs. Hunter's shoes and stockings, losing one of his shoes and wetting everything he had on except Jibboom's cap.

When they got to the bungalow they discovered that some one had stolen the Hunters' luggage. Jibboom had forgot to take it inside.

The Hunters went home on the early morning train, wearing a varied assortment of raiment borrowed from the Jibbooms.

"Speaking of week-end parties," began Hunter as the train started.

"Shut up," responded Mrs. Hunter ... grizzly bear with a toothache.

Nevertheless, they went out to the Holstein stock farm the following week.

Buttercup, Eggshell, They're Off.

Plate Glass, Sombrero, Onions.

And here is what "Winner," our famous tipster, said about the race

"It's a cinch for Buttercup if she gets away in front and lasts the distance. Plate Glass has beaten this bunch before and will do it again if they don't show improvement. If Eggshell doesn't crack, he's a certainty, and we take our hats off to Sombrero. They're Off can win and Onions will bring tears to the eyes of his supporters if he doesn't pass the wire first."

And here is the result of the race:

BUTTERCUP.

ONIONS.

EGGSHELL.

You notice how we picked 'em. Buttercup "a cinch," Onions will "pass the wire," and Eggshell was third because he cracked a little at the finish.

You can't beat "Winner" at picking them.

How to Go Trout Fishing?

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company Great Britain Rights Reserved

YOUR vacation is not complete unless you have angled for the wary trout.

You don't appreciate your home until you have been on a trouting trip

One of the requisites is running water

The water that runs down a mountain without cost is preferable to the sort that runs through a faucet, too warm to drink in Summer and freezes in Winter

Your equipment should consist of hip boots. These are made of rubber and weigh eleven pounds each.

For wading in water anywhere from three inches to a foot they may seem a little too high, but once you have fallen over a mossy stone in the babbling brook and filled them with water you will understand why hip boots are better—they hold so much more.

You can get a nice jointed rod for $27. Put your hook and sinker on the line first. As you will do this anyway, it is better to tell you about it and have it done with

Then you will find you cannot thread the line through the eyelets of the rod without removing hook and sinker.

Lay in a stock of flies that cost anywhere from half a dollar to three dollars each. They are very stylish Hook some of them through the band on your hat so you can gouge your finger on them when you brush away the gnats

Then go out and dig some worms for bait

You need a fish basket. It will come in handy for carrying that sandwich and the quart. It also catches in the bushes and slams up against your thigh until you acquire the spring halt

Select a nice, long, cool stream that winds through tangled underbrush and up over great ledges, moss-grown and slippery. Walk to the stream, joint your rod, fix the tackle, put on your hip boots and start out.

Approach a nice ripple under some alder bushes, thrust your rod forward. The hook catches, baul it back; the hook remains caught, yank it slightly, push it, pull it, bend it sideways, then lose your temper and give it a terrific yank, and it will come away, leaving hook and sinker hanging on the limb

Wade in and get it. If there were any fish in the ripple they have gone away from there by this time. They probably objected to your language

Repeat this half a dozen times, then strike into the upgrade

Now you will be all right, there is plenty of room to move about, no alder bushes, and some deep pools.

Just as you approach one of these pools you step on a mossy rock and fall on your rod. But you cut off some of your line and mend the rod and proceed.

Now come the gnats, or midges, or black flies, or whatever they are. They are about as large as the point of a pin, but they bite as though they were seven times larger than an elephant. They take your mind off the fishing for a while, and you sit down to drink your lunch

Then you proceed up stream, step on another mossy rock and move rapidly away from thence into the pool. It is only two feet deep, standing up

But you are not standing up. It is over your head lying down. And you are lying down.

Go some distance inland and carefully empty your boots (the water will run out of your other garments by itself), but be careful in emptying the boots, as sometimes a fish gets in them, and then you are so much ahead.

It is now time to turn back if you expect to get home before dark

The walk would be easier, as it is down hill, except that the mosquitoes and gnats and midges prefer you wet and flock about you twice as thick.

Then, again, the felt lining of your boots rolls up and works a blister on each heel

That's all.

The fish?

Why, this isn't an article on how to catch fish; it is designed as a bit of invaluable instruction on how to GO fishing.

Going fishing and catching fish are entirely different matters

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription, othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove those homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any of the Riker-Jaynes drug stores and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

AN old Irishman was driving his mule to market. She was a balky, obstinate, kicky creature, but an old man's affection for a particularly

The old man coaxed, "Go along, Jinny, now be a good gurl, Jinny, 'tis me that gave you an extra quart of oats this very morning. Go along like the lady that ye are now, Jinny."

Suddenly Jinny stopped short.

"Jinny, will ye listen to your old friend? Now, Jinny, ye can be a sweet gurl while ye have a mind to"—— but just here Jinny up with a flashing pair of heels and sent the dashboard

The old man stood up, and bringing the whip down over Jinny's hind quarters, screamed:

"Ye long-eared, pie-eyed, knock kneed, blankety blank, blank, blank, BLANK—'tis the lolkes of ye that has kept me out of the Christian Association these long years!"

WHACK! !

ONE night Charlie Comiskey, the singin of the White Sox, was going at a fast clip down Michigan avenue, Chicago, in his touring car, when a big traffic cop loomed up in front and brought him to a sudden halt. As soon as the car stopped the cop recognized Comiskey.

"See here, Charlie, you'll have to go slower along here. It's not me that's complaining, but the traffic regulations. So please go slow."

Comiskey bowed, and whirled away. A few nights later he was coming down the same street, faster than ever, and the same big cop blocked his way.

"Now see here, Charlie, sure I don't want to be making a squawk, but this is the second time I have stopped ye. Now, Charlie, if ye can't control this buzz wagon and go past me post at the lawful speed well, then, I'll have to give ye back the license paper!"

JUNIE McCREE told me this one. McCree made a great reputation in vaudeville in the character of a "dope" fiend and he has a fund of those stories.

It seems that a wayward youth had fallen a prey to the opium habit, and some of his friends got him aside and tried to reason with him. He finally promised them that he would quit the drug and go home.

"Tomorrow," he said, "I will wire the old man for railroad fare."

Sure enough he did go to the telegraph office and send this wire:

"Pop, want to come home. Send me $50 for fare. HAROLD."

While he sat around waiting for an answer, the old desire crept back. Finally he said to himself:

"Gee, I'm going to quit it anyway, so I might as well go and smoke just one more teeny pipeful and then for home. I'll do that."

About four days later the father was startled when he got this wire:

"Never mind the fifty, pop. Can loan you any part of a million. HAROLD."

MURPHY went in to get a nip before going home. Leaning against the bar was a bronze-faced man who, from his conversation, was unmistakably English.

He was delivering a tirade against home rule, and capped the climax by declaring that Robert Emmett wasn't an Irishman at all—that he came from Sweden.

Murphy bristled like a mad tiger as he walked over to the Englishman.

"What's your name, young feller?" demanded Murphy.

"James Elwood Forbes—a sea-going chap, old top."

"Well, mine's Murphy—Patrick Francis Murphy. If you don't like R-R Robert Emmett was a Swede ye'll be a hospital-going chap, old top."

"My word!"

"No, MINE!" roared Murphy.

"Well, I will have to repeat the news—he was a Swede," said the Englishman.

Murphy's fist crashed against the seaman's jaw, and he was knocked out so thoroughly that they called the ambulance.

"What's up?" asked the doctor, who came with the ambulance.

"Him that lies there," explained Murphy, "had the nerve to say that Robert Immet was a Swede."

The explanation was sufficient and the ambulance hurried to the hospital.

"What ails him?" asked the nurse, whose name was Ellen Clancy. The doctor explained.

The next morning Murphy dropped into the hospital and saw the nurse, introducing himself as the man who had hit the Englishman.

"How's your patient?" he asked.

"He's no better, thank hiven, Mr. Murphy."

IT was election day, and after Murphy had cast his vote he went on his way. About a block from the polling place he was approached by an old friend, who said:

"Murphy, you can make $50 by going back to the booth and voting again. Go back and vote in Ike Rosenbaum's name and you get the fifty."

"Sure they might get me at it, and I'd land in jail."

"Not a chance. They don't know you and they don't know Rosenbaum. So go to it."

Murphy thought a moment and then went back to the polls.

"I wish to vote," said Murphy to the clerk, meekly.

"What's your name?" asked th eclerk.

"Ike Rosenbaum," said Murphy, with a delicious Dublin roll.

"That's not your name," said the clerk, suspiciously.

"'Tis me name," said Murphy.

"It's not," argued the clerk.

"Ike Rosenbaum's me name and I intind to cast me vote as sich," said Murphy hotly.

A friend of Murphy in the rear jumped up and yelled:

"That's right, go on and vote, Murphy, don't let 'em bluff you."

Why Will Women Do These Things

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

By DOROTHY DIX.

MRS. BROWN, propped up on pillows, looking weak and wan and sick, discoursed to her friend, Mrs. Perkins, who dropped in to see her.

MRS. BROWN—Oh, yes, my dear, I have been desperately ill. The doctor said that I had one of the worst cases of nervous prostration he ever saw, and, in addition, I had a sprained back and a wrenched shoulder and paint poisoning, and goodness knows what else.

For weeks the doctor had to come to see me several times a day, and we had to have two trained nurses, and you know what that means. It is my solemn belief that a trained nurse sits up of nights and racks her imagination trying to think up things to send out and buy, and now, as soon as I am able to travel, the doctor says I must be taken off somewhere to recuperate.

Of course, it is dreadful to be sick this way and have all these horrible expenses, but I am not thinking about myself so much as about my poor family. I just know while I am lying here that everything is going to wrack and ruin.

For, my dear, Tom hasn't got any more idea about economy than a rat, and how on earth he ever managed to keep out of the poorhouse before he married me is a mystery that I have never been able to fathom.

MRS. PERKINS (aghast)—Men have no idea whatever of economy. It's no wonder so many of them have to go into bankruptcy.

MRS. BROWN (triumphantly)—That's exactly what I always tell Tom, and I say, "You ought to thank Heaven that you've got a wife to save you. Goodness knows what would become of you if you hadn't."

MRS. PERKINS (wishing)—It's we wives who do the real financiering, and if we had our rights a married woman would be the Secretary of the Treasury.

MRS. BROWN (assenting)—That's right. Many's the time I have gone to at least forty different shops, just simply tramped the town until I was footsore and weary, and had a terrific headache, just to save five cents a yard on three yards of lace. You would never catch a man practicing economy like that.

MRS. PERKINS (acornfully)—I should say not! He'd go into a shop and slap down his sample and never even ask the price, and then go about his business.

MRS. BROWN (virtuously)—I don't wish to unduly praise myself. I may have my faults. Possibly I have got faults, not large ones of course, but still faults. But I will say this for myself, that I am just a born manager, and I tell Tom Graham every day of his life that he ought to be down on his knees thanking Providence for having given him a wife that knew how to take care of what he makes, instead of a trifling, slack woman that would waste, and let servants steal from her, and bringing him down to ruin.

MRS. PERKINS—How true! A woman can throw more out of the kitchen door with a teaspoon than a man can throw in at the front door with a scoop.

MRS. BROWN (beaming with self-satisfaction)—There's nothing wasted in my house, not even the bites of cold meat and vegetables. My dear, I keep a STOCK POT, and to see that the right things go into that, and the wrong things are kept out, simply TIES one in the kitchen. One of the reasons that I can never keep a servant is because cooks will not bother with a stock pot, but I am firm on the subject. I will not have those cold scraps thrown away, even if we are always in a turmoil over changing maids.

MRS. PERKINS (agreeing)—Why, I suppose one saves at least thirty or forty cents a week that way.

MRS. BROWN (self-righteously)—And I always have my dresses made over. Of course, you always hate a made-over dress, and it never looks like anything but a rag bag, and it generally costs more than a new one would, but it's a matter of principle with me never to waste a perfectly good garment just because it's gone out of style.

MRS. PERKINS (cautiously)—Oh, you're rich. You can afford to have your clothes made over. It's a luxury I can't afford.

MRS. BROWN (triumphantly)—Oh, I'm the greatest manager. Let me tell you what I did just before I got sick. I painted over a set of furniture myself. A man asked me $7.50 to do the job, and so I decided that I would just do it myself and save that.

I never put in two such weeks of hard work as I did scraping it, and I sprained my back lifting the bureau, and the very night that I got through I was taken with this terrible illness, but I saved the $7.50, which just seemed providential, as this spell has been so frightfully expensive.

MRS. PERKINS—It certainly was, but Heaven only knows what would become of our husbands if they didn't have us to economize for them.

WHAT HAPPENED TO MARY?

A Pretty Country Girl, Ignorant of the Lures of the Great City, Comes Here at the Invitation of a Rich Young Man

A Scene You'll Enjoy from Owen Davis' Play, "What Happened to Mary," at the Majestic Theatre.

MARY HAMPTON, a pretty, naive girl, has lived all her life on Moses Island, in Delaware Bay with a man she has been given to believe is her uncle. When she was old enough to understand, she was told by this man that her mother had died years before, and he had adopted her. She finally learns that this man is not her uncle, but that when she was a baby, she was brought to the island one dark night by two men and left in his care. As soon as she learns this she plans to leave the island and her "uncle" and seek a livlihood elsewhere.

As she is planning to go away, several people on a yachting trip from New York, stop off at the island, and Mary meets them. One of the party, Henry Craig, a rich young man, urges her to come to New York, saying that he will look after her. John Willis, another one of the party, a stern but kindhearted fellow, advises her to stay away from New York. She takes a great aversion to Willis, however, because of his apparently cross, harsh manner and decides to go. Young Craig gives her a card directing her to a boarding house in the city, run by a Mrs. Gibbs. She leaves the island, with $30 loaned her by an old friend.

MARY—Mr. Craig told me to come here as soon as I got to New York

MRS. GIBBS—Yes, dear, he spoke about it over the telephone today. He didn't mention the name, my dear

MARY—My name is Mary—Mary—Hampton'

MRS GIBBS—Hampton! That's a pretty name

MARY—That's why I picked it out.

MRS. GIBBS (angry)—You must understand that this is a respectable house

MARY—Of course it is. That's why Mr Craig sent me here

MRS. GIBBS—I d do a lot for him, but I won't have anybody in my house that don't know enough to behave themselves.

MARY—I'm awfully glad of that. Now show me to my room'

MRS GIBBS—I know enough to wink at some things, if folks will let me; but you've got to be careful. What's your real name?

MARY—I don't know

MRS GIBBS—You're a queer one, or else you're —

MARY—He's going to find me work to do. I'm not going to be any trouble to him—and he isn't going to be ashamed of me, either. I got a dress and hat and—and things here—good enough for a Queen to wear. I got 'em at the swellest store in New York on Ninth avenue

MRS GIBBS—That's nice Did he give you the money?

MARY—No' What do you mean? Do you think that I— I don t think I like you I won't stay here

MRS GIBBS—Wait' You mustn't go like this I don't know what Mr Craig would say! He'd never forgive me I'm sorry if I've made a mistake

MARY—I don't know what I ought to do—nor where I ought to go. He told me to come here; that you were a good woman, and that I'd be safe here'

MRS GIBBS—Safe? My dear! I been keepin' lodgings right here for ten years, and there ain't been a breath against me

MARY—If you are good, why are you suspicious? It is only bad people who think evil

MRS GIBBS—I guess you'd learn to think evil if you earned your livin' running a boardin' house. I'm sorry, dear, an' if you'll stay I'll take good care of you

MARY—I'm afraid' You frightened me somehow. Down there, on the Island, it seemed all right to come here like this, but now—— I don't know. He was kind and good, and he seemed so anxious to help me. I don't know very much; you are older, I wish you'd tell me what to do

MRS. GIBBS—How?

MARY—Help me, just like I was your sister, or your daughter Tell me if I ought to stay or go'

MRS GIBBS—I——' (She hesitates)

MARY—Please'

MRS GIBBS (hoarsely)—I guess you'd better —go! Wait! I'm poor—it's hard to make a livin' like I make mine. I'll take care of you; there's your room

MARY—You are sure?

MRS. GIBBS—Yes! If a girl wants to go straight one house is as good as another. It ain't houses that are rotten—it's folks.

MARY—Yes, that's true. I'm not going to be afraid of anything. How much is the room?

MRS. GIBBS—Five dollars

MARY—A month?

MRS. GIBBS—A week, but Mr Craig will——"

MARY—He hasn't anything to do with how much I pay for my room, only I can't pay in advance, because, to tell the truth, I couldn't resist that dress. Seven dollars is a lot for a dress, isn't it?

MRS. GIBBS—I've heard of spending more

MARY (looking into room)—It seems very large, and—and—there's no bed in it

MRS. GIBBS—It's a folding bed.

MARY—What's that?

MRS. GIBBS—Here! (Lets bed down.)

MARY—Oh, my goodness' Suppose it should shut up with me in it? I'll sleep on the floor'

MRS. GIBBS—It's safe enough. There's water there behind that screen, if you want to wash

MARY—I do

MRS. GIBBS—I'll be back in a little while My parlor is in an awful mess Just call if you get lonesome. (She exits.)

HENRY (entering)—I'm awfully glad to see you

MARY—Thank you' I was getting worried for fear you wouldn't be Oh, you may be sure I'm glad, and anxious, too, because I wanted to ask you where I am to work, and when? It must be soon, because just in this little time New York has gone to my head, and I've only a dollar and sixteen cents left

"Why should we quarrel about money? I have plenty."

HENRY—I'll attend to that part of it, little girl

MARY—Are you making a mistake, Mr. Craig, or am I? I don't want you to think I am horrid, but you sounded as though you thought that I would take money from you

HENRY—Why should we quarrel about money? I have plenty; if you haven't, why——

MARY—I wouldn't borrow. You must either help me to get work, or go away and leave me look for it myself

HENRY—What sort of work?

MARY—Any sort! I'm a good typewriter

HENRY—Then it's easy. I'll get you a place at once Your salary will be twenty dollars a week

MARY—My goodness! I couldn't spend it'

HENRY—My dear girl, here in New York you'll have to spend fifty dollars for a hat

MARY—Men don't know much. I just bought the prettiest hat in New York for two dollars and forty-nine cents.

HENRY (admiring)—You don't need a fifty dollar hat

MARY—Which is luck for me, because I won't get one. I don't want it, anyway; there's only one thing in the whole world I do want.

HENRY—What's that?

MARY—My dinner

HENRY—You haven't had it?

MARY—Not since day before yesterday. I've been living on crackers and anticipations.

HENRY—Good! I'm hungry myself. Put on that wonderful new hat of yours and I'll show you a New York restaurant.

MARY—Oh, no'

HENRY—You'd like it.

MARY—Oh, I'm sure I should. I am afraid I have a natural liking for things I shouldn't do

HENRY—You must eat Dinner here has been over for hours

MARY—Are you sure it wouldn't be very wrong?

HENRY—I'm sure it would be very sensible

MARY—I don't care! I'll do it'

HENRY—Get your hat'

MARY—Hat! There's more than a hat' Will you wait two minutes?

HENRY As long as you please

MARY (going to door)—Mr Craig, next to my dearest old friend, you are kindest—best man I ever heard of (She goes out.)

(Enter Mrs. Gibbs and John.)

MRS GIBBS—Miss Welch's out I tell you, but you can wait if you want to

JOHN—Thanks! I do want to

HENRY—Hello'

JOHN—I am glad you have at least the decency to be here. Will you be good enough to leave us for a moment? (Mrs Gibbs goes out.)

HENRY—Begin the sermon, I want to go out for a cocktail'

JOHN—Your father has discharged Annie Welch I saw a copy of his letter. What are you going to do?

HENRY—Nothing' What can I do?

JOHN There is good in that girl

HENRY—Plenty of it

JOHN—If she loses her place, as she has, through you, it is your duty to

HENRY—What? Marry her? Talk sense

JOHN—Why shouldn't you marry her? She is less likely to disgrace your family than you would yourself

HENRY—Propose it to my father, or to my aunt. I fancy I can guess what she would say to you. Now, John, I want you to mind your own business! I won't see her any more

JOHN—What of her?

HENRY—What of her? What do I care?

JOHN—I must care, since you don't. She came into my office a decent girl I am in a way responsible. If you won't do anything to help her, to try to keep her from quite going to the bad, I'll do what I can myself.

HENRY—You don't make much of a hit with women, John

JOHN—I don't want her to like me! Nor any other woman. This is what comes of liking—it—a sort of thing!

HENRY -Why don't you go home and go to bed?

JOHN—Because, if I did, I'd have about as much chance of sleeping easily as this poor girl has. Somebody has got to help her. Can't you see that? To get her out of this rotten place - away from such women as this Mrs. Gibbs, and give her another chance. Will you do it?

HENRY—No, I won't I'm through

JOHN—Don't you know that there are such things in this world as decency and self-respect?

HENRY—Yes; I also know that there are other things such as butting in on other people's business—such as narrow-minded, priggish, uncalled for meddling. You can talk your head off to Annie if you want to, but you can't talk any more to me (Henry exits; Mary enters.)

MARY—Was I long? Oh, I beg your pardon It's you?

JOHN—So you did come?

MARY—And your voice is even crosser than it was before

JOHN—I might have known it' Yet I was fool enough to fancy that you would take my warning' Do you know that I thought of you often last night, and again today; of the innocent, wistful look in your eyes, and I was glad to believe that you were safe on your quiet little island? But no; you are wiser than you look—nothing less than New York would satisfy you

MARY—I'm glad I came I've seen something worth while the very first day -the ugliest man in all the world

JOHN—Already just in these few hours I can see a change in you

MARY—My new dress? Pretty, isn't it?

JOHN—I blame myself now bitterly for not having gone to your room, other.

MARY- You couldn't. I haven't any

JOHN—Your father, then

MARY—I haven't anybody! There isn't a soul in the world except just one old man who cares at all what becomes of me. I might even be as bad as you seem to think I am and nobody would care, unless it was Mr. Craig. He has been kind to me

JOHN—What particular form has Mr. Craig's kindness taken?

MARY—He is going to get me work

JOHN—What sort of work?

MARY—In an office—I am a typewriter

JOHN—If you really want a position and are willing to work for your living I will take you into my office'

MARY—Merey! I'd rather go back to Moses Island

JOHN—My name is Willis—John Willis, of Craig & Willis What is your name?

MARY—Mary

JOHN—Mary what?

MARY—Why, Mary—Hampton'

JOHN—Hampton! That sounds like an assumed name

You're a kid! What do you know? What are you doing, anyway, here in this house? You'd better get out quick, while you can?

MARY -It is' You don't approve of that, either, do you?

JOHN—No! There is no possible excuse for it

MARY—I might have known you would think that. What's the use of trying to make you understand? I can't help not having any name. My —my—mother was ashamed of me when I was a baby and sent me—in the night to Moses Island

JOHN (gently)—Ah, I—am sorry

MARY—And, so you see I had to go away when I found out that the man who brought me up wasn't my uncle, and —and—wanted me to—to—I had to go'

JOHN—Come to my office. I'll make it my business to see that you are safe there If you have any idea of typewriting at all I will give you the place of a girl who was forced to leave us to day

MARY—But I must know tonight, before I let Mr. Craig put himself to any trouble

JOHN—How can I promise you the place before I know that you are competent to fill it?

MARY—I'll borrow this typewriter and write you a letter right now

JOHN—Can you take dictation"

MARY—I think so What is it?

JOHN—If I dictate a letter to you can you write it down?

MARY—Oh, yes'

JOHN—Are you ready?

MARY—Yes

JOHN—"Robinson, Robinson & Robinson " (She hesitates.) The girls in my office are not supposed to giggle'

MARY—I shouldn't think they'd feel like it.

JOHN—"Robinson, Robinson & Robinson."

MARY—Six times?

JOHN (fiercely) No'

MARY (timidly)—Oh'

JOHN—"Gentlemen:—Have your Mr Baker call on us Wednesday A M We are glad that the matter of Colby vs. James had so pleasant an ending. Yours"

MARY—You talk awful fast, but I did it

JOHN—Let me see Humph'

JOHN (reads)—"Robinson, Robinson & Robinson "Gentlemen:—Please have your Mr. Baker call on"—— I didn't say please

MARY—I thought you should have

JOHN—"Call on us Wednesday morning" I said A. M

MARY—What's the difference"

JOHN—"We are glad that the matter of Colby vs. James had so pleasant an"—— Do you spell pleasant "e-n-t?"

MARY—Yes, don't you?

JOHN—I do not'

MARY—I wonder you can spell it at all You certainly can't be it' It's no use. I couldn't please you

JOHN You could if you tried There is no reason why you can't learn. You may come tomorrow Number 25 Rector street

MARY—What's my salary?

JOHN—Seven dollars a week

MARY—You are really the very meanest man I ever saw

JOHN—Isn't it enough?

MARY—Not half enough Ha ha ha' Oh, dear! Seven dollars!

JOHN—You won't take it?

MARY—Take it I should say not! My salary is twenty dollars

JOHN—Absurd' You are not worth five

MARY—Oh!

JOHN—And I doubt if you ever will be!

MARY—I wouldn't work for you for five hundred' I don't have to. Mr Craig will find me a place. (Starts for door.)

JOHN—Wait! I can't let you go like this I won't although you are the most aggravating girl I ever saw in all my life! You can't refuse my offer'

MARY But I do' Mr Craig is going to help me

JOHN—I won't allow it! I will go to him right now and end this thing once for all'

MARY—You can't find him'

MARY—It must be awful to have such a depraved mind

(He exits Annie Welch enters the parlor and starts to put her pipe in an ash receiver. Suddenly she breaks down and, sinking into a chair, bends forward over the table and sobs wildly. Mary goes to her.)

MARY Oh, what is it? What is it?

ANNIE Nothing' Don't bother me'

MARY It must be something or you wouldn't cry like that'

ANNIE Who are you? What do you care about my trouble?

MARY Perhaps it's because I have so many of my own. I'd like to cry myself, but it doesn't do much good, does it?

ANNIE You with troubles' You're a kid! What do you know? What are you doing anyway here in this house? You'd better get out quick, while you can

MARY—Why?

ANNIE—Why? You're from the country, aren't you?

MARY How do you know? I've got a New York dress on'

ANNIE—It isn't your dress, it's your eyes Mine looked like that once, until I came here—to this place They'll never look like that again.

MARY—You are in trouble I wish that I could help you

ANNIE Nobody can help me now. (Henry enters.)

MARY Oh! I'm all ready

ANNIE Henry! I'm so glad you came I wanted

HAROLD HANGOVER MEETS A TITLED ENGLISH LORD

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"ASKING your pardon, sir," said Harold Hangover's trusty servitor as he busied himself about the library of our hero's apartment, "I have a favor that I should like to ask you, sir."

"Nix on any more advance money!" snapped the great Oshkosh pitcher. "You are overdrawn nearly a month now Why don't you live within your means, the way I do?"

"It isn't about money, sir," said Zeb Hastings, nervously "I don't want any money, sir It was about my brother that I wanted to speak, sir. He wants to come and meet you, sir'

A smile of grim satisfaction appeared on the handsome features of our hero. His lightning mind was instantly at work formulating a plan for vengeance. He could see the haughty members of the Four Hundred, who had repulsed him two weeks before, and he could picture them crawling to his flat when they found that he was a bosom friend of a real English lord. He could see them seeking in vain for recognition from him, not as he had sought recognition from them but in a more abject way.

"Your brother may come, Zeb," he said kindly. "I shall be glad to see him at any time."

"He is here now, sir," said the delighted Zeb. "I was sure you would see him, sir, so I had him waiting in the other room, sir. Here he is, sir, and a fine brother I call him, asking your pardon."

The English lord stepped forward with a pleasant smile on his face. There was no trace of the bored bearing he had shown at the ball game. He seemed more like a schoolboy on his vacation than like a member of the aristocracy of Great Britain.

'Take a chair, count' Take a chair' said our hero after the introduction "I am mighty glad to meet you'

"Not a count, sir, a lord," said Zeb's brother 'Lord Cornwallis, of Tightwaghter-on-the-Thames sir You have a blooming fine apartment here

"We think it is pretty fine, don't we, Zeb?" chuckled Harold Hangover, whose democratic nature would not permit him to order his faithful servant from the room

"Indeed we do, sir," said Zeb proudly "Mr Hangover is very kind to me, Basil," he said to the lord "We are more like two brothers than like servant and master He gets a bit muddled over his wine sometimes, Basil, and goes in for late hours and all that sort of thing, but a fine master I call him, and I should hate to lose my position'

"There isn't a chance in the world for you to lose out with me as long as you keep both feet on the ground," said Harold Hangover, graciously. "Lord Cornwallis, will you try one of these imported cigarettes?"

"Better try one of mine, Harold," said his lordship "A much superior cigarette, I am sure More bouquet and all that sort of thing. Beastly cigarette—most of you Americans smoke'

"Very well, Basil," said the great Oshkosh pitcher Anything to please you, Basil. I'll always call you Basil and you may call me Harold. I ain't no hand for last names. My father was the same way before me The old gent used to say that a man you couldn't call by his first name wasn't worth having for a friend'

"And quite right he was," agreed his lordship, leaning back comfortably in Harold Hangover's favorite chair. "Have you a peg of brandy for me, Harold? Beastly dry weather, this, and I fancy a peg or two wouldn't be half bad'

With all the alacrity in the world our hero set the table with decanter and glasses His friendship with the titled person was progressing rapidly, more rapidly than he had dared hope. He chuckled again as he thought of how he was going to get back at the Four Hundred

"You have a fine library Harold," observed Lord Cornwallis

"I think it fairly reprehensive, said Harold Hangover, rolling out the last word with as much pride as though it were proper. "Yes, I think I may say it is one of the most representative libraries in New York, for its size."

"What do you do with it?" asked his lordship, eyeing Harold curiously. He had noted the word 'reprehensive' and was thinking accordingly

"I find it a great aid to me in my writing," said Harold "You see, Basil, in addition to being a baseball pitcher of more than ordinary skill, I am a poet"

"I never met many poets," said Lord Cornwallis. "The beggars are a wild lot, the few I know You fond of brandy and the fair sex, I should say. One of the bally rotters was entertained at my home once, and he drank up all of my cognac Simply drank me bare. And after the beggar had left I found a stanza that he had written on my window glass. It said

"'I drank your brandy. It all took wings
And went with me right after lunch,
For lords are but the breath of kings,
And poets are a thirsty bunch.'"

"A very neat verse," said our hero. "I must show you some of my poems, Basil. No, I will do better than that. I will write a poem in honor of your arrival and our strong friendship Pardon me for a few moments, and if you wish another peg of brandy, it is at your disposal'

Harold Hangover walked briskly to his writing desk and passed his large paws dreamily through his ruffled locks. This poem he was to write must be a masterpiece, he reflected Seldom had he felt in so poetic a mood Whether it was the cognac or his distinguished visitor's presence he did not know, but he felt strangely inspired. Seizing a pad of paper and his pencil he plunged feverishly into his work

"What do you think of this little gem?" he asked presently, when, leaning about in his chair and facing Lord Cornwallis, his face flushed with pride and his voice trembling with literary enthusiasm "Listen

"To every human some honor comes
Whether that honor is great or small,
And today an honor has come to me
That holds my senses in its thrall
I have met a titled English lord
And grown with him exceedingly chummy.
Lord Cornwallis is not a bit puffed up,
I think he is a grand old rummy.
And when he sails for his English shore
He will know that him I do adore."

"A fairish sort of a poem, for doggerel," observed Lord Cornwallis, "but not a bit like Byron or Keats, I should say. I would much rather watch you pitching baseball, Harold. While you were writing that beastly jingle, sir, I drank up all your cognac. When do you dine? I have a shocking appetite."

RED SOX TAKE ANOTHER FROM BIRMINGHAM'S NAPS, 4 TO 3

Ray Collins Puts One Over for Bill Carrigan and the Champions Make a Clean Sweep of Cleveland Series

Bostonians Put a Most Serious Crimp in the Waning Pennant Chances of the "Naps"—"Get the Jump" and Take Revenge

LEAGUE PARK CLEVELAND Ohio Aug 23.—The Naps lost their third straight game to the Boston Red Sox today, 4 to 3, and suffered their fifth successive defeat, which just about puts them out of the pennant hunt.

The Red Sox announced when they came here Thursday that they intended to put the Naps out of the running for the eight straight defeats they had sustained at the hands of he Naps earlier in the year and they made good their boast.

Five hits off Bending by the first five batters in the nine gave the Red Sox three runs a lead which the Naps strove valiantly to overcome but without success.

Manager Birmingham at a great chance to break up the game in the second when he came to bat with the bases filled, but fanned.

Hooper Starts Bother.

The first inning was a peculiar one, to say the least, the Red Sox contributing five while the Naps made six scores. Hooper started proceedings with a hot single along third. Hooper stole second and despite a pitchout, O'Neil dropping Blanding's offering.

Engle got credit for a single when Turner raced into Chapman's territory for Clyde's bounder but failed to field it. Speaker followed with a single over second which scored Hooper.

Lewis drove a single to right which scored Engle and sent Speaker to third. Blanding intercepted Jackson's throw, headed for the plate, and caught Lewis off first with a quick toss to Olson.

Cullop Relieves Blanding.

With the infield pulled in, Gardner drew the champion's fifth successive single on a vicious smash, which Lajoie intercepted, but could not field.

Then Blanding, Olson and Lajoie all drew assisted when Gardner was caught off first, but Olson spoiled it all by throwing low to Chapman at second, after Lajoie had fouled out.

Wagner ended the round with a bounder to Chapman Birmingham started the Naps' half with a pass, but Chapman pounded into a fast double play, Gardner stopping a vicious smash.

It looked like more runs for the Red Sox in the second, but Nick Cullop stepped into the breach and relieved Blending at the propitious moment. Carrigan lined a single to centre, but was forced by Collins.

After Hooper had fouled to O'Neil, Engle drove the ball to left. It looked like

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 23.—The Rockingham Grand Circuit meeting has gone into turf history as a success to be envied by many another Grand Circuit management. The crowds came and the horses furnished royal sport. Probably the total attendance at the meeting exceeds that of any other harness meeting for several years back. Not an incident marred the cleanness of the sport, an indication of the new leaf which is being turned quite generally in trotting sport. From Salem, N. H., the Grand Circuit drivers have made Hartford their next racing point, and they will have a vacation at Charter Oak Park next week awaiting the Grand Circuit meeting at that track. It is an enforced delay caused by the collapse of the pretty bubble which was floated about the Grand Circuit meeting which was scheduled for Empire City next week and which was to have helped put New York back on the trotting horse map.

For some of the Grand Circuit stables the layoff will be a boon, as the fourth of several starts has been slimmed by the seven weeks of racing they have been through. This was evidenced by the tired attempts of the elsewhere king of Grand Circuit free-for-allers, Braden Direct, when he was last in that event at Rockingham.

"Getaway Day" began under heavy clouds and ended in sunshine. In spite

Marblehead Girl to Try Record Swim

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 23.—Miss Florence Klink, a pretty eighteen-year-old girl, is out to shatter all local distance records for women, by swimming today from Bakers Island to the Salem Willows.

The start will be made at 1 o'clock. Miss Klink, who is the daughter of William Klink, a boat builder, is considered one of the most skilful swimmers in this section and holds several local records.

The young women is confident of her ability to make the distance. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Southworth of Manchester. A power-boat will trail the couple as a safeguard against accident.

Camnitz and Byrne Traded for Dolan

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23.—The Phillies and Pittsburgs pulled off a big trade this afternoon when the "Quakers" gave Infielder Dolan and $1,500 in exchange for Pitcher Howard Camnitz and Third Baseman Bobby Byrne.

PICTURESQUE SCENES AT JUDGE MOORE'S HORSE SHOW AT BEVERLY.

Judge's Horses Winners at London Delight Select Gathering of All the Leaders of North Shore's Most Exclusive Set

Judge William Moore opened his beautiful estate at Prides Crossing yesterday afternoon, for the annual Horse Show at which, in response to many hundreds of invitations beautiful "Look mates" was filled with one of the most brilliant gatherings of the North Shore season. Judge Moore, who has just returned from London, where he was among the blue ribbon winners, with his large stable of thoroughbreds, at the Olympia Royal Horse Show, proved a delightful host. The affair of yesterday concluded successfully with no interesting. Music was furnished from 4 o'clock on.

Among the many guests present were practically all the North Shore Summer colony, as the parking space which encircled some two hundred motors testified. The large tents in the middle of the ring (cut in two by entrance) where the show was held, presented an unusually brilliant scene, while the left hand looking overlooking the private track, was dotted with many handsomely gowned guests.

Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, who drove Judge Moore's four-in-hand, was the observed of all observers, as also was Mrs. Paul Moore, who drove in the phaeton class, were the only society women in the ring.

The Program.

The program was:

Among the most beautiful gowns was that of Miss M. L. Atkinson, who wore a lingerie silk trimmed with white lace and bands of black and white satin, with a black straw hat trimmed with black and white ostrich plumes. She carried a white silk parasol embroidered in black.

Mrs. N. H. Carter looked handsome in a deep rose-colored gown, embroidered in a lighter shade of the same tone. Her coat was of white lace with eerise ribbons and over her wore of the eerise shade of straw adorned with black poppies and white ribbon.

Miss Lee wore pale gray satin with panels of openwork embroidery of white silk and white satin, trimmed with gray chiffon. Her hat was a gray straw done in white plumes, and she carried a gray and white chiffon parasol.

Mrs. J. Ellison appeared in cream

Capt. Stuart Wise Equals Record in Ohio Shoot

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Aug 23.—Captain Stuart W. Wise, of the Massachusetts rifle team, equalled the world's individual record at the Palma ranges in the Herrick match today, when he made a score of 223. Wise gave a wonderful exhibition of shooting. The match was won by the Iowa team which had a total of 1,727. The broke the record for the range by seven points.

Second place was captured by the Massachusetts team, which made a score of 1,702, while the United States cavalry ranked third with a mark of 1,691.

Willard Knock-out Kills "Bull" Young

"White Hope" Ends Career of Opponent in Ring on Pacific Coast.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23.—John "Bull" Young, the giant Wyoming palisman, who was knocked out by Jess Willard in a bout here last night, died today from an upper cut on the chin. Experts stated it was the hardest blow ever struck inside a ring.

The knockout occurred in the seventh round and brought with it the spectre of a fatality.

John "Bull" Young has been boxing only for a few years. He entered the ring game in order to gain a fortune, as he thought that there was more money in being a "white hope" than in roping wild steers on the Western plains.

Young went to the Pacific Coast when he first started boxing. He spent a great deal of his time at the training camps of the star fighters at Venice and San Francisco. He was strong and powerful had a great reach and was game, but did not know the first thing about "the boxing."

The big fellow has by secured several dates for four round bouts in San Francisco and showed up well. He was then signed for semi-final bouts at championship contests and usually gave a fair account of himself.

The Westerner was anxious to gain national fame and started camping on the trail of Jess Willard. Willard is six feet six inches tall and weighs 220 pounds. He has fought "Gunboat" Smith and the throughout the country. He finally got a date for Labor Day. He lost a decision at the end of twenty rounds of fighting to Smith's age he only dated McCarty in a ten round contest in New York.

Miss Fiske Pilots a Beverly Winner

MARION, Aug. 23.—The tenth race of the Beverly Yacht Club was run off this afternoon with a good southwest sailing breeze, but not a large enjoy list of boats. The storm of the early morning prevented many of the boats from making the trip across the bay.

The 21-foot class with only three starters was sent over course number 12, a distance of eleven miles. It was a close race over the triangular course all the way, the hacoona whipping the skate by 44 seconds.

The Sea Coon was the only starter in the sonder class, and when she was off Marblehead she put in there and did not finish.

Miss Isabel Coolidge came across the line first in the Crane class, but she was disqualified for fouling the Champion, which was following her.

Miss Fiske, with the Endeavor, took the day in this class today, heading both the Awahnee and the Vim by over 2m. The Tin Tinker lost a centreboard soon after the start, and did not sail the course.

Quinn and Schmidt Come to Hub Tuesday

Two new recruits will join the Pilgrims Tuesday, Jack Quinn, pitcher, and Charles Schmidt, first baseman, both from the Rochester International League Club. These two players were signed up Thursday by Manager Stallings, who closed the deal from Buffalo.

Quinn, who formerly pitched for the New York Yankees, has been going great guns this season. Schmidt, who is one of the biggest men in baseball, is rated as very fast and a good hitter.

PILGRIMS WIN 8-4 HITTING BATTLE

Beat the Cardinals, 8 to 4, in Final Game of the Series at South End Park—Perdue and Tyler Do the Pitching Honors

Griffith, the New Outfielder, and Bert Whaling Distinguish Themselves with Long Clouts; Maranville the Infield Star

Nothing but good solid slugging on the part of the entire Pilgrim beat enabled the Stallings to make a clean up of the Cardinals' series, for Hub Perdue, who started pitching, was knocked galley west and hit hard enough to lose a dozen games. The savage clouting of Griffith and Whaling, however, offset Perdue's failings and saved the day. The final score was 8 to 4.

While Perdue and Perritt were starred in the pitching options, remained on the firing line, hits a-plenty were made in opportunities for good long at Washington. After Tyler and Harmon had relief duty, the fray took on the appearance of a real ball game, although the St. Louisians was defeated for a couple of counters in one of the innings he officiated.

Young Mr. Griffith, late of New Bedford, was the star of the day, making a homer inside the grounds on one of his attempts and hanging out a solid single on another. The homer in question was credited him, in great part, by the kindness of Tyler, who made a very good attempt to get the ball, running in and letting it bound by him, when he might have gone back and held the smash to a single.

Bert Whaling, who caught until he was slightly spiked in the hand in the seventh, also came in for a big share of the glory as he contributed a very neat big triple in the second inning, when there was [illegible] on base and the Cardinals [illegible] run.

Perdue Poor from Start

At the very start Perdue showed that he should have been doing anything but pitching for Manager Huggins, the first two men to face him, who had not safely and perched on third and first respectively. The next two men [illegible] enough, popped up, and then the Cardinals, instead of waiting to hit [illegible] against they could [illegible]. However Bill Sweeney [illegible] Whaling's throw in time [illegible] yards from home [illegible] and pitched around [illegible] the fray [illegible] were easy.

Konetchy [illegible] was [illegible] singer in the [illegible] and punched one safely to [illegible] [illegible] on to field out and a muffed fly by Sweeney and trotted in when Perritt laced a single out to Griffith.

Whaling got his [illegible] a beauty to the centre [illegible] off the [illegible] arrived at bat with a burning slap to centre. Zinn wouldn't be outdone, and at said gave to right. One of Perritt's slow ones grazed Smith's shirt and the two were crowded. Whaling toward a couple steps, then met one and [illegible] to the right [illegible] the prisoner was [illegible] third. He tried to a moment after when Maranville [illegible]

a long one to right that gave Whitted a chance to make a nifty running catch.

Score Three in Third.

Perdue got his for fair in the next round and when it was over he faded from the scene, though perhaps he will be credited with the game as he was officially in it till McDonald pinch hit for him a spell later, when Boston had taken the fore. Oakes and Mowrey welcomed a couple of slow one with one base swipes. Mowrey's bitting the right field fence and bounding back to Griffith. When the right fielder made an illadvised stab at throwing Oakes out at third, the batter trotted along to second. Honey hoisted a long one to Zinn which let Oakes in but a good throw to [illegible] Mowrey at Sweeney's station. [illegible] Whitted [illegible] that was good for a pair of bases and [illegible] another when Connelly tried [illegible] the ball up with his feet. A [illegible] by O'Leary at Whitted [illegible].

Not at all discouraged by the fact that the game was tied up, the Pilgrims proceeded to [illegible] a couple. Smith slapped one past O'Leary and then Griffith produced his four base, life-saving affair

BERT WHALING, the Pilgrims' catcher, from picture "snapped" at South End Park yesterday.

This assault ended the reign of Perritt and Bob Harmon stepped in. He was a decided improvement for ing Zinn, Smith and McDonald to roll out weakly, though Whaling managed to sandwich in a single.

Fast Fielding Helped Tyler.

George Tyler southpawed his way through the rest of the game and was never in very serious danger from the hostile offence, though a speedy double play, engineered by Sweeney, Maranville and Myers, saved his bacon in a very dangerous situation in the fifth. Again in the seventh a fast play ended a St. Louis attempt to garner a run or two. After two men were down in this session Honey and Whitted singled. The latter's sack went to right and Griffith made a peg to Sweeney at a rate the after Honey. Whitted successfully stored for second. Smith [illegible] the [illegible] ball to Sweeney and it broke away. Seeing it go, Honey departed from third and attempted to reach the platter. Maranville, however, was on the job as usual, recovered the ball and pegged it in to Whaling, who tagged out the big Pole. In a mixup at the plate, the Pilgrim catcher was spiked in the hand and had to retire and let Rariden do the backstopping for the rest of the encounter.

Harmon's bad inning was the fifth. All the trouble started after two were out. Zinn and Griffith were easy, but Smith varied the monotony with a one-sack swipe. Whaling waited them out. Tyler landed a rescue single which pushed Smith across. Maranville then thought it his turn to do a little batting and chopped out a left-field double which tallied the catcher. Myers, however, ended it by popping up one that Wingo lost in the sun then found again and caught on the dead run.

After this the Pilgrims were not over anxious and never threatened the plate, while Tyler held the hostiles in the palm of his hand.

CHICAGO SOX WIN FROM ATHLETICS

Hammer Two Philadelphia Pitchers and Win Game, 7 to 4.

CHICAGO, Aug 23.—The White Sox hit both Brown and Bush hard with and without men on bases today and beat the Athletics 7 to 4 in the final game of the series.

The Sox scored two in the first and three in the third and there was never much doubt after that. Connie Mack was hard up for pitchers and sent the veteran Barry Davis behind the bat. The Sox [illegible] He managed [illegible] the pitched balls and that let him out.

Yanks Split Games with Detroit Tigers

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 23.—Frank Chance and his weary band of Yankees left for Cleveland tonight after splitting a double-header with the Tigers. Jennings' crew took the first, 8 to 1, and lost the second, 4 to 2.

In the first Dubuc proved that he is still an enigma to the cellar denizens. He allowed them but five, very much scattered hits and struck out five. The Tigers batted Fisher hard throughout, piling up thirteen hits.

In the second Cole outpitched both Lake and Hall. The Yanks tallied twice in the second and added two more in the third off successive hits by Maisel, [illegible] Cree and Zeider. Both of the first two showed clever base running during the game.

Detroit tallied in the third off hits by Cobb and Crawford. In the eighth, with two down, Cobb tripled and scored when Zeider fumbled.

Senators Rally and Beat Browns, 4 to 2

ST. LOUIS, Aug 23.—A batting rally by the Senators in the ninth inning gave them the final game of the series with the Browns this afternoon, by the score of 4 to 2. Engle pitched for Washington for the first eight innings, when he retired to give way to a pinch hitter, and Hughes finished the game. Baumgardner went the entire route for the Browns.

Washington made one run in the first inning, when Moeller, first man up, hit into the bleachers for a home run.

The other three runs were made in the ninth inning on singles by Gandil, Morgan, Shanks, McBride, Williams batting for Engel, and Moeller. The Browns made one run in the first inning.

RED SOX WIND UP WITH THE 'NAPS'

Cullop then relieved Blanding and filled the bases by hitting Speaker, but a moment later he knocked down Lewis' terrific smash and threw him out.

Three errors helped the Naps in their half. With two strikes against him Engle picked out a slow ball and sent it to centre, the ball bounding past Tris for a triple. Olson's single to left scored Larry, and Olson reached second on Lewis' fumble.

After Turner had flied to Yerkes, Speaker muffed Graney's fly and the bases were filled when O'Neill beat out a bounder to Wagner, Olson cutting off Heinie's view of the ball in running to third.

Cullop was instructed to bunt, and did so directly at Collins, but instead of an easy double play resulting Collins tossed high to Carrigan, and Olson scored. Collins escaped further damage when Birmingham fanned and Chapman flied to Hooper.

Sox Come Back for More Runs.

Wagner was hit on the shin in the third, but that was all, while for the Naps Lajoie singled only to be doubled up on the hit and the run, Olson's fly to Hooper.

The fourth found Hooper getting on through an infield single, but he was left when Engle and Speaker fouled out. Turner making a sensational catch of Tris' pop. O'Neil tripled in the Naps' half, but two were out at the time and Cullop furnished the third out.

The Boston boys got the scoring habit in the fifth. Lewis singled to centre, was sacrificed to second by Gardner and scored on Yerkes' double over Graney's head.

On Wagner's bounder Chapman made a fast throw to Turner, retiring Yerkes at third; Heinie died stealing. Not a Nap reached first in the fifth, while the Red Sox shared the same fate in the sixth. Collins got the Naps in order again in their half.

With one down in the seventh Speaker singled to left and Lewis drew a Cincinnati base hit on his bounder to Turner, who, figuring that Speaker would not stop at second as the hit and run sign was out, made a 1,7 throw to first and then touched out Tris as he fished for third.

Naps Lost Great Chance in Seventh.

The Naps had a great chance in their half when, with one down, Yerkes' fumble, saved O'Neill and Cullop's first hit as a leaguer, a pop over Engle's head, sent O'Neill to third, but Birmingham's line drive was right at Engle and he made an unassisted double play.

Graney robbed Wagner of a triple by a sensational catch in the eighth, after which Carrigan doubled, but the Red Sox leader was left when Collins fanned for the third time before Cullop's tantalizers.

Chapman drew a pass, but the Naps wrecking crew was helpless before Collins.

Speaker doubled in the ninth after two were out, but was left when Birmingham robbed Lewis of a triple.

Return to Editor of Swimming Carnival, Boston American, 80 Summer St., Boston.

Anxious to capture first prize in the AMERICAN'S swimming carnival, to be held in the Charles River next Saturday from [illegible] members of the Carson Beach Swimming Club of [illegible] have entered their favorite, Miss Rose McCarthy, sixteen, of No. [illegible] street, Dorchester.

There is [illegible] rivalry between the [illegible] swimming girls and those from Carson Beach, and the indications are that the former will have to move fast to beat the latter.

East Boston Girls Entered.

East Boston is again to the fore and a number of the girls noted for their [illegible] stunts at Wood Island Park have entered the carnival. Miss Isabel G. [illegible] one of their number, writes: [illegible] [illegible] be seventeen years and just four days before the races.

Instructor William Murray of Wollaston Beach has several wonderful girl swimmers that he will enter in the race and he is confident his proteges will make a fine showing. Murray has been [illegible] the girl swimmers at Wollaston this Summer and believes he has a champion.

DON'T FORGET THAT THE RACES WILL BE ABSOLUTELY FREE TO ALL.

No Entrance Fee Charged.

The entrance for the race is FREE. All a girl has to do is to fill out the coupon and return it to the Editor of the Swimming Carnival, Boston AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, and she will become entered in the [illegible].

The entry list closes Wednesday at 5 P. M.

The course is the same as that of last year, namely from the Metropolitan Park Commission's float opposite the Union Boat Clubhouse on the Boston esplanade, up stream to the stake boat which will bear the letter "S," turn the stake boat, leaving it to the left, and return down stream to the starting point. The distance is one and one-half miles and 200 feet.

10,000 Enjoy Hull Day

Sports Feature Outing

Jimmy Gallivan, Jr., who captained the Bayside Boys baseball team to big victory at Gala Day. The Street Commissioner's son played behind the bat and showed signs of the ability that made his father a Harvard star back in the 80's.

South Shore society turned out en masse yesterday to see the Town of Hull outdo itself. And just as [illegible] past four years Hull did [illegible] expected. This was Hull's fifth Annual Gala Day and it was one long [illegible] enjoyable day of mirth, music, excitement and good fellowship. There were many splendid features, including the wonderful fireworks with which the good towns people topped off their activity.

The politicians were there too. James A. Gallivan, street commissioner of Boston, together with "Billy" T. A. Fitzgerald handed the [illegible] of nearly ten thousand [illegible] Beacon Hill and [illegible] were well represented and [illegible] the politicians [illegible] from everywhere, who knew [illegible] experiences that [illegible] store for them.

It was a [illegible] day for [illegible] free movies, free candy, free [illegible]. Each boy and girl was given a huge bag of candy, a free [illegible] banner and all kinds of medals.

No one was forgotten. It was Hull's open house day and [illegible] swung wide open. The grown people were cared for just as well as the youngsters. They had their big time at the [illegible] Garden Friday night when a most successful hop was given the [illegible] under the personal direction of Mrs. James Gallivan.

Started Early, Ended Late.

The celebration started at 9 in the morning with the junior events on the Bayside grounds. Following came the ball games and aquatic sports [illegible] balloon ascension. Fireworks [illegible] brought the Gala Day to a [illegible].

Young Jimmy Gallivan, Jr., [illegible] honors of the day as a ball [illegible] showed form that opened the [illegible] of many a veteran. He captained his Bayside boys team to a fine victory. The noted Gleason sisters of Tenean Beach were also there with their swimming exhibitions and won great applause.

The ball game between the Atlantic House of Nantasket and the Baysides of Hull was another feature and was witnessed by nearly three thousand people. The aquatic sports were ably [illegible] by Arthur McGill and proved of great interest. Stephen J. Moran was chairman of the ball team committee. William H. Brine looked after the children's prizes. James A. Gallivan supervised the youthful ball players. Thomas [illegible] looked after all the "kids." John W. [illegible] looked after the balloon [illegible]. The band was cared for by Fred Quinn and the fireworks display was in charge of James McCarthy. All did their work in fine fashion.

The ball game was won by the Atlantic House of Nantasket after an interesting ten-inning game. The score was nine to eight. Gleason knocked out a triple, bringing in the winning run.

The Bayside Juniors, consisting of boys under eleven years of age, won from the Allerton Juniors by a score of thirteen to twelve. The Bayside Midgets won from the Allerton Midgets by a score of sixteen to two. The Allerton boys, under eighteen, won from the Wayland team six to one.

The winners of the water sports were: [illegible] L. F. Snow, [illegible] J. J. McCaffrey, 2nd, [illegible] Fitzgerald; [illegible] Mary McFadden, 2nd, [illegible] Moran; [illegible] 1st, G. McCaffrey, 2nd, F. [illegible]; [illegible] 14—1st, M. Coffey, 2nd, M. Cotter, [illegible].

The [illegible] sisters with May Hurley, [illegible], Frances Payson and [illegible] Beach girls gave an interesting swimming and fancy diving exhibition.

Wiley Wins Title Motor Paced Race

Collins Breaks Collarbone in Championship Contest at Revere.

George Wiley of Syracuse retained his [illegible] as world's champion pace follower at Revere last night, defeating Worth Mitten of Davenport, Iowa, by 5 laps, in 1 hour, 8 minutes and 16 2-5 seconds. The race was marked by two accidents, Elmer Collins of Lynn breaking his collar bone in a spill on the 11th mile and Jimmy Moran, of Chelsea, bruising his hip by a tumble in the 23rd mile.

Wiley led in [illegible] all the race except for a short time in the 23rd mile when a puncture allowed Mitten to take the lead. It was short lived, however, as a flat tire also put out the Western flyer and let Wiley take a big lead, which was never threatened.

At the conclusion of the race Jack Conway boxing editor of the Boston AMERICAN presented Wiley with the championship medal. Clarence Carmen challenged Wiley after the race and the pair will meet Tuesday night.

L. P. Rollins, of Everett, won the half mile handicap, Pat Logan, the unlimited Australian pursuit race, and F. Herbert, of Fall River, the five-mile amateur open. The summary:

JOE SILVA WINS THREE-MILE RACE

Eagles Track Games at Caledonian Grove Is Poorly Conducted.

By T. J. HALPIN.

The combined orders of Eagles of Greater Boston held their annual Field Day at Caledonian Grove yesterday. The meet was poorly attended on account of the threatening weather. It was also a poorly officiated meet, and the athletic events dragged all afternoon, the trouble being in an argument over the 100-yard race. The first two heats were found to have been run over a 90 yard course, this caused the low mark men to protest to Referee J. Frank Facey. After carefully measuring the course he wisely decided to allow the men who did not place in the first two heats to run over again. This found six men in the final heat which was won by O. Marble of North Dorchester A. A., who had a fine mark of six yards. Grainger of the Brookline gymnasium was second with five yards.

The mile run was a pretty race between [illegible] men who fought it out among themselves. There was considerable [illegible] and crowding done on the different turns. H. Pree of Brookline, who had a mark of 1,000 yards, won with a good burst of speed. The time was fairly fast for the track.

The half mile run found Burke defeated by McGrath, who is running unattached. McGrath had a mark of forty-[illegible] yards and after allowing several [illegible] men to lead, he went [illegible] on the last lap and [illegible] Burke to cut down the [illegible] four yards in the fine time of [illegible], which is very fast for the track. Burke was second.

The three-mile run proved to be one of the best events of the afternoon. Silva, the veteran B. A. A. distance runner, was scratch, while he was giving away a distance equal to the entire length of the track, so that some of the limit men were starting on the same mark as scratch runners. Silva ran a fine race, and not only won in 15:22 2-5s. but succeeded in lapping the second man.

The 440 yard event was a scramble for positions, and Powell was virtually scratch man, with nine yards, for he found himself unable to get through the [illegible] Herbert MacDonald who had a good mark of twenty-five yards, won by several yards. Desaulniers, who is considerably handicapped by the loss of one arm, was third on this event, after [illegible] nearly all the way. His work received a storm of applause from the spectators. The summary:

100-Yard Dash—O. L. Marble 1st, G. G. Grainger 2d, J. Phelan 3rd. Time—10 2-5s.

One-mile Run—H. Pree 1st, D. J. Mahoney 2nd, J. H. Harrington 3rd. Time 4:28 1-5.

Three-Mile Run—J. Silva 1st, C. Horne 2nd, J. H. Harrigan 3rd. Time—15:22 2-5.

SPORTS FEATURE FORESTERS' DAY

Fat Men's Race Provides Much Mirth at Big Outing at Lexington.

More than 5,000 people were present at the annual picnic and field day of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, held yesterday at Lexington Park. Fathers and mothers, aunts and uncles, cousins, grandparents and children made up the assembled multitude. Foresters with their friends and relatives were present from all over Massachusetts. Boston, Charlestown, Chelsea, Winthrop, Malden, Everett, Hyde Park, Dedham, Canton, Sharon, Quincy, Braintree, Brockton, Whitman, were some of the Massachusetts cities represented. Almost every court in the State had a representative on the scene.

The day was spent enjoying the Zoo, witnessing the performances at the open-air theatre, taking in the electric arcade, various amusements, and in watching the sports. The young folks especially found greatest pleasure in this feature, which took up a great part of the day. Baseball games came in for their share of the entertainment, and many fast plays and exciting situations kept the onlookers in a fever of excitement at times.

The members of the committee in charge of arrangements were showered with congratulations for the splendid way in which the entire program was run off without a mishap.

Following are the results of the sports:

50-YARD DASH (For boys under 15 years)—[illegible]

SHOE LACING CONTEST—[illegible] second, James Burke.

Winchester Defeats All-Woburn Team

Winchester and her old rivals the All Woburns met on the diamond at Winchester, yesterday afternoon, and Winchester won by the score of 3 to 2. The All Woburns lost the game by several bonehead plays in the infield. Mulrenan, who was given a try-out for the major league in Boston Friday morning, was in the box for the All Woburns and pitched a good game. If he had had good support he would have pulled the team through a winner. There was an immense crowd on the field, and the fifth regiment band gave a concert in the band stand during the play.

WAGNER STAR IN E. BOSTON MEET

Leo Handy Wins Half Mile Swim in Wood Island Races.

Contests were keen in the water carnival of the East Boston Swimming Club at Wood Island Park yesterday afternoon where several thousand people watched the races and diving contests.

Open and club events were held. Fred Wagner of the home club being the high point man, winning second place in 100-yard swim for members, and in the mile for members and in the 440-yard dash he captured the first prizes.

Benjamin Levias of Roxbury surprised the contestants and officials in the mile and one-half open when he finished first with a good lead over Bernard Murphy of the Brookline Gym, and George Meehan of the Brookline Swimming Club. The winner had a start of nine minutes on Meehan, while Murphy started four minutes before the Brookline crack.

The four leaders in the club mile were all close at the finish, Wagner just winning from Joseph Duke and Thomas Morris.

Leo Handy can now claim the championship of New England for the half mile distance, the B. G. A. A. man having a good lead over his rival, Thomas Nelligan, of the B. S. C., and Peter Reed, of the B. S. C. finished third. The summary:

Herald Jrs. Defeat Dudley Team, 6 to 1

The Boston Herald Junior baseball team defeated the fast Dudley A. A. of Newton yesterday on the latter's grounds by a score of 6 to 1. The game was a pitchers' battle till the eighth, when Doyle, pitching for the home team, blew up and allowed the newspaper men enough hits to score five runs and thereby sew up the game. The features of the contest were the playing of Gallagher, Mellville and Weldmann for the winners, while Doherty and Murray deported themselves well for the losers.

ROCKINGHAM FAIR ENDS WITH RACES

of the overnight rain and the breaking of traffic schedules owing to the belief that the storm had served the purpose of cutting out the fifth day's racing and attendance of any size at Salem there was a crowd of more than 10,000.

Straight heat racing was the development over a track slowed considerably by the sogginess of the footing. None of the winners was in serious danger of losing a heat at any stage of the racing.

Baring Wins 2.19.

Baring, which won two races on the Pine Tree circuit and took a record of 2.12¼ at Bangor, was the star of the 2:19 trot, and served to scare out all of the sizeable entry but two, Saranac, owned by Martin Healey of Lynn, and Gambetta Moko of Robert Proctor's stable. Cox raced Baring very wide miles in all three trips and won as he pleased. Healey was well content to secure second money with his Todd stallion. Baring is owned by Sanford Small of Boston, and is up to trotting a mile in 2:10, as evidenced in one of the Tavern "Steak" preliminaries at Cleveland, in which he was beaten less than a foot in 2:09 and a fraction.

Derby Worthy, winner of the 2:05 class for three year olds, was Cox's second winner of the day and served to boost the winnings of the New Hampshire reinsman to $4,500 for the week. Derby Worthy had J. D. S. as his chief contender, the same colt that forced the Axworthy youngster to trot the Augusta half mile track the preceeding week in 2:19¼.

Kick Against Time.

In the afternoon's race Derby Worthy's best time was 2:19¾ in the second heat. The first heat was hung out at 2:15¾ [illegible] turned out to be an error of some five seconds or more. Cox went into the stand to correct it and blanks were hung out, indicating no time taken.

In this three-year-old race there was big expectation that Tommy Murphy would parade a very good one in George Rex, but the lusty little black stallion was last all the way in the opener and no better than third in the final, when Tuna Z fell back last after a tired break.

Howtella Injured.

The gathering of seven pacers in the 2:14 pace furnished the thrills of the afternoon and most of the guessing. Natalie's victory made it a cleanup of the card by graduates from the Maine half mile track racing. In the five-heat race that she won at Augusta last week she stepped in 2:17½. Harvey C. was winner of the first two heats, with one in 2:13¾. Yesterday Natalie paced the heavy mile ring in 2:14½ the second heat, chased by Billie H., the gray wiggler from Worcester. Harvey C. figured only in the first round, when he [illegible] second. Kid Downing, only one of the seven who were tried without the pajamas, was sent to the barn after the second heat by wave of the red banner. The third heat was disastrous to the pacer Howtella, driven by James O'Brien, the Lynn reinsman. At the three eighths pole the mare was seen to stop short in her tracks, as though she had broken down. She was able to hobble off the track, and it was reported a pastern bone was broken. She was bought for upwards of $700 at the last Indianapolis sale.

Prominent Winners.

The prominent winners of the week have been Judson Girl, Lady Grattan, Baring and Derby Worthy for Cox, Tiny Tipton, Marigold, Peter Volo and Frank Bogash, Jr., for Tommy Murphy, Dillon Axworthy for Joe Serrill, Walter Cochato for Legg, James W. for Sprague, Peter Sims for Mr Lasell, Add F. for Lester Dore, Lew Perkins for Hugh Milam, Earl, Jr., for Milloy, Natalie for Martin, and Bon Ton for Merrifield.

Yankee and German Boats Tune Up for Big Races

Yachting Experts Size Up the Rival Sonders

Foreign Built Craft Appear Like Heavy Weather Workers and Wind May Play Big Part in the International Races

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

In anticipation of the international sonder races for the President Wilson [illegible] at Marblehead between the American and German teams yachtsmen yesterday made a critical examination of the design and rig of the six boats at Marblehead, where they have been tuning up for the past week. The German sonders are now hauled out for the finishing touches.

The German boats have yet to show any extreme speed, although they haven't been pushed much. The boats have been carefully sailed since their arrival at Marblehead and no good insight into just what they can do has been given.

From the boats' work, however, they look like a lot of heavy weather sonders, but not very speedy in [illegible]. Of course, Marblehead weather [illegible] be fitful at this time of the year with an even break of choppy seas, light air and a good, stiff, wholesail breeze.

How Rival Sonders Compare.

One of the Germans is an extreme scow, reminding one of the sloop Goldenrod of the Boston Yacht Club which is anchored nearby at Marblehead Harbor. Anyone that has ever seen the Goldenrod slide on the wind, knows just what a scow type of boat will do when there [illegible] to put it down on one side and keep it there. There is nothing faster in a good stiff breeze than a scow type of boat.

It seems from the general appearance of the three Germans that the designers have followed pretty closely the lines of the American sonders that raced over there a couple of years ago and brought back the Prince Henry gold cup. "Bob" Emmons at that time left his sonder Bibelot, one of the winners [illegible], selling it to a German syndicate [illegible] from the design of [illegible] sonders, the [illegible] have furnished the basis of [illegible].

The Sunday AMERICAN [illegible] today to give the opinion of a designer of one of the American boats, W. Starling Burgess, regarding the Germans now at Marblehead. Mr. Burgess is the designer of the Ellen that has created a world's record for wins and is about the best sonder out this year.

Mr. Burgess said last night:

The German sonders are of an absolute different type from those that have been over here in years past. Last year's sonders or those of the year that the Germans came over here to race, were of a type called a bulge or scow variety, which naturally had no specific speed qualifications.

The sonders this season are narrower, sharper and [illegible] than heretofore. They are much more speedy in [illegible] weather but are not so [illegible] windward work.

In some instances the Germans may make good, but on the other hand in light weather they will, I believe, be up against it.

The six sonders are a little more than twenty-two feet on the water line, and are [illegible], more or less than [illegible]. The American team of the Ellen, Sprig and Cima represent the work of three of the foremost designers in the small boat game in this country.

Our Skippers the Best.

E. A. Boardman who designed the Sprig, has been designing this type of boat for years, and has always had one of the fastest in the races.

Charles Mower, who designed the Cima for Guy Lowell last year, demonstrated his skill for this same boat this year against a lot of new boats, and made good taking a place on the team after a good week of trial races.

The Ellen is from Mr. Burgess' designing table.

The Ellen went out this year and won the Quincy cup; won three races in one day in the elimination trials creating a world's record and is still winning races.

The skippers of the three American boats have all had experience in the international sonder boat game. Lowell of the Cima, C. P. Curtis, former Police Commissioner of Boston, who sails the Ellen, and J. L. Saltonstall, who owns the Sprig, and R. de B. Boardman, who sails it, know the "ins and outs" of sonder [illegible].

Races to Start Labor Day.

The three designers Boardman, Burgess and Mower, will also be aboard the three boats and this will help some in defence of the President Wilson trophy.

The races start off Marblehead on Labor Day and races will be [illegible] Monday, September 1, Tuesday [illegible], Thursday, September [illegible], September 5, Monday, September [illegible] sail off September [illegible].

The men in charge of the races are [illegible] Eastern Yacht Club [illegible] American Race Committee [illegible] Henry Howard [illegible] Charles Francis Adams 2d, of the sonder Harpoon, who tried for a place on the American team, but failed; Louis M. Clark and "Bob" Emmons.

Two courses will be used, both of six miles. One will be a triangle of two miles to a leg, and a leeward and windward course of three miles to windward or leeward and return.

These pictures show what Sonder boats really are. They are merely skim-abouts, with long overhanging body and short, deep fin keels. These craft are believed to be the best Sonder boats afloat.

DENEA WINNER AT NEW BEDFORD

Defeats Classy Field of One-Design Boats at Padanaram.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 23.—The Denea, owned and sailed by Captain Thomas Talbot, won the regular weekly [illegible] of the one design Apponagansett yacht [illegible] at Padanaram this afternoon. [illegible] Channing came in second in his Owiee while the Xema was the third boat to cross the finish line out of a field of six starters.

In the Xema there were two girls, Miss Helen Snow and Miss Elizabeth Swift, and they alternated in holding the tiller.

There was much rivalry between Miss Swift and her younger brother, Ezra, who is skipper of the Aloha, but it has been called off, as it is agreed that Miss Swift clearly demonstrated her superiority as a sailor in the race today.

It is the intention of Miss S[illegible] and Miss Swift to sail in a [illegible] held by the club during the [illegible] the racing season. [illegible] Brownell was seen back in [illegible] having been out [illegible] showed [illegible] took a [illegible] wars.

Priscilla Smith Wins Catboat Race

GLOUCESTER, Aug. [illegible].—"[illegible] fellers, them gals sure kin handle them boats better than the men," said Captain Tom Overlock, as he stood on the float of the Annisquam Yacht Club and watched little Priscilla Smith, the pride of the [illegible] her fifteen-knot cat boat across the [illegible] this afternoon after one of the closest races of the season.

And right he was, for [illegible] season, there have been no races in the catboat class which have been won by mere men, and the old timers in the game are wondering when it will cease. With less than a half minute to spare, the Meow II came dashing up the river and across the finish line with the bow of the Catspaw nearly touching her stern, but still far enough in the lead [illegible] to be [illegible] a winner. Three Class Races at Gloucester

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 23.—Only a small number of yachts started in today's race off the East Gloucester Yacht Club, but what boats did start certainly did have some fine sailing before the course was completed.

With a heavy southwest wind filling their sails and with as much sail crowded on as they could hold, the little fleet of sailing boats went over that course in about as quick a time as they ever have before.

On the outward reach the boats all got the gun and away they went in a bunch, never pulling away until well on the beat from the whistling buoy to Norman's Woe buoy, when the Winsome in the eighteen foot class took a slight lead over her rivals, and although closely pressed by the Privateer II she came across the finish line a winner by a very few seconds.

BOSTON YACHTS END REGATTA

Brisk Breeze Make Closing Races Best of Meeting. Many Craft Disabled.

The last day of the midsummer series of the Boston Yacht Club was sailed yesterday at Hull in a wholesail breeze that gave the boats all the wind they needed, in fact, carried away parts of their rigging and had to withdraw from the race. There were sixty-seven starters.

The races were started over an outside course off Allerton. The Cima, one of the members of the American team of sonders that will race with the Germans on Labor Day at Marblehead, was disabled in the race. The Ellen, another member of the American team, won in her class.

George Owen, designer of the Class P boats that are being raced around Massachusetts Bay, sailed his new production, Sayonara, owned by V. F. West of Portland, and won. This is the second race Owen has won with the boat this week.

LARGE FIELDS IN NEWTON GOLF PLAY

Many Kinds of Competition Are Played at the Many Links.

All of the Newton courses were crowded yesterday with golfers seeking diversion on the sward. The links were in fine shape after the rain of the night before and were conducive to good scoring. Good sized fields played in all the events and competition for the leading place in [illegible] was extremely keen.

At the Woodland Golf Club in Auburndale two classes played in a medal handicap tournament in which prizes were up for the best net in both sections. In Class A J. W. Gahan turned in a 77—12—65, which gave him the best net. He was seconded by Frank W. Lawrence with 77—10—67, and these two players were the only contestants to break 77 net. Their gross scores of 77 were also the best of their class. In Class B, E. J. Frost won with 89—15—74 and J. J. Donovan was second with 93—15—78.

The team match for members of the Brae Burn Country Club attracted a small field of [illegible] than sixteen players [illegible] five points [illegible] close battles [illegible]

[illegible] Country Club of [illegible] Fenham and H. W. [illegible] for the first net honors with [illegible] respective scores [illegible] 17, 67, and 91, 24, 67. [illegible] 79 was the only [illegible] to break 80.

Sweepstakes, which was the kind of golf played at Chestnut Hill, gave first net prize to F. R. Parks, who had 86—15—71 for a score. This just bettered F. W. Tully by one stroke. A gross prize was won by A. M. Crosby who had a 75, which just made him eligible for one of the medals which Chestnut Hill always gives for a gross of 75 or better.

MRS. OAKES AMES TENNIS WINNER

Defeats Miss Pauline Pollard for Title in Magnolia Play.

MAGNOLIA, Aug. 23.—The finals in two matches were played here today before a good gallery. The first match of the day was the semi-final in the mixed doubles between Mr. H. S. McKee and Miss P. Pollard vs. Mr. J. W. Foster and Miss E. Stevens, and the result was a surprise to many, Mr. Foster and Miss Stevens winning, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3.

In the first set Miss Pollard's service was very much off form and resulted in loss of many points. Much credit is due Miss Stevens for her excellent volleying at the net. In the second set Mr. McKee served with terrific speed and accuracy, Miss Pollard's well directed and opportune lobs keeping Miss Stevens well back in the court, giving her but few net plays. The set went to Miss Pollard and Mr. McKee, 6—3.

In the last and deciding set Mr. Foster played a placing game, driving the ball repeatedly to the base line and corners for many points. The style of game seemed to tire their opponents and Mr. Foster and Miss Stevens took the set 6—3, thus winning the match.

Ames-Woodbury Win Title.

Oakes Ames and L. D. Woodbury battled A. Morrill and K. L. Moore for the men's doubles championship. Ames and Woodbury won the title by their superior playing in all departments of the game, always having their opponents at their mercy. Throughout the match Morrill had trouble with his service, losing many points this way. Woodbury's fast work at the net was the feature of the match, for scarcely ever did he lose a point when he volleyed. The score of the sets was 6—3, 6—1, 6—1.

Mrs. Ames Is Champion.

In the afternoon with a bright sun shining overhead and a large gallery of enthusiasts on hand, Mrs. Oakes Ames and Miss Pauline Pollard fought for the ladies' singles championship. Mrs. Oakes Ames secured the first leg on the challenge cup by defeating Miss Pollard two out of three sets, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4. Miss Pollard and Mrs. Ames both won their first games on their service, returns into the net being frequent.

In the third and deciding set it was evident that Mrs. Ames was improving as the match proceeded. Miss Pollard got an advantage, 2—1, but Mrs. Ames recovered her stride in the following game, which went to deuce five times. From then on it was evident that Mrs. Ames would be the winner. The summary:

LADIES' SINGLES FINAL

Mrs. Oakes Ames defeated Miss Pauline Pollard, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4.

MEN'S DOUBLES FINAL

Oakes Ames and L. D. Woodbury defeated A. Morrill and K. L. Moore, 6—3, 6—1, 6—1.

MIXED DOUBLES SEMI-FINAL

J. W. Foster and Miss E. Stevens defeated H. S. McKee and Miss Pauline Pollard, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3.

Press Club to Hold Golf Tournament

The annual invitation golf tournament, under the auspices of the Boston Press Club, which will be held next week, beginning Monday, on the course of Belmont Springs Country Club, at Belmont, gives promise of being one of the biggest golf events of the season. Many of the best players in Massachusetts have already entered and the competition for the big trophy donated by General Charles H. Taylor of the Globe will be a notable one.

In addition to the big trophy the publishers of the Post, Journal, Advertiser and AMERICAN have contributed massive silver trophies of exceptional design for the several competitions and these will be awarded in the qualifying round on Monday.

Today will be devoted to the qualification round of eighteen holes, and the players will qualify in flights of sixteen each.

The cup donated by the Boston AMERICAN stands over ten inches in height, of Grecian design, with three handles. It is beautifully adorned with suitable scrolls and is appropriately worded. It will become the permanent property of the winner of one of the flights. The runner up in each division will be given a medal.

Waltham Soccerites Defeat Carters, 2-0

NEEDHAM, Aug. 23.—The Waltham soccer football team defeated the Carter Falcons on the Carter Athletic Field this afternoon by a score of 2 to 0. McLeod and Robb were the mainstay of the home team, while McShane and Burdett excelled for Waltham.

EVERETT CRICKETERS WIN.

Everett won a closely contested game from the West India Wanderers in their return fixture at Franklin Park yesterday by 47 runs to 44.

The bowling of Roe for Everett and Alleyne for the Indians was the feature of the game, Roe getting six wickets for seventeen runs and Alleyne seven for twenty. Standeven of Everett took batting honors, scoring nineteen runs not out. Bynoe was highest batter for the losers, scoring fourteen.

STOCK MARKETS WERE DULL, FIRM AND PROFESSIONAL AT THE WEEK'S FINAL SESSION

Uncertainty as to Mexican Situation Militated Against Active Trading—Supply of Securities Was Small—Very Little Interest Was Shown by Investors—General Trade Reported Briks

By W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, Aug 23—Stocks were firm at the end of the week, prices being a shade higher at the close of the final session But trading was dull and professional. Most operators were awaiting for something to develop which would give the market some motive. Conditions had not changed during the week, except that fear grew that relations between this country and Mexico would become more strained. There is deep interest in financial circles as to what President Wilson will say to Congress in his forthcoming message

W. H. ROSS

During the week-end session there was not much business in the Boston market and many usually active issues showed no price change at all With few exceptions stocks in which there were fluctuations closed at an advance. It averaged little and had no importance, except to indicate what the tone was like.

Boston & Maine rose a point, as did Calumet & Arizona New Haven closed a fraction lower here and a shade higher in New York. Most of the trading attention was devoted to "rights" Proceedings, in fact, were as uninteresting as the market was dull. No concern was manifested by the public.

The New York market presented very little to command attention. The local one was a reflex of it Prices were higher at the opening. This was partly because of the speculative view taken of affairs at Washington. It is believed more than ever that President Wilson controls the legislative situation and will be able to obtain at this session the currency enactment he wants.

May Win Banking Support.

According to reports from Chicago, bankers who have assembled there to discuss the measure are not in accord. A powerful faction is disposed to credit the Administration with a disposition to make some concessions to banking interests; and it is understood that the President will have influential support if he will listen to appeals for moderate alterations in the Glass-Owen bill It appears that the President will be able to control his party in the House and that so-called radicals are making a hopeless fight. They typify the spirit which Mr. Bryan used to represent when the party leader The Secretary of State seems to be wholly dominated by his chief and now willing to trail as a follower

The early demand and rise in Canadian Pacific was attributed to buying orders from London The Stock Exchange in that city was closed because of a holiday and British speculators who were not content to remain idle had to operate in others. It lost some of its initial gain, but closed strong There was a scant supply of stocks. Offerings were few and quickly absorbed.

Issues That Inspired Gossip.

Some specialties were comparatively active as well as strong. American Locomotive was an example. It closed 1¾ higher Its price reflected its recent earnings. Virginia Carolina Chemical was up more than two points at the end. Illinois Central made a large gain on few transactions. Steel and Union Pacific were a little higher and Southern Pacific a trifle lower. Reading was unchanged Business in coppers was limited, but they were strong as a group Among railroads, Chesapeake & Ohio was notable for strength It had attained nearly a point advance at the close. The small supply of Reading and Union Pacific is regarded as some evidence there has been persistent accumulation of both. Banking interests are credited with making it. Market gossip was to the effect that the United States Steel Corporation's report for August will be better than those for the preceding Summer months. Statements concerning general business were about all encouraging and served as sentimental props for stocks. But if trade is favorable as to bulk there is reiteration of the complaint regarding small profits It is argued in answer that American manufacturers and merchants are now entering upon a new era and must be content with smaller gains

Corn Damage Causes Dispute.

The amount of damage done to corn is a matter of dispute, but all authorities are of the opinion that the crop will be below the average of recent years. Whether they are to be benefited or harmed by the presaged changes, all business interests are exceedingly anxious to have the pending tariff bill passed and uncertainty removed as soon as possible.

Buyers are thronging big centres and indications are that Fall trade will be good. The droughts has not daunted Western optimists Crops in general are going to provide farmers with vast purchasing power, even if they do not harvest as much as they did a year ago.

Railroad business on the whole is all that might be expected, but roads are making only such extensions and improvements as are imperative. If they could get a little higher rates there would be a demand for steel and other materials, which would give business a tremendous boost A change of policy on the part of the commerce commission would be the greatest boon to business, railroad managements claim, that could be conceived of. But shippers will have to express the same sentiment as a class, perhaps, before the interstate board will experience a change of heart or view.

Stock Market in a Rut.

As regards the immediate outlook for the stock market, good judges of security movements do not look for an active market at once They expect it to remain in a rut for awhile. Prices are low, but investors are in no hurry to take advantage of that condition There has been some heavy realizing by the professional contingent, it is thought, and it is questionable if prices can remain around the present level unless more demand springs up. A considerable element expects the Wilson administration to be a period of expansion if not one of inflation, and regard an upturn in valuations as a natural sequence of currency and tariff legislation, if there can also be positive assurance that affairs with Mexico will get no worse. The situation south of the Rio Grande is regarded more seriously in Europe than in this country apparently.

There has been an improvement in the bond market of late, and this had encouraged bankers and others

BONDS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Small investors are offered the same opportunity for placing money as are enjoyed by capitalists by the Guarantee Trust Inc., a Massachusetts corporation with banking rooms at No. 8 Congress street. It is offering for popular subscription ten-year 6 per cent. coupon bonds of $100 each. One reason why France is one of the richest countries in the world, per capita, is because of the encouragement to be thrifty offered its people by the issue of bonds of small denominations. There is a movement toward the same end in this country, which promises to have much financial influence. The Guarantee Trust Inc. is one of its pioneers The bonds it offers are based on real estate in "Greater and Growing" Boston. They may be redeemed by the holder after one year, and in addition to the 6 per cent., pay able semi-annually, participate in a mutual profit-sharing fund. They are non-taxable, and may be paid for in small monthly amounts.

ASK BOND APPROVAL.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has filed with the Massachusetts Public Service Commission an application for the approval of the $67,552,400 6 per cent. convertible bonds authorized at the special stockholders' meeting

COPPER METAL.

Copper metal is quoted at 15⅞ @ 16 cents a pound and the supply for immediate demands is very small. Buying is less heavy than it was recently, when the demand left the market practically bare of spot. Recent purchases are said to have reached the enormous total of [illegible]0,000,000 pounds. Only relaxation of demand kept the price at present levels.

COTTON BULLS SCORED A VICTORY

Rise in Market Due to Natural Causes, Particularly to Weather.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, Aug 23.—Without very much effort the bulls have scored a victory during the past week or ten days It is not by any means assured that the result came from effort, it is rather more certain that the rise in the market and its strength at the week end were due to natural causes. The first place must be accorded to weather news from the South, but it is impossible to ignore the fact that September 1 will find the world very short of America's great staple What would have been considered a good visible supply five years ago now looks small when confronted with a weekly decrease through mill takings of over 150,000 bales

Demand Exceeding Supply.

All of this is academic and statistic, but it means something to those customers who are confronted with meeting an actual demand which has now gone on for several years and has exceeded the average supply from the farms.

The crop news of the week has been variously interpreted In the main, it has been judged that the Western belt has suffered through lack of moisture and that the late growth of Texas and Oklahoma, which have perhaps over one-third of the acreage, will be much curtailed from these causes. Meantime the Mississippi Valley and the Eastern belt promise better results, and this may in the end place the total yield over the earlier estimates made by the writer of this column.

Crop Estimated at 14,000,000.

These estimates place the crop almost strictly in a 14,000,000 bales class, but it does not now appear that it will be so small. Of course, in the price equation, some attention must be paid to the deficit as compared with last year This, however, is a matter for speculators and consumers to consider

In the cotton goods division of the dry goods trade, there is little to complain of, there being no accumulation in first hands, and with a rising tendency in prices and the coming of what looks like a prosperous Fall and Winter business, it would not be advisable on the part of buyers to delay making their commitments.

COTTON PRICES.

NEW YORK Aug. 23. The cotton market opened active and with prices from 10 to 18 points higher because of a dry weather map and predictions that rain would not fall in the Southwest over Sunday. The rise was more than [illegible] been indicated on cables Some traders with [illegible] lines [illegible] bought at the start. To day's range of prices were:

MONEY MARKET.

There is a better tone in money markets and the week just closed was marked by an easing off in rates. Banks are in a stronger position in this country, and the demand for funds has showed no decrease. The change in rates is small as yet, but a further decline is indicated The failure of the Bank of England to reduce its minimum rate of discount after making several strong weekly statements is causing some comment. There is more demand for commercial paper. The shipment of gold from South America to New York is regarded as an encouraging sign.

BANKERS' CONVENTION.

Representatives of more than 5,000 financial institutions are expected to attend the convention of the American Bankers' Association, which will be held in Boston from October 6 to 10. The executive committee which will have charge of the entertainment of the visitors consists of such well-known local financiers as T. P. Beal, president Second National Bank, chairman; A. L. Ripley, president Merchants' National Bank; W. A. Gaston, president National Shawmut Bank; D. G. Wing, president First National Bank; Philip Stockton, president Old Colony Trust Company; Allen Forbes, president State street Trust Company; W. R. Evans, president Five Cents Savings Bank; H. L. Ayer, secretary

During the convention there will be a motor boat carnival on the Charles River basin, a reception and ball at Symphony Hall, a concert in Faneuil Hall, addresses in the Old South Meeting House and in King's Chapel, a concert by the Symphony Orchestra and a harbor steamboat trip

BIG GAIN IN EARNINGS.

The Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies is making a big gain in earnings, and its gross for 1913 will probably break all its records. For the first five months the gain in gross of $897,806 was equal to slightly better than 9 per cent. This rate would mean total business for twelve months of $19,600,000, compared with $18,026,000 in 1912 and $16,404,882 in 1910.

READING EARNINGS.

Reading stock has been firm when a [illegible] because the Reading Company in the 1913 fiscal year earned a surplus equivalent to over 17½ per cent. on its $70,000,000 common stock. This compares with a dividend rate of 8 per cent. now being paid.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Clearings through the banks continue in moderate volume, according to "Dun's Review," the total last week at all leading cities in the United States amounting to only $2,469,020,119, against $2,608,[illegible],010 for the same week last year, thus showing a loss of 5.7 per cent. The comparison with the corresponding week in 1911, however when $2,409,044,035 was reported, was much more favorable, a gain over that period of 6.5 per cent, being shown.

WHEAT TRADERS FEAR FROST NOW

Speculators Declare Country Is Selling Corn More Freely; Leadership Wanted.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Fear of frost over the Canadian Northwest is causing speculators in the local wheat pit to closely study the weather map for that section daily. Experienced traders see a possibility of damage to late portions of Canadian wheat crop, such as was caused some years ago by an early frost. This uneasiness was expressed in Liverpool [illegible] Friday and Saturday These [illegible] predicted much lighter world's shipments exclusive of supplies from this side. [illegible] from the continent, however, [illegible] climatic conditions as being improved over France and Germany. Heat and unfavorable weather was reported in the United Kingdom. If this continues, Liverpool prices will show further gains.

Weather Favorable in U. S.

The weather map, except for a little too much rain in our own Northwest, is favorable. There was a decrease of 800,000 bushels in wheat stocks at Minneapolis for the week. Except that Indiana buyers are buying No. 2 red wheat at [illegible] cents over the September price here and export houses at New York and Baltimore are buying Chicago wheat moderately, there is little feature to the trade.

Local receivers reported country acceptances of bids from here at the week-end exceedingly light. Kansas City reported stocks piling up there. From the same place reports were sent here of heavy feeding of wheat to stock because of the low price in the Southwest

Corn Selling is Increasing.

Cooler weather and the prevalence of rain from here to the seaboard affected the corn market late in the week Weather reports predicting continued cooler weather may prove a weakening factor.

Reports received here conflict in regard to country offerings of corn. It was generally conceded that Illinois and Iowa points were selling cold corn freely, but this fact was offset by remarkably good buying orders for futures at each fractional decline Omaha reported the Southwest bidding over Chicago for corn Speculators however declared that the country is selling corn more freely and the trade is waiting for leadership.

The downward tendency of corn affected the oats market. A good many holders of September changed their lines over to December, while longs in December changed their holdings over to May. The local crowd seems to be evenly divided on both sides of the market.

GRAIN PRICES.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—Wheat was lower today but the decline was moderate. Corn was heavy. Oats were weak. Provisions ruled lower. September corn reacted 2c to 72¾ [illegible] and closed 1⅜ [illegible] lower December closed [illegible] lower after [illegible] [illegible] May [illegible] lower. [illegible] what reached [illegible] [illegible] Oats closed ⅛ to ½ lower

FORTUNES IN FOX PELTS.

Breeding black foxes is becoming an important industry in Canada, according to reports, and it is also said to be highly profitable Since the days of the Hudson Bay Company furs from the Dominion have made people rich. A royal silver fox yields the price of a small farm. Their pelts have brought from $1,500 to $3,000 each. Men on Prince Edward Island have made fox breeding a study for years, and about 85 per cent. of those of the silver specie in captivity are in that province. They thrive there as in few other districts.

One statement about the industry reads: "It is on account of the lustre of the fur of the pure silver black fox that the prices this year of pups range from $14,000 to $18,000 per pair. One pair of proved breeders has been sold for $30,000."

PRINT CLOTH MARKET.

FALL RIVER, Aug. 23.—There has been more activity in the print cloth market during the last week Demand was good for both wide and narrow widths for delivery during the next two or three months, with sales for the week of about 195,000 pieces. INVESTORS ARE HESITATING ON EVE OF WILSON MEXICO MESSAGE AND CROP NEWS

Fears of Intervention by U. S. and Extent of Damage to Corn in Drought-Stricken Middle and Southwest Causes Lack of Demand for Securities and Easier Prices—Week in Wall Street

By CHARLES W. STORM

WALL STREET, Aug. 23.—Believers in higher prices for securities have been somewhat discouraged the past week owing to the continued reports of crop damage that have come to hand and the fear of intervention in Mexico by the United States

Investors, because of these influences, have refrained from making commitments, and in the absence of a demand prices of shares have eased off slightly

While most of the influences present have been with us for some time and have been discounted to a great extent, conservative bankers are disposed to assume a waiting attitude until the Mexican situation is less grave and more definite information concerning the damage to crops can be obtained

Financial interests will, therefore, read tomorrow with considerable interest President Wilson's message on Mexican affairs, which is expected to outline the policy of the administration in that regard.

One pleasing development of the week was the further ease in money due to the deposit funds by the Secretary of the Treasury for crop moving purposes. Commercial paper is moving much more freely and interests unable to obtain funds three weeks ago when commercial paper rates were 7 per cent. are now supplying their wants. It must not be forgotten, however, that the pinch for money begins in October when, according to bankers, full rates will prevail.

While Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has requested that none of the $58,000,000 funds deposited by the government to help the movement of crops be appropriated for the payment of loans in New York, financiers in this city believe that some bankers securing the money will do so despite the wishes of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Treasury Plan Promotes Confidence.

It is not expected, however, that a great proportion of the government deposits will find their way back to this city, but will serve to lessen the demands on New York. At present sentiment regarding the deposits is having a greater influence on the money market than the actual amount of money being deposited.

With the beginning of the cotton movement Southern banks increased their borrowings slightly the past week, but the drain by the West has not commenced and is not expected for five or six weeks.

Some Southern banks that has not been allotted some of the funds to be deposited by the government were in the financial district yesterday asking for loans. These institutions, according to their correspondents, need the money more than banks in the same States selected by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Bonds and Notes Sought.

Further ease in money has imparted firmness to high grade investment bonds and notes. Savings banks, insurance companies and very rich private investors have picked up some small amounts of the better class of investments. Buying of equipment trust certificates is very good. Leading bankers look for continued improvement in the demand for investment bonds

Supplies of securities on the shelves of the large investment houses have been diminishing and dealers are now in position to take new offerings. Railroads and industrial corporations, however, are not expected to make overtures for additional capital in the near future. The urgent needs of our arteries of commerce have been supplied by the recent security offerings. The railroads have adopted policies of economy pending the disposition of the request for an increase in freight rates of five per cent., and as no new construction work is done in the Winter the prospect of new financing is very remote.

The West does not seem to share the timidity felt in the East, and reports from the former section of the country are encouraging and indicates increased activity in commercial lines.

Big U. S. Export Increase.

Bankers were pleased with the increase of more than $11,000,000 in exports of the United States during July and a reduction in imports of over $6,000,000. Further increases in our foreign trade, together with the increased prices for grain that Europe will have to pay Uncle Sam, give good promise of a large balance of trade in favor of the United States.

Despite the lower prices for steel products, steel companies are not booking much new business. With curtailment in building operations and the retrenchment policies put in force by the railroads there is little hope of the steel producers receiving any great quantity of new business.

WALSH ATTACKS PARTY TRAITORS

Raps Democrats Who Voted for Trolley "Grab" in Bass Point Speech.

[illegible] Walsh [illegible] the members of the Legislature who betrayed their party [illegible] the [illegible] grab [illegible] Everett, Malden and Melrose Democrats at Bass Point last night.

[illegible] true to the principles of their parties [illegible].

The [illegible] was given a [illegible] Democratic workers present. The dinner and speaking took place in the Hotel Brenton. John F. O'Connor acted as toastmaster.

Others who spoke were Secretary of State Frank J. Donahue, Thomas J. Boynton, the Democratic candidate for attorney general; Walter H. Creamer, Democratic candidate for Congress in the recent congressional election; Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Governor's Council, and the local candidate for the Senate and House.

The affair was under the auspices of the Everett Democratic City Committee, but a number of committeemen from Malden and Melrose were present. Thomas J. Keefe, president of the Everett City Committee, presided.

Lieutenant Governor Walsh [illegible] of the other speakers predicted Democratic success in the coming election. Mr. Walsh urged that great attention be paid to local contests for the Legislature, declaring that the election of a Democratic majority [illegible] Legislature would be even more important to the people of Massachusetts and to the future of the party in the State than the election of himself as Governor.

Secretary of State Donahue [illegible] Congressman Gardner for the latter's [illegible] with the work which the Legislature has done during the past year, which he said was evidenced by his ignorance of the fact that there is already a law on the statute books, put through on the initiative of the Democratic Party, providing for the direct nomination of candidates for United States Senator. Congressman Gardner advocates this measure in his platform.

Ex-Representative William [illegible] New[illegible] of South Boston was in the Lieutenant Governor's party and delivered an address to 200 Hyde Park Democrats who gathered in Grew's Woods in Hyde Park earlier in the day. The affair was under the auspices of the Ward 20 Democratic Committee.

GARDNER DEFINES HIS POLICIES IN STERLING SPEECH

STERLING, Aug. 23.—Congressman A. P. Gardner, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor at the Republican county outing at Lake Washacum today declared against the initiative and for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes involving public transportation companies. On the former he said in part:

"I am opposed to that form of direct legislation known as the initiative. I do not believe that a small minority of the people should be able to compel a majority to vote on any matter before that majority is ready to do so."

On compulsory arbitration he said:

"During recent campaigns for Congress I have been asked to pledge myself against compulsory arbitration. I have refused to do so. I believe in it in the case of disputes between railroads and street railways and their employes. The rights of the traveling and consuming public are paramount."

The outing was for the Worcester County and Worcester City Republican clubs. Over 600 attended. This is the outing to which Governor Foss was invited only to have the invitation recalled.

Congressman Samuel E. Winslow presided. Speakers included Colonel A. H. Goetting and former Secretary of State A. P. Langtry of Springfield, William Kinney of Boston, Attorney General James M. Swift and former Mayor James Logan of Worcester.

BENTON IN "CALL TO COLORS" PLEA IN NAHANT SPEECH

"Forward, my brave soldiers, beyond the Alps lies Italy," was the spirit of the war cry sent out last evening by Colonel Everett C. Benton, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, at the annual outing of the Everett Republican City Committee. There was a good gathering of the faithful from Everett, Malden, Melrose and a little bit of Somerville Republicanism.

Councillor McGregor was there, so were Walter S. [illegible] Allen, Mayor Chambers of Everett, James F. Cavanagh, Representatives Greenwood, Stone and Ross, State Committeeman Stevens, John F. Casey and Frank M. Carpenter. Nelson H. Brown, assistant district attorney for Essex County, presided.

Colonel Benton said [illegible] of his call to the colors speech:

"If I were at the State House last year as Governor I would have vetoed bills that affected the workingmen as Governor Foss did. He vetoed measures which touched the welfare of the men who work twelve months in the year. He did not veto the bill for raising the salaries of the judges, who only work seven months in the year.

"Governor Foss says he is for reciprocity. So am I. But not for reciprocity which would pay Canadian wages in Massachusetts.

"Who am I fighting? David I. Walsh is a good, clean fellow, sprung from the people, the leader of the Democratic party, says he is for progress. So am I. But I am just as good as either of them. And I am going to win."

Robbins Out for Mayor in Everett

President Foreman K. Robbins of the Everett Board of Aldermen has fired the first gun in the municipal campaign in that city by announcing his candidacy for Mayor. Mayor James Chambers, now serving his second term, is noncommittal on the matter of a third term. Everett Democrats and Republicans held their annual outings at Bass Point, Nahant, last evening, but they were held at separate hostelries.

FOOD DOUBLES IN COST IN 16 YEARS

Two-Dollar Bill Now Where One Would Do, and the Limit Is Not Yet Reached.

The purchasing power of a dollar bill in Boston, for food commodities from 1897 to 1913, has been cut in half. In 1897 a dollar would buy twice as much as today.

In 1897 for the top cut of a round steak you paid from 18 to 20 cents a pound. Now you pay 35 cents.

Sirloin, which sixteen years ago cost 25 cents a pound, has gone to 35 cents.

Rump steak costing in that same year 25 to 28 cents a pound cannot be now bought for less than 40 to 43 cents a pound, and this does not include the choice cuts at all.

Lamb has advanced in this same period from 15 to 16 cents on the pound to twenty and twenty five cents. But the kidney chops of lamb have even this Summer gone up to forty cents or more a pound from twenty to twenty-five cents in the Summer of 1897. Ham has just doubled in price.

Urges No Episcopal Church in Rome

Aims to Avoid Conflict of Religious Bodies.

Rev. Charles F. Sweet, an Episcopal minister of Tokio, Japan, who is now in Boston, states in the "Living Church," the organ of the high churchmen of the denomination in this country, that Episcopalians should withdraw St. Paul's Episcopal Church from Rome. He says:

"The Episcopal Church is not in the city of Rome to make proselytes among the Roman Catholics, but merely to take care of American Church people who happen to be visiting in Rome. We have no right to send any minister there to convert Roman Catholics. It is better to withdraw the church."

The church is called St. Paul's and the rector is Rev. Walter Lowrie, formerly curate of Emmanuel Church, Boston.

Hold Peter Warren in $7,000 Stock Deal

LOWELL, Aug. 23.—Peter Warren of Boston, was today held for the September term of the Middlesex Grand Jury for the alleged larceny of $7,000 from former Senator James McKinley in 1907. McKinley claims Warren borrowed $7,000 from him to get control of 6,000 shares of a box making business run by Warren here. The shares were owned by George Fred Williams.

NEW HAVEN ASKS FOR BOND PERMIT

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad yesterday asked the Massachusetts Public Service Commission for authority to issue, on or before October 15, the $67,552,400 convertible 6 per cent. debentures as "convertible debentures of 1913."

Should the commission refuse to grant the authority the only alternative would be receivership proceedings, according to one of the directors who opposed the issue at Friday's stormy meeting in New Haven, Ct.

Asked yesterday if Vice President Timothy E. Byrnes would be made president of the New England Steamship Company, President Howard Elliott said:

"The matter of presidencies of the New England Steamship, Connecticut and Rhode Island Companies was not discussed. That will be attended to after I become president. Further action regarding segregation of properties must wait until organization of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine roads is worked out in greater detail."

In addition to paying off the notes of the company which are due, the New Haven says it plans to buy eighty five locomotives, three hundred steel cars and two electric locomotives. Part of the proceeds of the loan will be used for working capital.

MRS. HENRY E. ROWE, formerly Etta E. McMillan.

MILLIONAIRE WINS LASELL STUDENT

Boston friends and schoolmates of Etta Elmira McMillan of Providence, president of the "special" class at Lasell Seminary in Auburndale last year, have received announcement of her marriage in Providence to Henry E. Rowe, millionaire oyster grower of New Haven. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe are on their honeymoon at Groton, Conn. Mr. Rowe will take his bride to his beautiful estate at Shore Acres, overlooking the Thames at New London. Mrs. Rowe is twenty-eight and her husband sixty years old.

She specialized in music and cooking at Lasell, and was sergeant of Company A, winning the battalion drill. Mr. Rowe has known his wife since she was a baby. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murdock McMillan of Providence.

NO, NO, THIS IS NOT RECKLESSNESS—JUST GOOD BUSINESS

Have omitted more than we have written, and are glad. You wouldn't read all that we might write, and yet we have scarcely touched the facts.

Sound logic justifies the reductions. It's our time for a general sweep-up and clean-out of everything that lags—and with them goes many things that don't lag. You know the object of the offerings, but you can't know the money-saving possibilities unless you come to the store. We mean to give customers more advantages as to price and variety and service than they can find anywhere else—and we do.

REAL ESTATE MARKET STILL DULL IN TONE

No Improvement Manifested, Due to Absence of Brokers.

IMPORTANT SOUTH END DEAL

Little improvement was noted in the realty situation during the past week. The dullness which has characterized the market during the past few weeks was still in evidence. With brokers away at the seashore or in the country, however, little activity was to be expected.

The mortgage market evidenced a stronger tone and with the easier money conditions prevailing is expected to show marked improvement.

An important development of the week was the closing of the deal by which Alanta E. Gillette, wife of the razor manufacturer, purchases the high-class apartment property recently erected at Parkman, Powell and Brown streets. The property, which is not yet assessed, is [illegible] at $130,000.

Another important sale was that of the Hotel Chatham property at No. 1641 Washington street, corner of West Concord street, belonging to Fred C. Tobey, to Walter A. Kennedy. The hotel is a large six-story brick structure, containing several suites, and occupying 6,110 square feet of land. The total valuation of the parcel is $70,000.

To Open Dry Dock Bids Wednesday

Preliminary Work on New Dock to Start Soon.

Bids will be opened Wednesday for the preliminary work on the construction of the proposed dry dock to be built in South Boston at a cost of $3,000,000 by the Board of Directors of the Port of Boston. The bids will call for the bulkheading of about twenty acres of South Boston flats, and the dredging of the approaches, channels and a turning basin.

The dock will be 1,200 feet long and 150 feet wide, with a depth of 35 feet at low tide and 45 feet at high water. It will be located on the South Boston shore, beyond the wharves of the Metropolitan Coal Company and the Boston Molasses Company.

The construction of the dock will be under the direction of Lieutenant De Witt C. Webb, an engineer of the United States Navy.

Important Realty Deal in Roxbury

An important transfer of a large parcel of land fronting on Humboldt avenue, Roxbury, which will have an important bearing on the development of that section, has gone to record. The land, which contains 20,688 square feet with a frontage on Humboldt avenue of 166 feet, was purchased by the Atlas Realty Company from Meyer Heller.

It is the plan of the purchasers to erect ten stores on the front part of the lot, a vaudeville and moving picture theatre on one-half of the rear, and a garage for an automobile concern on the other half.

The total cost of the buildings to be erected is estimated at $100,000. The transfer was negotiated through the office of Meyer Dana.

Aim for Beauty in Newest Apartments
New Structures Models of Their Kind

BANNER FALL, SAYS BROKER

Unprecedented activity in the realty market this Fall, building operations, particularly of apartment houses, on a large scale, a stronger tone in the mortgage situation, and a strong demand for high grade apartments are predicted by James D. Henderson, a prominent real estate broker.

"The general real estate situation looks better than it has in years," said Mr. Henderson. "I look to see a volume of business this Fall that will exceed anything we have had for some time.

"The shrinkage in the prices of securities and the depression in the bond and stock market has demonstrated conclusively that investment in real estate on a main street is the safest method of placing money.

"More and more the investing public is awakening to this fact. This is evidenced by the fact that, at the present time, we are doing business with many [illegible] who formerly confined their investments almost entirely to securities.

"The rental situation looks better than it has in years. This is due largely to the fact that the building of apartment houses has been considerably [illegible] by the tightness of the money market [illegible] The demand for high class apartments in Brookline and the Back Bay will probably exceed the supply.

"The mortgage situation is improving [illegible] During the past Summer the [illegible] of the money market has greatly hampered [illegible] the money situation is easing off, which means increased activity."

New Apartments Equipped with Devices for Convenience of Tenants.

With builders vieing with each other in the erection of apartment houses combining highly artistic exteriors with convenience of arrangement and beauty of finish on the interior, apartment houses recently finished or now under construction in the Back Bay and Brookline, may be fairly said to rank among the best of their kind in the [illegible]

The increased demand by persons of means for apartments luxuriously finished and equipped with every device for convenience and comfort, is largely responsible for the vast improvement which has taken place in d[illegible] this type.

Another [illegible] is the de[illegible] ng, in favor of [illegible] The large build[illegible] and more apart[illegible] own money is invested.

As a result, apartment houses built during the past few years are models of their kind. And instead of detracting from the tone of a [illegible] as was [illegible] they are [illegible]

[illegible] of means as well as those of ordinary income, are [illegible] the apartment house habit [illegible] as is evidenced by the increase in the demand for apartments where the rental is [illegible] per year [illegible] wards.

Builders are preparing for an unprecedented amount of construction of this type in the Fall, for Spring occupancy, and which will develop large tracts of vacant land and involve the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In apartment houses just built have been installed various devices and features to add to the comfort and convenience of the tenants. One Brookline apartment house, recently finished, has a swimming tank, dance hall and conservatory.

JUMP IN BOSTON 1913 TAX RATE

Expect New Rate, to Be Announced Tomorrow, Will Show Increase.

Boston's tax rate for the ensuing year, which is expected to be announced tomorrow, will exceed $17.[illegible] it is believed, as against $16.40 for the last three years. The assessors have tabulated the real estate figures and are revising the personal property figures.

The [illegible] real estate growth, as shown by the assessors' books, is not equal to that of last year. The normal growth is about $20,000,000. Last year the gain was $39,768,800, the high mark resulting from the annexation of Hyde Park, which added $10,[illegible]1,403 to the city's valuation. The gain in personal property last year was $13,661,403. The gain this year will be considerably less.

The delay in the announcement of the figures for this year is due to the care with which the assessors have been searching for personal property. Much disappointment is felt because of the transference on the part of many moneyed men of [illegible]

NEW ROXBURY STORES.

Work has commenced on the construction of five stores to be built at the corner of Humboldt avenue and Waumbeck street, Roxbury, for Dr. Joseph Shoman of No. 157 Waumbeck street. The stores are to be constructed of concrete and will be one-story high. The cost will be $6,000.

New Apartments Sold in Brookline

Mrs. King C. Gillette Purchaser in $130,000 Deal.

The purchase of valuable Brookline property, constituting one of the most important deals of the season involving property in that town, was consummated through the office of Henry W. Savage last week. The property, which consists of new apartment houses on Park [illegible] and Browne streets, valued [illegible] 000. The purchaser [illegible] Alanta E. Gillette, wife of King C. Gillette, the safety razor manufacturer.

The total transfer includes [illegible] of a three-story brick and [illegible] 7 Parkman [illegible] of lan[illegible] street containing [illegible] square feet of land; No. 8 Browne street, containing [illegible] square feet of land.

[illegible] apartment houses were recently [illegible] Snider & Drucker, and have not yet been assessed.

New Trade School on Huntinton Ave.

The foundations are being laid for the new trade school of the Wentworth Institute to be erected at the corner of Huntington avenue and Ruggles street, Roxbury, at a cost of $120,000. The structure is to be built of brick and stone and will be three stories in height. Peabody & Stearns are the architects.

NEW MALDEN BUILDING.

A new structure [illegible] cost $[illegible] will be erected for the Malden Trust Company. It will be located on the Fitzpatrick estate, Nos. 90 to 98 Pleasant street. The tenants have been requested to vacate by September 1, when work will commence.

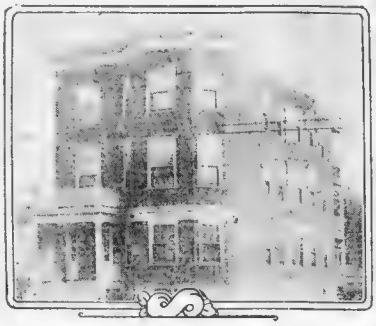
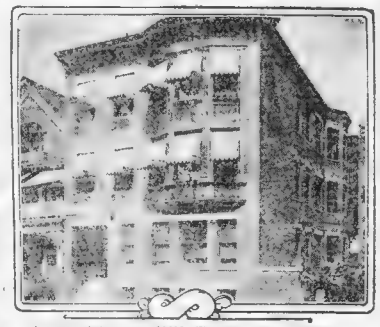
Gives Figures in Pointing Out That Extending of Building Limits Will Be Good Thing.

CHEAPER in the end to build this brick house than to build the wooden house shown below.





The Sunday AMERICAN's article of last week, concluding a project that in the end it is cheaper to build two and six-family houses of brick rather than of wood, and thereby incidentally reduce the city's fire danger to a minimum, created such deep interest among the builders and property owners of the city that a second article going into greater detail is printed today.

The AMERICAN'S article today was written by Arthur W. Joslin, an expert in his line, and he is prepared to stand by his figures.

The pictures printed herewith show the type and style of buildings referred to by Mr. Joslin.

By ARTHUR W. JOSLIN,
Treasurer and Manager of McDonald & Joslin Co.

The question of the relative cost of building an ordinary three-story wood house of frame construction, or single or double-decked, and with brick exterior walls, or second class construction, having been asked me recently, I have carefully compared the costs in each case with the following result:

Second class construction, exterior walls only	$1,188.50
Third class construction, exterior walls only	1,101.00
Additional cost of building in brick thus being	87.50

See tabulation of these costs in detail in following tables.

Analysis of cost of exterior walls of a three apartment house 24x50 feet.

WITH 8-INCH BRICK WALLS.

50 M sand struck brick, laid, complete	$1,200.00
Allow for stone trim	100.00
Stripping exterior walls, 800 ft. B. M. at $70, in place	50.00
Additional cost of window frames, 45 at 50c	22.50
Additional labor of putting up interior finish	30.00
Painting, two coats	80.00
	$1,488.50

FRAME WALLS CLAPBOARDED.

Frame: sills, 4x8 inches; Studs, 2x4x4 inches; Posts, girts, 4x6 inches; Plates, 4x4 inches, 5 M at $52, in place	$260.00
Boards, N. & P. roofers, 3,700 ft. B. M., at $35, in place	24.50
Paper and labor of putting on	26.50
Clapboards, 4,500, at $70 per M, in place (shingles about same)	294.00
Sundry outside finish, not including front and rear piazzas, necessary in either case	84.00
Painting, two coats	140.00
	$1,101.00
Cost of exterior walls of house in brick	$1,488.50
Cost of exterior walls of house in frame	1,101.00
Additional cost in brick	$387.50

In making the above comparison the additional cost of the brick house, $387.50, I am sure I have included items going to make up the cost of a house, except the cost of the exterior walls of the house, would remain the same.

In order to substantiate this claim I obtained the dividends of a similar three-apartment house owned by a friend, and which proved to me to be the actual dividend cost of the same class (frame) house and in the same locality, and which house is of the same general appearance as the brick house, except for the exterior walls, which would be of brick, as before stated, instead of clapboards, and the interior finish, plastering.

	$5,553

Cost of house in brick	$6,917
Cost of house in frame	5,553
Additional cost in brick	$1,364

In analyzing these figures notice that most of the items are the same.

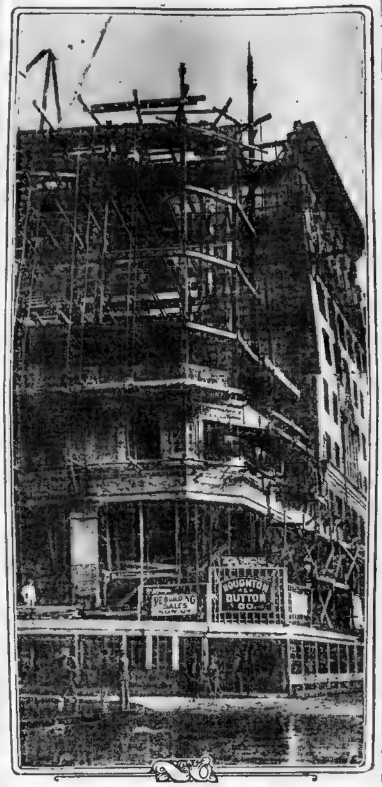
Rush Work on Houghton's Will Be Ready October 1

THE NEW HOUGHTON & DUTTON BUILDING.



The new building under construction for the Houghton & Dutton Company is rapidly nearing completion and is expected to be finished and ready for occupancy early in October.

With its completion much needed space will be afforded the Houghton & Dutton Company for the expansion of their business. The latest addition to the concern will bring into full realization ideals that have been cherished by the firm for many years.

The Houghton & Dutton Company was founded by R. F. Dutton back in 1874, when two small floors of the old Pavilion building, now No. 55 Tremont street, was all that was required to transact business. Since then the many extensive additions have been made to meet the ever-increasing volume of business.

The old Albion building, which is being replaced by the new structure, was the first addition which the firm made on the properties which face along Beacon street. This was in 1883. Early in the nineties the old Congregational building on the corner of Beacon and Somerset street was adapted to store purposes. A few years later the old building was demolished and the present Dutton building was completed in 1900.

During the intervening years, from the completion of the Dutton building to 1910, the various buildings on Beacon street, between the Dutton building and the Albion building, were a fixed part of the store properties. Early in 1910 the Dutton building began to expand toward Tremont street, and a new structure of the same sky level was erected. Then came the purchase of the old Lowell building and the properties which for many years made a famous landmark of "Old Beacon Corner."

The final step to complete the establishment in its entirety was taken when the two buildings were torn down to make way for the new structure.

Sally Cohen Assists in Making an Arrest

Actress Also Saves Police Captain from a Blackjack.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Police Captain W. S. Peabody of Whitestone saw two men on the grounds of W. W. Cole, at Whitestone. He told them he was the gardener and ordered them off.

Just then he met John C. Rice, the comedian. Sally Cohen, who is Mrs. Rice, and Robert Landlock. The captain decided [illegible] help, to arrest the pair. When he tried it the actress shouted to him "Duck, captain!"

Peabody did as she said and escaped a blow aimed at him with a blackjack, but held to the man he had grabbed. The other fellow ran and escaped.

The captive had a loaded revolver. The police say he is Fred Stewart of No. 200 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, recently released from Auburn.

WILLIAM H. CUSHMAN DEAD.

William H. Cushman, ex-Representative from the Eighth Middlesex District and formerly of East Somerville, [illegible] W[illegible] P. Mitchell, Clerk of the Somerville Court, died at his home in Mechanics Falls, Maine, where he went from Somerville to live several years ago. Mr. Cushman was 63. He belonged to the Masons and other fraternal orders.

ODD FELLOWS' OUTING.

Members and guests of Manchester Unity, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, held their sixth annual field day yesterday at Lily Pond Grove, Saugus. About 300 persons attended the outing, which was given under the auspices of the Boston Chapter No. 1, Uniform Rank.

Town Crier Cries Suffrage Meetings

His Bell Draws Two Big Gatherings at Provincetown.

PROVINCETOWN, Aug. 23.—Ye ancient town crier of this bailiwick had a new job on his hands today and he did it well.

Bell in hand, he clanged through the streets announcing the suffragette meetings which were held here, one at 3:30 p. m. in the Town Hall and another at [illegible] p. m. in the public square.

Ye towne crier caught the public ear so well that both meetings were largely attended. The speakers were Mrs. Maude Wood Park, Miss Margaret Foley, Hutchins Hapgood and Joseph O'Brien.

The crier also bade the townsfolk know and remember that a woman's suffrage meeting will be held at Sandwich on Monday.

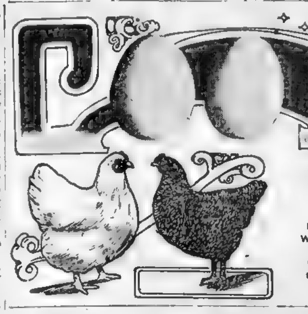
Cut Living Cost by Keeping a Few Layers
Amateurs Successful With Small Flocks

Keepers of Poultry Derive Advantage That Others Cannot Enjoy.



Eggs Laid by Pullets and Two Reliable Utility Fowls—the White Wyandotte (at Left) and the Barred Plymouth Rock.

HARDLY a day passes that does not bring to the poultry department one or more requests for advice about keeping a small flock of hens.

All sorts of questions about cost of chickens or fowls, cost of portable houses, what and how much to feed and the cost; possible profits to be derived from small flocks, amount of land needed, what breed to buy and many other inquiries are received, and since the recent wide spread predictions of the almost certain rise in the price of beef products have become so persistent, it is evident that interest in poultry culture has received an added stimulus.

People who have never before given a thought to keeping hens are now determined to do something toward reducing the cost of living, and have turned to poultry as a possible means of doing it.

"Society" has taken up chicken raising and found in it a pleasant diversion, as well as a sensible way of gaining healthful outdoor exercise combined with a means of supplying the table with fresh eggs and other poultry products of a quality that cannot always be obtained otherwise.

One way of answering the many questions is by a statement of the experience of some who are already keeping hens, so at the cost of considerable time and effort a large number of reports have been secured from people who have had a limited experience ranging from a few months to three or four years (none over four years).

From among the number of reports received a few have been selected for publication at this time, each one chosen coming from a resident of New England and representing a suburban community.

Bear in mind that keeping a small flock of hens with profit and conducting a large poultry business as a sole source of income are two different propositions. Anyone who will may do the former, but comparatively few can successfully accomplish the latter.

Inexpensive Houses.

If one has the time and inclination a suitable home for a small flock of hens can be made from a piano box or from large packing cases at a small expense. Those who do not care to [illegible] can find a variety of excellent portable houses on the market ranging in price from $10 to $100, according to size. These houses are, as a rule, well made, and when set up and painted to match the other buildings, make an attractive addition to the premises.

Many people associate poultry keeping with unsightly, ramshackle coops, unattractive yards, and early morning disturbances caused by crowing roosters. None of these conditions is necessary. They all depend on the one who cares for the flock or upon the owner. The houses may easily present a clean orderly appearance, no yards or runs are necessary, nor is it necessary to have a rooster at any time.

Day old chicks of any common breed can be bought at reasonable rates and all the details of breeding and hatching attended to elsewhere. The breed of fowls to keep is largely a matter of personal preference. There are several good all round breeds each of which may be kept to advantage. Remember this, more depends on the feeding and care than on the particular breed selected.

Excellent fowls may be so handled as to be an utter failure, and fowls of a very ordinary quality, by the best of care and feeding, may be made to show a profit. In every case it is the "man behind" who counts.

Here Are Some Records.

The following statements of egg records and profits are quoted exactly from reports received. These are not reports received from experts but from people who knew little or nothing about poultry-keeping at the start.

Case 1.

You will be interested in the record of my twelve Wyandotte pullets during the first five months of this year.

January	193 eggs
February	180 eggs
March	240 eggs
April	204 eggs
May	208 eggs
	1021 eggs

Case 2.

Enclosed you will find my egg record on twenty-four single comb White Leghorn hens for April and one day of May. I started seventeen months ago to keep poultry.

1st week	148 eggs
2d week	153 eggs
3d week	150 eggs
Ten days	240 eggs
	687 eggs

Case 3.

This is what I did last year with an average of forty-six pullets. In the year they laid 7,404 eggs. I cleared $17[illegible] and raised 150 chickens and have seventy-eight nice pullets, besides the money I cleared.

Case 4.

I have made a clean profit of $23.11 from twenty-eight Barred Rock hens for three months, January, February and March. The twenty-eight hens laid 1,3[illegible] eggs during that time.

Case 5.

A little over a year ago I purchased twenty White Wyandotte pullets and you may be interested in their record for one year. Had never kept records before and a profit of $3.57½ per [illegible] from selling table eggs [illegible] amazing to me.

Average number birds in flock	19
Average number eggs per bird	181 1-9
Total cost of food consumed	$[illegible]
Total profit	67.92
Average cost per bird	[illegible]

Case 6.

I started with seventy-five chicks and raised seventy-three, forty-four of them pullets. They started to lay November 27, six months one week from time of hatching.

Complete record to date February 1, 1913, is as follows:

Seventy-five chicks	$10.00
Food to Feb. 1	31.00
	$41.00
Sold 130 lbs. roosters at 22c	[illegible]
Eggs sold to Feb. 1	24.50
Value of eggs eaten	17.00
	$70.00
Profit for eight months from time of hatching	$29.00

Case 7.

During January, February and March this year (1913) the twenty-nine pullets laid 2,0[illegible] eggs. These eggs were good size and shape. Eggs sold during the three months amounted to $44.10 and the running expenses were $15.09, leaving a balance of $29.01 or a fraction over $1 per bird profit.

Case 8.

I started March 1, 1912, with fourteen hens and bought fifty day-old chicks (Barred Rocks) and hatched thirty-six chicks from my own stock. My pullets commenced to lay at four months six days old. My total profit from March 1, to November 1, 1912, was $97.50.

This year (1913) my pullets were four months old July 25, and laid their first egg July 24, one day less than four months.

Not one of those whose statement is quoted was in a position to make a ration of his own but was dependent upon some one of the prepared rations on the market.

Each person had however an interest in fowls and an object in keeping them. The mental attitude has much to do with the business in hand, whatever that business may be, and those who dislike fowls or are not willing to give them careful and proper treatment would better never keep them.

Poultry keeping is daily becoming more popular and, like every other business, depends for its success upon capital, labor and brains.

It is attractive because of the comparatively small amount of capital necessary to make a beginning and of the fair and prompt return from investment, because the products are in growing demand in every household, large or small; and because it may be conducted in addition to other occupations, making a pleasant healthful exercise, showing a satisfactory profit.

The Business of Newport's Idle Rich Can't Begin Before 11; No One Is Up

By A CERTAIN NEWPORT LADY.

THE sole business of having a "good time" on the part of the Idle Rich has been in full operation the past week and there has been so many things to do that some wanted to do two things at once. But you see that the day's work doesn't commence till eleven o'clock in the forenoon because up to about that time nobody is "up."

Some of the young maidens and matrons complain that the card program is moving so rapidly at times that they can't get time to eat, that is to say, if they go off and spend a lot of time for luncheon they may miss some fun and that would never do for those whose occupation is simply that of having a good time.

That, too, right in the face of the fact that no less a person than Rev. Herbert Shipman declares that such an existence is wholly unworthy of the serious minded at least, and that to make that your business is the last resort of an empty mind, generally speaking, only don't ask him to indicate "whom might that include."

'Round the World Tour to Give Boston Debutantes a "Finishing Touch"

By POLLY BACKBAY.

MRS. JOHN ELLIOTT, who is so well known here as Maud Howe Elliott, a daughter of the late Julia Ward Howe, is to chaperone a party of young debutantes around the world for a sort of "finishing touch" before they make their formal bow. Nobody could be better fitted for this vocation, as she has lived so long in different parts of the old world that she is equally well known there socially as here.

It was Mrs. Elliott who took Mrs. Larz Anderson when she was pretty Isabelle Perkins, and it was while in Rome that the latter met Mr. Anderson, who was then stationed there in the diplomatic corps. Mrs. Stanwood (Gladys Lawson), too, was under her tutelage.

Mrs. Potter's Real Japanese Maid Is Season's Sensation

MR. AND MRS. H. STAPLES POTTER of Commonwealth avenue, with the latter's niece, Mrs. Sybil Snyder, are occupying a cottage at Magnolia, near the Oceanside. Mrs. Potter, as usual, is wearing many attractive gowns this season, but her favorite creations seem to be white. A picturesque feature of the Potters' Summer household is the genuine Japanese maid they brought home with them from their recent trip to the Orient. If I am not mistaken, Mrs. Potter is the only one of the Summer colony who has such as a personal maid. She makes a most attractive picture in the highly colored native garb, they being in the usual Oriental exquisite color schemes.

Mrs. Larz Anderson Writing Another Children's Book

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON of Weld street, Brookline, is busy writing another book which is to come out this Fall. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have recently paid a visit to Newport, where Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott are spending the Summer. This is an unusual departure for the Andersons, who live a decidedly simple life for the Summer months. The fact that they are very close friends with the Elliotts and that John Elliott illustrated the "Great Sea House," Mrs. Anderson's fairy tales for children, leads me to think that Mr. Elliott will also illustrate this one.

Gowns They Are Wearing at the Summer Resorts

MRS. WILLIAM R. DUPEE of Bay State road, who is spending the season at Magnolia, is by far one of the best dressed women at that fashionable resort. I caught a glimpse of her at the Green Gables Club Monday evening, where she was entertaining a party of friends at dinner. She wore a beautiful creation of white net, the skirt of which was made in the double ruffle, and the tunic effect of the gown of white embroidered linen was in empire effect on the bodice. She wore with this a large picture hat of black velvet trimmed with black ostrich plumes, which was immensely becoming.

Her guests included a number of Philadelphians. Mrs. Dupee contemplates spending part of the Winter in Europe, she planning to sail in February.

I SAW Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley the other day motoring on the North Shore. They are just from their Summer in Europe. It seemed to me I never saw Mr. Bradley looking better than he does after his vacation following his severe illness.

Mrs. Bradley who is among the most stunning of the smart list of matrons, looked extremely well in a gown of black silk heavily done in jetted lace embroidery. Her waist had trimmings of white lace, and her small becoming bonnet was one of black lace trimmed in deep lavender silk flowers.

MISS ALICE D. BALL, formerly of Commonwealth avenue and now of Baltimore, who is of the fashionable Summer colony at East Gloucester, has gone in for painting seriously and is among the cleverest of the younger artists. I met her the other day on her way to the harbor front to do some sketching. She looked especially smart in a gown of pale pink linen, with which she wore a delicately embroidered white lingerie waist with beautiful inserts of Irish lace. She wore a turquoise necklace which was most artistic and a large Panama hat.

Spanish Count Raises Vegetables at Lenox

CARLOS M. DE HEREDIA, the Spanish count who turned scientific gardener and farmer after taking out his naturalization papers, was the most conspicuous exhibitor at the annual Lenox flower, fruit and produce show this week.

He won first prize with a collection of twenty-four distinct varieties of vegetables. Society folk from New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other places turned out in force. Twenty prizes were awarded. The sweet pea exhibit was gorgeous.

Among the competitors of Count De Heredia were Mmes. George Westinghouse, Morris K. Jesup, John E. Alexandre, John E. Parsons, Robert Winthrop, Dr. Charles McBurney, Messrs. Joseph H. Choate, Warren M. Salisbury, Giraud Foster, Charles Lanier, William D. Sloane, William R. Osgood Field and [illegible].

Bostonians Entertain John D. Rockefeller

MR. AND MRS JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., who were at the Copley Plaza the early part of the week, were in their motor on their way from Maine, where I understand they were very popular in the Boston Summer colony at Seal Harbor. It was while there that Mr. and Mrs. John Rhodes of Beacon street entertained them at dinner at the same time they had a number of other Bost[illegible]

FRIENDS of Miss Anna Tindall, who was graduated from the Winchester High School this year, and who, in the Fall, enters Mount Holyoke College, expect she will be a valuable member of the institution's athletic teams.

For Miss Tindall, who is eighteen, is well known in society circles as a clever basketball player, an expert canoeist and a graceful swimmer.

At Biddeford Pool, Maine, early in the Summer, Miss Tindall showed her friends who was a swimmer far above the skill of the usual amateur, and later she exhibited her prowess when at Newport. At both places she showed she can handle a paddle with the skill of an Indian. Miss Tindall is now at New Ipswich, N. H. Friends say it is not anything wonderful for Miss Tindall to be athletically inclined, for her father, Henry B. Tindall, in his earlier days, was a clever football and baseball player.

MRS. GARDINER M. LANE of this city has gone up to Lenox for a short visit and is receiving no end of attention. Mrs. George W. Folsom gave her a delightful luncheon at Sunny Ridge the early part of the week.

MR. AND MRS. HARRISON W. CARTER of Philadelphia are at Newport, having motored down for the tennis tournament this past of the handsomest estates at the North Shore, is one of the best whips in the Myopia Hunt set on his four-in-hand. He married Miss Emily Crockett of Philadelphia, but is very well known [illegible] extremely popular during his student four years at Harvard.

THE Richard C. Binneys of Beacon street have come down to the North Shore from Tuxedowood, their estate at Lenox, to meet their daughter, Mrs. Graham Brooks (Rosamond Dixon), and her husband, who are just returning from their honeymoon in Europe.

MR. AND MRS. GERARD S. BEMENT, after a splendid motor trip to Bretton Woods, are settled at their charming new home at Manchester. Almost daily they enjoy a four mile spin along shore.

ONE of the jolliest supper parties I have seen this Summer was that which Mrs. G. Torgus gave at the Green Gables Club at Magnolia the other night. She motored over from her place at Bass Rocks in East Gloucester with a party of a dozen guests, making the trip by moonlight.

I CAUGHT a glimpse of Mrs. Edith Binney of Marlboro street at Magnolia the other day, where she is spending the Summer. She looked [illegible] Dr. George Binney, and his wife, who was Miss Susan Appleton, and a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Appleton of Beacon street, who are spending the Summer on the North Shore, are immensely popular in the young married set, and have been with Mrs. Binney part of the season.

MR. and Mrs. George Noyes, the former the well-known artist of this city, had a delightful surprise party tendered them Tuesday evening at their studio at East Gloucester. It took the form of a tin wedding. It was a jolly affair, each guest appearing with some useful tin gift in hand. Mr. Noyes, who plays the 'cello wonderfully well, played delightfully during the evening. Mrs. Hall accompanying him.

DR. FRANCIS PARSONS LANE of the staff of the Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn has been sojourning at East Gloucester after a visit to his mother at Manchester, N. H. It will be recalled the late Mrs. Lane was better known as Eleanor McCartney Lane, the author of "Nancy Stair" and other popular [illegible]

I SAW John Stone Stone of the St. Botolph Club in town the early part of the week. He was just up for a visit to his mother at Duxbury and bound for New York, where he is making his home for the present.

MRS. "NICK" LONGWORTH, who has been fairly overwhelmed with invitations to everything since her arrival at the North Shore, with the Guy Morrisons, is loyal to Miss Elsmore Seate. In spite of the many social activities she found time to lunch with Mrs. Sears en famille.

I CAUGHT a passing glimpse of Miss Helen McKay, who is prominent in art circles, the other day in a small launch going out from Manchester to Mystery Island. She was with Mrs. George Lee of Brookline and was going over for dinner. I hear, by the way, the value of the wedding presents of Mrs. Lee's daughter, Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr. (Elizabeth Lee) was of such enormity that they are largely secured in a safety deposit vault and far too elaborate to be used every day in the home they have established at Wenham Neck. I hear the silver from the McKean end of the family connections including the Higginsons, Shaws and Azaleas, represented a good sized fortune.

I MET Mrs. C. F. Ayer of Commonwealth avenue the other day in her motor on our way to her place at Pride's Crossing from Gloucester with a party of friends whom she has as house guests for some days. Mrs. Ayer must be an ideal hostess, for her motor was filled with souvenirs of the studios at Eastern Point she had purchased for her guests.

Among the most artistic of these were two stunning hammered brass tables which she told me were English importations. They are set on heavily carved Circassian walnut legs, and so deep is the brass tray that they may be utilized for pond lilies or other flowers aside from afternoon tea.

AMONG the smart functions of the coming week will be a dance at Villa Crest, the Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Denegre at West Manchester, in honor of their only daughter, Miss Marie Elaine Denegre. This party will be a sort of preliminary to her coming out next Winter. Miss Denegre is one of the prettiest of the girls of desirable age on the North Shore.

Fashionables at the Seashore

Cohasset Horse Show Attracts Society from North and South Shores

What was started as a small benefit for the maintenance of a home for unfortunate little folks has come to be an institution and a regular part of the Summer social life of the South Shore, and the Cohasset Horse Show this year will still be an improvement on that of last season, which was beyond doubt the great event of the Summer.

The Horse Show Committee, headed by Mrs. Nancy Thompson Lawson, has given much time and attention to the preparations for the affair, and fashionable society will don their choicest and do its utmost to tempt the purse for the visitors, while those preferring to lend their talent to showing off their blue ribbon stock will be seen on the tanbark.

All is for charity, the pet charity of the Cohasset smart set, the Bonnie Brae Summer hospital for sick babies, where yearly numerous little ones are rescued from ill health by the ministrations of the Summer folk at this resort.

The committee in charge includes Philip Cabot, chairman, E. B. Bayley, Howard F. Chappell, Lyndman Crocker, Jr., Pennington Gardiner, Alfred W. Hinds, Jr., Sydney M. Williams and Howard A. Bartow, secretary.

Of the twenty-four classes scheduled the one attracting special interest is that for horses in Social Classes, place July 3, in which Hall Bingham, of Cohasset, will offer many money prizes and to be given ribbons. In the other classes a cup will be given with the blue ribbon.

Judging the various events will be Dr. Samuel Hopkins Emery, Lambert and George Mansell, all of whom are familiar to the blue ribbon owners of the shore.

As usual, the fair owners of prize steeds will enter their strings and will be with them on the exhibition days to pat them through their paces. This is ever been one of the show features. The society assembly, the number of entries being equal to that of the stern competitors.

Needless to say the whole Lawson string will be seen and will, doubtless, from their hurried visit to the Marshfield Fair, they will be fortified for the fray. The fortunate competitors there have already been to their best advantage, for the Lawson daughters have been brought up to be experts at the bridle and have little trouble in carrying off the honors when these horses are entered.

Miss Harriet Revere is another member of the exclusive Cohasset set to show her prize strings, and they will be seen in several of the classes. Last season it became very much the fashion for the owner to bring out their favorite, on that Miss Bayley may be seen in the ring this Summer.

No show would be complete without some representation from the Revere stables, and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft will be included among the enthusiastic exhibitors. Mrs. Bancroft, who as Jane Baron held the record for daring horsemanship along the South Shore, has not been so active the last few years, the increasing demands of the home nursery keeping her from the more active world of sport. She was a skilled rider and received no end of applause for her performances.

The absence of Mrs. Lewis Bremer this season will cause genuine regret, the lengthy tour abroad preventing her from being one of the leading spirits in the affair. The Bigelow stables will not be of so much interest with their most charming adherent missing.

Mrs. Joseph Sylvester, who sent a number of prize winners to Marshfield this year, will also exhibit them at the Whitney track, and since taking prizes is a mere matter of habit with the Sylvester horses, they can be counted on to make a goodly share toward entertaining the spectators.

The Misses Beatrice and Helen C. Smith the latter daughters of Mrs. Fitz-William Smith, are again numbered among the younger set to show off their beautiful carriage and driving horses, their stables being among the few to still retain their family animals, in preference to the motor car. Both were in the ring last year and were warmly applauded for their artistic exhibition.

"Will they or won't they," is what most of the fashionables are asking about the Vose twins, who have been prominent figures at the show since it was started. Since their peers from the other side they have not been very active and it is still a question if either of these talented drivers will consent to appear. They are to enter the string from the Vose stable but it has always been one of the stellar attractions to watch them do their little stunts with their favorite horses.

Mrs. A. N. Milliken and W. V. Kellen are also to lend their handsome horses for the show, although neither will probably take a prominent part, their efforts being directed to making the accompanying attractions in the show a success.

Miss Jeanne de Chappell is to be on the representative of the family in the ring this year, as last, and her little competition with her pony will be quite as welcome as on previous occasions. Miss Chappell is one of the coming belles of the Boston and Cohasset set and her accomplishments are a community pride, her grace and skill being unusual for one so youthful.

Also in this same set is Miss Suzanne Mandell, whose skill in the saddle is second to none here. She rides and drives like an expert and if she does not arise one of the first prizes, cup and all, it will be no lack of management on her part.

Entries are also to be made by Wilmot Mandell, Charles Mason and the Misses Isabel Hall.

During the afternoons of both days there will be refreshment booths in charge of Mrs. Howard S. Barlow, assisted by Miss Dorothy Boles and Miss Barbara Boles with a group of girls from the Hall Cottage to aid in distributing the goodies sold.

Recognized at the parking space for the affectionate of Friday and Saturday are Mrs. Samuel Johnson, Mrs. A. Wilburt Wood, Mrs. Thomas Plant, E. T. Stebbins, Mrs. E. B. Baxter, Philip Cabot, Dr. I. Chadwick, H. P. Channell, Dudley S. Dean, Mrs. R. M. Fassett, Mrs. C. H. Wood, Mrs. Ada F. Faxon, C. W. Barron, Miss Worthington, W. D. Mandell, B. Baker, T. Bradlee, Miss Wheeler, Harry Cummer, Mrs. B. Cutler, Walker and R. F. Bolles.

SCITUATE

Amidst all the excitement incidental to Scituate, and the most recent performance given for the Catholic Cemetery Association was but a repetition of former successes of this Summer.

Contributing to the program were Miss Mary Dunn, a group of songs; Miss Donovan is a member of the Boston Opera Company and was received with much enthusiasm.

Miss Mae Allen was seen in classic dancing and her numbers brought her much applause. Lamont Bribe was one of the male singers, Thomas Lonergan and William were seen in specialties, Miss Doris Sparrell of the Emerson School contributed a delightful number. Also in the caste of the evening were William Lally, Hazil Flanigan, Frank Seavey, Louis Vaccarelli, Paul Otis, Miss Avery, McMullin.

Patronesses included Miss Josephine Burke, Mrs. A. McCarthy, Mrs. Joan Burke, Mrs. Henry Doherty, Mrs. James Ward, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Edward Gill, Mrs. Joseph Doherty, Mrs. John Mahoney and Mrs. James O'Hern.

Miss Phyllis Sears Sets Athletic Pace

FOND OF MORNING CANTERS WITH 'DICK,' AND HAVE YOU SEEN HER ON THE LINKS!

MISS PHYLLIS SEARS AND "DICK," HER FAVORITE MOUNT.

"HORSEBACK riding—oh, yes, I am as fond of Dick (her pet equine) as I ever could be of automobile riding." Miss Phyllis Sears, one of the leading buds of the North Shore season, told me the other day. There isn't a member of the smart North Shore group of notable debutantes who is seen oftener taking morning and afternoon canters than this Vincent Club girl.

Miss Sears is gradually setting the pace as one of the most original and athletic girls of the Summer smart set. She golfs as well as she rides and rides as well as she can swing a tennis racquet, all of which is some art when you see Miss Sears doing things outdoors. With the opening of the social season in the Back Bay Miss Sears will undoubtedly take the lead in fashionable circles, just as she does in athletic sports. Her friends all declare that she is a born social general.

Concerts at Tedesco Club Merry Events

Fair skies during the week brought out the Summer folks in throngs for the festivities that made the end of the liveliest of weeks at Clifton Park's airy alluring have been the broad verandas and galleries at the Tedesco Club where the August tennis tournaments are being played off, and where numerous expert players have been exhibiting their skill.

Prominent in the men's singles have been S. H. Pillsbury and A. T. Chase, both of whom are known for their accomplishments in this sport. The leading women players in the Misses Sargent and the Misses Latrobe who have been so much in evidence this Summer. Mrs. A. T. Magrane and Mrs. S. G. Wellington.

Fashionable society gathered, as usual, at the club on Wednesday night for the ball concert, which drew throngs of guests from the nearby shore. Noted among the guests were Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, who was present during the evening and also one of the guests of the dinner hosts. Those entertaining on this occasion were: George A. Dill, three; Frank H. Gigg, seven; George C. Dutton, seven; Ellis Hollingsworth, eight; E. M. Bell, five; Wm. A. Merrill, four; M. S. Johnson, four; James T. Kelly, six; E. V. Terbune, four; F. H. Conway, eight; E. W. Cobb, four; E. C. Dempsey, four; James T. Phelan, five; H. L. Taylor, four; C. P. Farmer, five; J. A. Phelan, six; E. F. Partridge, seven; C. B. Price, four; T. B. Stratton, five; P. W. Foster, four; and J. T. Wilding, two.

Although youthful society was chiefly interested in the fair given at the George Brown estate for the Boston Floating Hospital, the matron coterie shown its interest in patronizing the table in generous numbers, thus aiding the worthy scheme to clear a substantial amount. In charge were Miss Louise Brown, Miss M. Bentley, Miss Gertrude Butters, Miss E. A. Patrick and Miss Constance Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Frank of Boston have joined the cottage contingent for the remaining weeks of the Summer.

Hostesses of note include Mrs. Charles H. Perry, who entertained a party of twenty guests at her hospitable home in honor of her guest, Miss Frances Pope. Miss Pray was a frequent visitor here quite till some three years ago, when she moved to the West, where she is now one of the leading kindergarten instructors.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Hecht are among the frequent entertainers of the season, opening their home frequently to the youthful contingent, of whom their two attractive little daughters, Katherine and Caroline, are members.

Prominent among the social denizens of Clifton is Mrs. Samuel Slumin, who is a frequent guest at the Casino parties and an excellent player. Mrs. Slumin is also an active hostess and her family parties are most delightful.

Constant visitors at the Tedesco affairs are Mr. and Mrs. William Morton Banning, who are year-round residents, but are among the gifted members of the Tedesco coterie. The Banning family has been associated with the social life of Clifton for many years and has been enthusiastic concerning this breezy shore as an ideal Summer paradise.

Golf and Regatta at Lake Sunapee

GRANLIDEN HOTEL, Lake Sunapee, N. H., Aug. 23.—The ladies' putting contest was won by Miss C. Ernst, Brooklyn; Miss B. Rogers, Beverly, Mass., second, and Miss Pearsons, Philadelphia, third. The men's putting contest was won by Dr. Harry Rogers of Orange, N. J.; A. A. Gibson of Brooklyn, N. Y., second.

The golf tournament between Sea-Mist Park Lodge and Granliden teams of eight each was won by Granliden team, two up. The Touisteour golf tournament was won by J. F. Marshall of Norfolk, Va.; A. A. Stull of Philadelphia, second, and Davis Pearson of Philadelphia, third.

The sailing regatta was the greatest of any regatta ever held at Lake Sunapee. The regatta ball at Granliden Thursday evening was the social event of the season.

MARSHFIELD

Brant Rock season is at its height and seldom have the colonists enjoyed a finer one. The warm days and cool evenings are greatly appreciated and many of the cottages are taken well into October. Card parties are in great evidence these days. Tuesday afternoon Mrs. H. L. Mc-Ginn entertained four tables at bridge and refreshments were served.

Among the new arrivals this week are F. H. Mills and family of Boston at the Ashley; H. F. Achen and family of Somerville at the Scope; Mr. T. D. Sullivan of the Plymouth fire department, with Mrs. Sullivan; the Misses Annie Jennie and Kate Sullivan, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Murphy of Plymouth, at the Rose Standish.

One of the events of the week was the outdoors theatricals given on the grounds adjoining the pretty log cabin of Henry Pryor of Montclair, and which was attended largely by the colonists in this section. The subject was an original one, "Prince Isorial's Enchantment," and was written by Miss Madeline Brine, daughter of Henry Brine, and her talent was certainly appreciated by the audience, among the young folks who took part were Miss Brine as the Princess, Miss Beatrice Mason as the Fairy Queen, Misses Helen Mason, Eleanor Upton, Ellen Pierce and one or two others. The proceeds will be devoted to a fund on foot toward the building of a float or plank walk on the beach below Manomet Bluffs.

Tuesday afternoon at the Country Club house Mrs. Edward B. Atwood gave a bridge party to several of her lady friends. Five tables were in progress and prizes were won by Mrs. Kezi P. Blake of Brockton, Mrs. Harvey L. Jones of St. Louis, Mrs. Elizabeth Foster, Mrs. H. Earle Hubbell and Miss Edith Morgan of Plymouth.

THERE is small occasion for Mrs. Fish to feel at all piqued just because Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James happened to outshine her a little with her recent function styled "Masque of the Blue Garden." Mrs. Fish has an open field with every opportunity to try again. If you beat Mrs. Fish you have to go some—that's one thing.

WHAT do you know of the Princess Lowenstein Wertheim? She has arrived at the New Cliffe and it appears that she is the particular friend of Mrs. Burke-Roche, who lost no time in coming around with one of her Edit Court turnouts and taking the Princess out for an exhibition drive on the avenue. The Princess has a sweet smile, wears smart clothes, and while you would take her to be somebody in particular I fear she would be outpointed in a race with some of our soda fountain girls in the matter of beauty.

DETERMINED to look attractive at all times, the society women have taken to wearing corsage bouquets and flowers in their hats while in bathing at Bailey's Beach. These flowers are made in various colors, but a splendid imitation of the real thing.

MRS. JAMES J. BROWN has joined the "passing show" on the Belleview avenue and I thought she looked wonderfully smart as she drove a high stepping gray and has just to a high seated trap. But what impressed me the most was the style and correct manner in which Mrs. Brown held the whip, which was at an angle of about 45 degrees.

HIS Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, brother-in-law of the Czar of Russia, just now the guest of Barclay Warburton, whose wife was a Wanamaker, at Philadelphia, is expected at Newport to be feted by society. The duke will visit among others the Russian Ambassador and Madame Bakhmeteff.

Youth and Beauty of South Shore Gather at Allerton For Joys of Gala Day

Youth and beauty from the South Shore, together with a throng of guests from Dorchester, South Boston, Brookline and Roxbury, gathered at Nantasket on Friday night for the ball, given annually for the subscribers to the Hull Golf Club by its board of governors. The ball is the great day of fun has grown to be one of the chief features of the celebration, and has taken the place of the Winter Assemblies, for on this evening the young people, with Cupid as attendant, announce engagements, receive congratulations on their imminent wedding festivities, the Winter debutantes are presented informally, and with everybody knowing everybody else, the atmosphere is that of a family reunion. The ball this year called out many more of the matron set than usual, and the lovely gowns, the jewels and festive decorations, made the ballroom a small fairyland.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. A. Fitzgerald were showered with good wishes and congratulations on the success of the program this year, the former being the instigator of the movement.

Charles Daly and his lovely fiancee, Miss Ida May Cook of Brookline, were in attendance. Their engagement has just been announced and they were given much attention during the evening, both being popular in the young set at Hull.

Another engaged couple very much in evidence were Miss Hazel Bicknell and Frank Close, both of Brookline. Their engagement has but just come out and their throng of friends took occasion to extend their greetings to them.

Miss Anna Gillispie, who was one of the group to announce her engagement this Spring, was among the attractive belles at the dance. Her approaching nuptials were a matter for congratulation.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daly with their daughter, Miss Marie Daly, came over with their guest, John Henry Welsh, who has just returned from the other side, where he went for an extended stay with his father.

Miss Helen Pierce was among the most charming of the youthful belles, bringing as guest, Miss Marion Feunelioun, who motored over the week-end.

Miss Helen Murphy was also one of the attractive hostesses, having with her Miss Regina Coughlin and Gerard Coughlin.

A Radcliffe group included Miss Mollie and Miss Anna Brady, and Miss Edith and Miss Nadlon Ellis. The youthful sister, Miss Dorothy Ellis, was also in the gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Bulger chaperoned their beautiful niece, Miss Margaret Fleury, who was given much attention. Many regrets were expressed at the absence of Miss Helen O'Leary, who is now traveling abroad with her mother, Mrs. Mary O'Leary.

Also noticed on the floor and in the refreshment rooms were Miss Dorothy Sghrue, Paul Harding, Miss Helen Eagleton, Miss Caroline Murphy, Miss Evelyn Nelton, Mackey Murphy, Arthur Murphy, Mrs. Marion Farrell, Austin O'Connor, Theresa Head, Miss Cornelia Head, Miss Florence Daly, William Ellis, Miss Stella Sullivan, Thomas Boles, Frederick Ellis, Kentucky Seaney, Frederick Kenney, both of whom were the guests of Miss Nellie Moran. Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Bowen and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Roy of Kenterson; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Byrne, Miss Marie O'Brien, Mrs. J. O'Brien, Miss Frances Cavanaugh, John Sghrue, Miss Anna Louise McCarthy, Francis Cronin, Miss Dorothy Nolan, Albert O'Reilly, LeMont Brine, Miss Lillian Burke, Harold Stockwell, Miss Mary Keyes, Miss Madden Keyes, Mrs. Keyes, Daniel O'Connor, Miss Marie Norway, Miss Dorothy Moran, Arthur O'Leary, M. Kelly, Paul Bernard, Sydney Moreo, Miss Dorothy Neason of Old Orchard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gartland, Mr. and Mrs. E. Sullivan and Miss Shirley Kelley.

YOU want to know Who's Who at the National Lawn Tennis Tournament at Newport? It was not until Wednesday for "doubles" that everybody decided to come out when there was noticed Mrs. I. Mitchell Henry of London, looking very English as she came with Mrs. "Reggie" Vanderbilt.

Eugene Higgins, brother of Mrs. Henry Mortimer Brooks, who has crossed and recrossed the ocean thirty-three times, came in alone looking lost.

Count Carlo Montagnini, Comte Raoul d'Adhemar, oft reported engaged to American heiresses, and Emanuele Messoni Petrussi . . of Baro, Italy, were in the throng; also Lord Campden of London, who came with Rev. Herbert Shipman.

Miss Laura Vanderbilt Webb was with Mrs. Shipman, who looked most attractive.

Mrs. John Astor was accompanied by Mrs. Ralph N. Ell. There were Mr. and Mrs. Greenville Kane, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames and Mrs. R. Livingston Beekman; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stewart Walker, the Harvard man, with Mrs. Philip Allen Clark; Mrs. James B. Eustis, with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman; Colonel Charles Hayden of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward.

Miss Margaret F. Andrews wore a green sweater of a shade like "Kelley with his green necktie."

Mrs. J. Francis A. Clark looked good.

Mrs. James J. Brown, always a Titanic survivor, and her niece, Miss Florence Tobin, of Denver; Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, and her sister, Mrs. Peter D. Martin, Mrs. "Jimmie" Haggin and Mrs. Reginald Norman, the Russian Ambassador and Madame Bakhmeteff, Miss Edythe Deacon, as pretty as ever, Mrs. William Earl Dodge and Charley Munn.

Miss Roberts Willard in a pale blue suit, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, lace robe, blue garde; Mrs. Frances Burke Roche, white embroidered linen, Mrs. Paulding Fosdick, variegated coatee; Mrs. William G. Roelker, white serge coat suit; Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, hand painted satin; Mrs. Richard Gambrill, cream voille, black hat.

And so on and so on.

Mostly all of our set were there.

COHASSET

Mrs. Franklin McIlvain was hostess at her large Cohasset estate on Thursday from early morning until late afternoon for the village contingent, giving a lawn fete in aid of charity.

Mrs. J Pennington Gardiner was in charge of the lunch, which was served in tents on the lawn. Assisting her were Mrs. Ellis Harding, Miss Eleanor Lewis, Miss Barbara Bolles. Miss Polly Cunningham.

During the day the lunch was run along shore, carrying many enthusiastic parties, who materially contributed to the fund of the day. Also, the McIlvain bathhouse was commissioned to earn its little sake and you were not supposed to bathe on your own beach that day, but come up with your suit neatly packed, wait your turn and then pay for your dip, all, again, for the sake of charity.

Mrs. Arthur Badger and Mrs. Howard S. Barlow had a table indexed with auction and bridge which they sold at a great profit to the buyer as well as the vendor.

Mrs. Edward Stephens presided over the cake table, with was one of the most popular booths of the little patrons.

Summer Folk In Dramatics at Clifton

Friday August 29, will be the date for the Clifton Heights dramatics, an event which is awaited by the members of the Casino set and the numerous guests on that evening with intense interest. The amateur theatricals, vaudeville performances and annual dramatic performance are stellar attractions during the Summer term, for the acting is no ordinary effort, but of genuine merit and the originality exhibited by the participants has brought these affairs into much prominence.

The program as announced to date provides for three parts. The first will be an episode, portraying Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop," with Russell Churchill, Miss Dorothy Wetherald and John Stetson taking the roles. Part two is a sketch, "The Real Q," with James Hitchcock and E. H. Dyer. Part three promises to be most attractive, being an episode, "How He Lied to Her Husband," by Bernard Shaw. Scene in this act are Miss Fanale C. Hayden and Frank P. Lamson.

The entertainment committee, which is being congratulated on their success this season, comprises Frank P. Lamson, chairman; Mrs. Charles N. Young, Miss Geraldine Jones, Russell Ellis, F. N. Youthful Lady Bountifuls of Beach Bluff Have Benefit for Blind Babies

"Sweet charity" has been the diversion at Beach Bluff of the young people, the latest venture being in aid of the Blind Babies' Home, which was taken in charge by Miss Frances Young and Miss Marion Sherrard. Luck of years and experience were no hindrance to the undertaking and any unexpected difficulties were promptly solved by the young persons, simply by cutting any unnecessary red tape and being very brief and business like. Probably more bills of large denomination were changed on the eventful occasion than is usual, but they were changed to the satisfaction of the solicitors and a goodly sum rewarded the efforts of every Lady Bountiful interested.

Miss Pauline Wood was the guest of honor at a delightful dinner given by her father, E. B Wood of New York, at the Preston. Covers were laid for twelve and elaborate decorations were used.

UNTOLD AGONY WITH PIMPLES

And Blackheads on Face. Kept Awake Nights. Itching and Pains. Disfigured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Three Weeks.

1131 Salem St., Malden, Mass.—"When I was about fifteen years old my face broke out with pimples and blackheads. My face was a mass of pimples and kept me awake nights it was so itchy. For four years I suffered untold agonies, such itching and pains until I was going to give up hope of getting rid of my pimples. The pimples festered and came to a head and would itch and smart as I had to scratch them and of course this made my face disfigured to some miss.

"I tried about everything going for pimples and they did me no good till I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I was cured by three weeks' time." (Signed) E. N. Norris, May 10, 1913.

Events Along North and South Shores

Tomorrow Is Nantasket's Biggest Day, When Gay Carnival Is Opened

TOMORROW is the biggest day on the calendar for Nantasket so far this season, but there are going to be five more days just like it, or even more so, and each one coming this same week. The small boys and promoters of the Nantasket Carnival are not the only ones interested; everybody for miles around is talking about it, and almost all the residents at Nantasket are personally concerned.

The program is a most good thing, and the only way to properly appreciate the first great carnival that Nantasket has ever had is to take in everything.

Monday, August 25, the fun begins early on the boulevard, with acrobatic stunts, a balloon ascension, with plenty of noise to make it seem more enjoyable. Then there is a baby show, for which already some thirty entries have been made. This is the sort of a baby show that goes with a party, where the prettiest and fattest and curliest and squallest all have their own places and where any score cards that Uncle Sam may have devised to measure a baby's length of appetite has no weight. No indeed! there will be a parade of these babies, and the prizes will be awarded to the two prettiest decorated carriages, the fattest baby and the prettiest, so there is an opportunity for one small youngster with ambition to gather in three prizes all at once. In charge is William Wolfe, who will preside in state. Each evening will be given over to fireworks.

Tuesday, August 26, will be motor day, and out in the ocean front some thirty boats will race, speed governing all the contests. The craft will be divided into three classes, with attractive prizes waiting for the winners. The committee in charge is Captain A. A. Galiano, Frank Lane and J. E. Dunn.

Meantime the vaudeville specialties will continue along the boulevard for the amusement of the spectators and another balloon will go up.

Wednesday, August 27, will be given over to the motor parade on the boulevard and will bring out the art of the contestants in the unique trimmings on each car. It is no function for mere man, either, for the fair drivers of the South Shore are invited, and a special prize is offered to the women contestants. Those selected to care for this spectacular feature are John Smith, Captain A. A. Galiano, James Jefroe, John L. Mitchell, George Hatchard, Frank Reynolds and Raymond Macdonald.

The prizes offered are $50.00 for the best decorated car; $25.00 for the car decorated in the most novel manner; $15.00 for the car decorated and driven and occupied by ladies, and $10.00 for the funniest decorations.

Thursday, August 28, will offer for its special feature a parade of antiques and horribles, which will take possession of the boulevard, and put to route all the shadow gowns and other imaginative garb by its startling originality. Again there are large prizes, some $150.00 being distributed among the successful competitors in the fun. Comprising the committee are Edgar Emerson, William Wolfe, William Hutchins, Frederick Richards, S. J. Frye and J. Dunn.

Friday, August 29, is Breathing Day for the visitors, with nothing more strenuous than a constant round of acrobatic and vaudeville stunts, with more balloon ascensions, band concerts, fireworks and a few more items to provide for the restless.

Saturday, August 30, is really the climax, for this is to be devoted to a fireman's muster. Some twenty machines will compete. Comprising the committee are John Mitchell, George Hatchard, Daniel Mayberry, Daniel Prendergast, J. Linscott, Daniel Barrows and George Cushing. The prizes are numerous, ranging from $200.00 to $25.00 for the companies. In addition there is a special prize of $50.00 for the best appearing company, and $15.00 for the tub coming the longest distance.

The choicest pieces of fireworks have been naturally reserved for Saturday night.

The Carnival is being promoted by the Nantasket Beach Carnival Association. The officers include George E. Stearns, president; Edgar H. Emerson, vice-president; James E. Dunn, secretary; S. J. Frye, treasurer.

German Races Prolong the Shore Season

All the residents of Marblehead are saving their pennies as well as their choice invitations for the coming week, when the German guests arrive and the town will be opened wide to receive them and make them more welcome than on previous occasions. Men the little folks are denying themselves the favorite jolly pop and decorations of colored Indian feathers to contribute their mite to the fund for the fireworks and bond concerts that are to mark the presence of our neighbors from across the "pohdle."

Naturally the coming races will greatly prolong the season and bring down throngs of pleasure seekers to this port, so that there might well be the smile of satisfaction that is just now characterizing the countenance of every true Marblehead citizen.

Two days of a tea party, on August 29 and 30, with cakes and toothsome dainties made by the matrons of the town are some of the good things promised the visitors. The old Lee mansion will be the scene of the feast and the maids and matrons of the village will receive and attend to the patrons. Tea in this wonderful old house is indeed a treat, seeing like living a day out of the past, every feature of the home being preserved and the atmosphere of grand-ur and colonial gentility enhancing the pleasure. Comprising the committee are Mrs. William D. T. Trefry, Mrs. Carrie Rodgers, Miss Ada B. Conway, Miss Elizabeth Brown, Mrs. Ena Pritchard and Mrs. Frank W. Matthews.

Leslie C. Wead of Brookline is the latest addition to the permanent Summer contingent, having just purchased the Crosby house on the harbor front. This is one of the most attractive homesteads on the shore and also one of the most valuable. Mr. Wead has already taken possession.

Mrs. Frank B. Crowninshield, who has been sojourning with friends in Wilmington, is now in New York for a short period.

The Oceanside tournament, which has held the interest of the Neck residents for the week, resulted in the cup being won by F. H. Green of Newton, who has been a season resident. Entered in the contest were T. Babb, Jr., R. Buchnell, W. J. Hicknott, Jr., A. Hicknott, A. H. Lane, E. Lane and W. B. Aspinwall.

Motor parties at the Neck for the week-end include Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Thiis and their daughter, Miss Angela Thiis. They are journeying along the coast, having come from their home in Baltimore in their car. They plan to be in Portland for over the holiday.

Additions to the Boston contingent include Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Miss Edith C. Silver, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Lodge, Mrs. C. E. Kennedy, Miss Ada Kennedy, Miss Marguerite Kennedy, Miss Mabelle Kennedy, E. A. Greene and Mrs. J. H. Russell, all of whom are registered at the Oceanside.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dodge of Holyoke are members of a family gathering at the Neck, where they will remain until after the September holiday.

Miss Mabel W. Safford and Miss Evelyn A. Hawkins of Lancaster have arrived for their annual outing, going to the Oceanside.

Late vacationists include Mrs. E. I. Fisher of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Burnham of Lowell, Mrs. Jessie Rogers and Miss Lancaster, Mrs. R. E. Willett and Hopkins Follett of Brookline, Miss Carrie Pierce of Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Wood, Miss Marion Pierce, Miss Ida Sabara, Pierce of Springfield, Mrs. W. A. Frost of Fitchburg, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Batchelder of Pittsfield, Mrs. Reed and Miss Ethel Chatfield of Lowell, Miss E. F. Bloomsb of Woonsocket, Miss H. L. Bloomsb of Providence, Mrs. George W. Fisher of Grafton, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Meiler of Worcester and Mrs. F. N. Graham of Hamilton, Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs J. K Mantell of Boston were week-end guests of cottage friends at the Neck.

Miss Ada Perry, who recently returned from abroad, will entertain her friends at a musicale during the week, this being her first appearance since completing her education on the other side.

Would Like To Be Life Savers

LITTLE MERMAIDS REALLY HATE TO LEAVE THE WATER

And of course Mama has to swim, too, so here they all are, Mrs. J. W. Lee, Miss Geraldine at left of picture, and Miss Cecelia.

Little Misses Geraldine and Cecelia Lee, when they grow up, intend to be lifesavers. They are members of the yacht club set and are frequenters of the Barnacle, where society is always to be found in the late Summer afternoons.

Comprising one of the most charming groups of young people at Squam this Summer are Miss Mary and Miss Sally Damon, Miss Katherine Gordon, Miss Ellen Glascoe, Miss Katherine Rice, and Miss Dorothy Hooper, all of whom are to the fore in the athletics and social functions of the fashionable coterie.

Late comers include Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Loesloy of Lowell, who are to be for the late season at Bass Rocks.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wayland of Hyde Park have been among the arrivals of the week, boarding at Rocky Neck for their sojourn.

Welcome additions to the Annisquam settlement are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dunn of Boston. They are the houseguests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Duane, of the Adams Hill contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Brown have as their week end visitors Mr and Mrs. F. F. Brown of Boston.

The Locust cottage has been taken for the late Summer by Mrs. T. J. Sullivan of Worcester, who will entertain a large family party until after the holidays.

Prominent visitors at Eastern Point include Dr. Louis Eaabacher of New York, who has achieved wide fame as an author, and is one of the most talented members of the artistic coterie.

Louis Do Foo of New York, is also included in the group. He is known for his work on the New York Times, being a critic for that publication.

Admiral and Mrs Marix of New York are always prominent at the social affairs of Eastern Point. They are accompanied by the attractive daughter of Mrs. Marix, Miss Grace Felkins.

Miss Dorothy Swinson of Newton are additions to the younger set at Annisquam where they are for a long stay. They are accompanied by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Swinson.

Boston members of the artist colony at Eastern Point are A. W Hubler and Mrs. A. A. Townsend, both of whom have been long term visitors.

Mrs. Katherine Brinker, who has been a leader in athletics during the season, is still to the fore and has thus far held the record for winning scores on the local links.

From the moment the swimming hours begin they are drawn on the beach, and when the water is warm Miss Cecelia Lee declares it's warm and Miss Geraldine chimes in and says, "Indeed it's very warm, mover; we don't want to go out—we want to stay in and swim."

Probably of all the babies that swarm along the shady shore these two little sisters have the realest love for the water, for which Mrs. Lee is one of the most sympathetic of those who come down to the beach to swim.

Marmion Way Sojourners Entertain at Festival

Late Summer is the most attractive time of the season to the Summer folks of Gloucester, for there are even more affairs scheduled for the closing days than at any other time, despite the fact that canui is a rare thing here.

Set for August 29 is the annual field festival of the Marmion Way Summer residents, which will bring the general attention of the city to the Rockport shore. Here hospitality reigns and every cottager turns out, invites in the friends on his list and helps to make a real old-fashioned picnic. The committee includes the Summer residents and no anxious is each sojourner to make the affair a greater success than that of the previous Summer, that it is strictly a community festival.

Mrs. Alice Fisher Harcourt has been the leading spirit in the whirls at the Casino this Summer, she taking the initiative in most of the fashionable functions. Prominent among the devotees of what at Eastern Point are Mrs. E. H. Mc grave, Mrs A. L. Whaling, Mrs. Austin Perry, Mrs. Arthur Merriam, Mrs. F. M. Crocker, Mrs. C. A. Henriques, Mrs. St. John Buller, Mrs. Marcus Donnison, Mrs. J. K Hart, Mrs H. B. Urban, Mrs. William A. Barbour, Mrs. F. B Dana.

The youthful Miss Gertrude Wiggin of the Annisquam settlement, who has won so much attention in yachting circles this season, was among the recent guests at the Barnacle, which has entertained her friend, Miss Helen Gulfer of Newton Centre.

Miss Mary Pelton was hostess at a delightful musicale at her home at Bass Rocks, given in honor of her friend, Miss Ethel Ryder of Wellesley. Numerous members of the younger set from the neighboring colonies were in attendance, as it gave contributing a musical to the program of the afternoon.

Progressive parties are very much in fashion this Summer, the most recent being the tennis afternoon given by the enthusiasts of the game at Gloucester Tea was served between whiles, the merry gathering going from one court to the next, returning to the house of Miss Agnes Harding for the last set.

Mrs. William Rice of New Haven and the Misses Rice are among the leading figures of the social world at Annisquam.

Last Weeks of August Gayest at Swampscott With "Hops" and Luncheons

The last weeks of August always find life along the Swampscott shore at its gayest. There have been a number of luncheons at the Tedesco Club, and the New Ocean House. The days are devoted to motoring, tennis, golf, musicales, water sports and the regular evening hops.

Among week-end parties at the New Ocean House were Mrs. J. P. Wetherell, of Philadelphia, and her house guests, Mrs. J. Newell, Mrs. A. Converse, Bethlehem, Pa., and Dr. and Mrs. Strout of Philadelphia. The party motored over from Mrs. Wetherell's beautiful Summer home at Jamestown, R. I.

Baron Herman von Leers of South Bethlehem, Pa., and Port Antonio, Jamaica, registered Saturday for a stay. The Baron has been a regular visitor here for several years, and his many friends are always glad to welcome him.

George Hatch Quincy of the Somerset, who is a season guest, is one of the very prominent old men who have ever been at this hotel. Mr. Quincy carries his eighty-four years delightfully and is enjoying his stay immensely.

Mr. and Mrs. M S Bogart and family of several years registered for the season at the New Ocean House. Mr Bogart is manager of the Dominion Bank, one of the largest financial institutions in Canada. Accompanying the Bogarts has been Mrs. H. C. Hammond of Montreal, who has just imported a handsome English Daimler limousine, with which she expects to enjoy some of the beautiful drives along the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Ward, of East Orange, N. J., motored down from the Aspinwall at Lenox last week and are registered for a stay.

The children's party on Wednesday afternoon was very largely attended, and the little folks enjoyed the entertainment thoroughly. There were the usual games, dancing and refreshments, and the affair was most successful.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Plummer, who have been at the New Ocean House all season, left Saturday for Bretton Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Murdock, of the Vendome, Commonwealth avenue, were with them a handsome six-cylinder touring car, and are doing a great deal of motoring along the shore.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Case of Chicago are also among the season at the New Ocean House. They have with them their little son, Robert, who, though only nine years old, affects very mannish clothes, and really has some very stunning "get-ups." Willard he is a charming little chap, with the manners of a Chesterfield and he is very popular with all.

Mrs. E. R. Grabow entertained at the Tuileries Club at luncheon on Monday. Her guests were Mrs Wesley Jones Morgage, Miss K. Gage and Mrs. D. H. Judd.

Mr and Mrs. Gannett O'Riordan of Boston are registered for a stay at the New Ocean House. Mrs. O'Riordan is wearing some very fashionable gowns and attract a great deal of attention.

A very attractive woman who is at the New Ocean House for her first season is Mrs. Edwin Strong of Hartford, Ct. Her beautiful gowns, although of a very quiet tone, attract a great deal of attention by their perfect taste. By her affability and fact Mrs. Strong has made a host of friends at this resort.

William Blake, former owner of the Manhattan Hotel, New York city and Miss Edith Blake, were among the new ocean House for several days during the past week.

Among the arrivals were: Mr and Mrs. Frederick Estabrook, Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Thorndike, Miss Louise Thorndike, Brewster; Miss J. Mc. Cowgen, Bethlehem, Pa.; and Mrs. A. C. Meekly You Accept Any Room You're Lucky Enough To Get Along Cape Cod

ALONG CAPE COD, Aug 23.—There has been a great rush to the Cape during the week. The hotels are full to overflowing. Ask almost any clerk for a room and he will assure you very solemnly that there is "nothing doing."

But I must have a room!"

Oh! well there's a little one at the top of the house that you might use for a bather then the top of a billiard room, but effusively, yet meekly, you accept it—Osborn.

The Shute house is one of the oldest and most famous in South Hingham, being built by the Rev. Daniel Shute in 1746. He left it, at his death, to his son Daniel, who was one of the surgeons in Washington's Continental army.

The homestead lot was bought in 1784, and the house, still occupied by his descendants, was erected soon after it has six rooms on each floor of the main house, and, with the ell, has nineteen rooms. A number of the rooms are panelled to the ceiling on one side. Many of the fireplaces are still in use as in much of the old furniture. One chamber is preserved in the ancient style with the original wall paper more than one hundred years old, a high canopy bed, a chest of drawers, etc.

A clock which has lasted more than two hundred years stands in the dining room. In the hall is a candlestick six feet high, the candle holder sliding up and down after the manner of a modern piano lamp, showing that there is nothing new under the sun. John Hancock is now a resident of the Rev. Dr. Shute's household and the chair which came with the host and in which he sat is still in the house.

Back from Land of Evangeline.

Mrs. Fred W. Thorpe and her two sons, Warren and Stanley, returned to Medford Hillside on Friday last, after a delightful six weeks' sojourn in the Land of Evangeline.

Mrs. Charles Prescott and the Misses Jeanette and Peggy Prescott of Cambridge are at Scituate Inn in the Adirondacks for August and September.

Let the Knife Prove You Guiltless!"

How a Jealous Denver Husband Settled His Doubts by Reviving a Tragic Combat of the Middle Ages, When the Only Divorce Court Was a Hole in the Ground and a Wife Had to Battle for Her Fair Name

The Ancient Mediaeval Ordeal by Combat, in Which the Wife Had to Fight Her Husband to Prove Her Innocence.
From Talhofer's "Fechtbuch."

The Countess de la Grange, of Paris, Who Demanded a Duel with Her Husband to Disprove His Accusations, Just as the Wife of Samuel Palecia, of Denver, Did.

How the Young Comtesse de la Grange, of Paris, Recently Fought a Duel with Her Husband When Accused by Him.
Snapshot of the Scene.

Showing How the Wife Often Got the Better of Her Husband in the Ancient Ordeal by Combat.

THERE are still many people who think it is better to settle a dispute by the quick, sharp way of the knife or sword rather than by the slow, humiliating process of law.

Even an accusation of infidelity by a husband against a wife could be settled in ancient times by resort to a duel. The accused wife could demand a duel. In order to make up for her supposed physical inferiority, some handicap was imposed on the husband, such as having one hand tied or standing in a pit. If she won, that proved her innocence.

This form of marital combat was particularly common in Spain, Italy and parts of Germany during the Middle Ages. We have unmistakable evidence that the custom to-day still has a strong hold on the descendants of the people who formerly practised it regularly.

Samuel Palecia and his wife Vecentail, two Mexicans, living in Denver, recently resorted to the ancient ordeal of the knife to settle a very grave dispute between them. Doubtless it was the tradition handed down from their early Spanish ancestors that led them to adopt this method.

Palecia thought he had found evidence of his young wife's infidelity, and accused her of it. With all the ardor of her hot Spanish blood she denied the accusation and denounced her husband.

"You are a cowardly slanderer and traducer of women!" she cried.

"If you are innocent, let the knife prove you guiltless!" he retorted with equal ferocity. "If you win, then I have lied and I will make amends to you. If I win, you are guilty, and you will die, as you deserve!"

The courageous wife eagerly accepted this terrifying proposition. They agreed to fight it out in the parlor of their little home at Eighteenth and Lawrence streets, Denver.

They entered into the combat in the true spirit of the Middle Ages as it is revealed to us by the ancient chroniclers. To equalize the contest Palecia agreed to have his right hand tied behind his back, to fight with his left hand and to use a knife three inches shorter than his wife's.

Glaring savagely at one another, they took positions on opposite sides of the room. She gave the word to begin, and they started viciously hacking at one another.

The wife drew blood first by stabbing her husband on the side where he was bound. The wound was slight. He replied with a blow that touched her in the forehead.

She slashed him across the back of the hand that held the knife, but could not make him drop it. He came back with an upward stroke that pierced an artery in her right wrist. Although the blood poured out in a torrent, the plucky woman kept on fighting.

She manoeuvred desperately to get on his crippled side, but she was constantly growing weaker from loss of blood. Her husband, moreover, was an experienced knife fighter.

She struck desperately at his left side, but missed. He seized the opportunity and made a sure stroke that cut deeply into her right side.

As she sank to the floor, swimming in blood, she could not repress a shriek of pain that brought neighbors to the rescue and saved her life. Policeman Orbach entered and found the woman lying unconscious on the door and her husband standing over her with a knife.

They were both taken away to the hospital, where it appeared that the husband's injuries were not serious, while his wife's recovery was probable.

Strange to say, the same way of ending a quarrel between husband and wife was employed in Paris the other day. The Count de la Grange, a member of the most fashionable Parisian society, found letters addressed to his wife which he considered compromising. He accused her of unfaithfulness, while she denounced his conduct in opening her letters as unworthy of a gentleman, at the same time denying any suggestion of impropriety.

They agreed to settle the matter with a duel. In order to give his wife a reasonable advantage the Count consented to have his right arm tied. In every other respect the duel was conducted like one of the conventional Parisian encounters.

The Countess cleverly succeeded in getting on her husband's hampered side and inflicted a slight wound on his left arm. Honor was immediately declared satisfied. Under the terms of the duel the Count was required to acknowledge his wife's innocence and to live with her in peace and good will thereafter. Thus the scandal of a divorce suit and the unhappiness of a divided family were effectually avoided.

NEW DISCOVERIES ALL OVER THE EARTH

How to GET Your MONEY'S WORTH Out of Your DOCTOR

By William Lee Howard, M.D.

NO matter how skilful or scientifically educated a physician may be, he is often helpless in treating you because you have not told him the whole truth about yourself.

A physician is not a seer: he is not a miracle worker; he cannot tell just the details of your thoughts and habits. He is best able to help you and perhaps cure you only when you are frank, truthful and intelligent in describing your own condition

You are feeling a bit "run down," lack energy, are despondent. Your work drags upon you and finally it becomes almost unbearable. You cannot sleep, have no appetite—in fact, life seems not worth living.

Now, if at this point you consulted a responsible physician, much misery and many dollars would be saved. But nine out of ten persons take a "tonic" or blood medicine at such a time, and when they are finally forced to go to the doctor he has this double injury to repair

To get the very best out of a physician you should first try to understand yourself and then tell him what you have found out. A most important knowledge for you to have is your family history—just as much as you can get of it. A doctor can often give you assurance of health and show you where to be careful when you have told him all about yourself and the kind of germ stuff you inherit

Take the case of the young woman who suffers in many ways and comes to believe life not worth while

When she has told the doctor everything he at once takes absorbing interest—he all do with those who are frank with us. Yes she has a brother who drinks and "loafs": he broke the mother's heart. An aunt was called "queer." Father? Oh, he just plodded along; had no bad habits. Grandfathers? She can only tell about one: he had three wives. Much more this girl tells the doctor, until he understands why she is so nervous and always frightened about nothing.

Such a girl has had handed down to her a weak nervous system—weak in the sense that she can expend only a certain amount of energy at a time. She is one of the ambitious class, whose tendency is always to overdo

She does not need medicines, but knowledge of her inborn traits. If she acquires this she will be able to do good mental work, to marry and have one or two children; but she must always keep in her mind that her nervous system will stand only a certain amount of work, and that if she goes beyond this amount a breakdown will certainly follow.

What the doctor wants to know is not what cured your friend Smith, or what Dr. Brown said, but what are your real, real habits. He wants to know all about your habits when you were a child. If you cannot be absolutely open and frank with the doctor he cannot do his best for you. Your habits may be excellent from a moral viewpoint, yet really injurious to your health

Why IT PAYS TO TELL a Physician THE WHOLE TRUTH

You tell your doctor you work in an office or store from nine to five; the work has been easy and the pay fair. You tell him how the headaches began, how you gradually lost your appetite, what disagreeable feelings you now have, and end by imploring his help. But he has to question you about the tonics and other injurious stuff you have taken. You have not told him that the real cause for the nervousness started when you were a very young girl and acted imprudently. He suspects, and draws out word by word some intimate facts—the facts he should have been told at the very start.

This pulling truths from you is hard and tiresome work, and always causes the doctor to believe that there is still something being kept from him. He hardly knows just what to do for you unless you tell him something about your reading, associations, ambitions and family. Modern scientific medicine treats the patient and not the disease. If we can understand the patient's inner life and the patient can tell us everything about herself, even her dreams and fears, we can generally reach the cause and get rid of it.

SECRETS A WOMAN OFTEN KEEPS FROM HER PHYSICIAN.

—That she has been dosing herself with cheap patent medicines and deadly headache "cures";

—That she has been dancing in high-heeled shoes and tight corsets long after she should have been asleep; and —That she had an aunt who was "queer," and who finally died in an asylum.

When you leave the doctor's office you wonder if the doctor really knows all. You hope he saw what you kept back—just the facts you should have told him. You determine to tell him the next time—but nine times out of ten you don't.

You are worried over headaches. Some one told you kidney disease commenced with headaches, and was followed by pains in the back. You go to your doctor with these pains and ask him if you have kidney disease.

What ought you to do? Tell him you have been in the habit of dancing and walking in high heel shoes. That you went home from the store to the "movies." That constipation was always your great trouble. Those new and rigid corsets, stop and think—did you not put them on when you really needed to be about in loose clothing? Did you go out on a hot holiday or Sunday too tightly dressed?

These are the things to tell your doctor, and instead of leaving his office half frightened because he said he could not tell you for a few days whether you had kidney or spinal trouble, you could leave happy by knowing that your dress and habits caused all your pain and fright.

If you want the truth from the doctor tell him the truth. Don't avoid or cover the facts and expect him to know all about you. Of course, every experienced doctor reads character, and suspects hidden truths, but, nevertheless, he cannot act with certainty upon suspicion.

Most women of middle age will deliberately falsify their years. This is a very important matter to both doctor and patient. The doctor knows the patient is not telling the whole truth, and then doubts of all statements enter into his attitude. He may suspect the symptoms are due to the age, but, if he has been deceived on this point mistakes in treatment may follow.

Many physicians are blamed for their lack of understanding of a patient's case, when the truth is that the patient has kept the most important facts from the doctor. If you know that your father or mother is a victim of drug or alcohol habits, it is a very laudable attitude to shield them by your secrecy. But if the faulty nervous organization in your parents, which is shown by their habits, has come down to you, it is absolutely necessary to tell the doctor the facts if you would have him save you.

False training and convention have made women natural liars in many personal matters, matters which should not be concealed from the doctor, but generally are. By steadily putting questions we get half truths, but never know just which half we should consider in treatment.

A woman will tell her doctor she eats all she wants. The doctor is puzzled, because in spite of his treatment she does not improve. After many weeks of vain study he is about to give up the case in despair, when you find that she is a "food faddist." She has been starving herself all the time. She would not eat what the doctor ordered her to because she was afraid of getting fat.

The doctor tells a woman to go home and rest; he gives her a laxative to be taken. He knows that if his advice is followed and the patient has told him all she should, her nervousness and headaches will disappear

They don't, and again the doctor is mystified. After telling him several times that she obeyed his instructions to the letter, she finally admits she did not—"I couldn't just then, doctor; I had a very important engagement." Meanwhile she has gone on getting worse and it is a hard pull to bring her back to health.

If there is disease or insanity in your family, tell the doctor all you know about it. There are many intimate facts in your family life he should know. Frequently when the doctor is told these facts he can straighten out your difficulties. The doctor should stand as a link between husband and wife, and he can generally show you both where lies the whole trouble But if you want his confidence you must be truthful in even the little details of daily life.

Tell your doctor even your dreams. These dreams are of great importance because from them the physician can reconstruct your inner life and rebuild your health and character. But don't tell only the pleasant or funny dreams; tell about the others, for they are the ones which count in psycho-analysis. Especially what you can remember of your childhood dreams and frights should be told the doctor.

Your EYES Are Like a JAP'S; Why They LOOK Different

WE call the Japanese "almond-eyed" and the Chinese "slit-eyed," and most of us are apt to suppose that their eyes are of entirely different shape from our own. But such is not the case. The eyes of all the races are practically alike in shape, their difference in appearance being due solely to a difference in the opening of the lids.

Among the Caucasians when the eyelids are drawn open the outer and inner ends of the lids form a straight, horizontal line. The lids open wide without any special effort, presenting the effect of the full eye.

Among the Chinese and other Mongolians the lids do not open so far, and on this account they are often spoken of as "slit-eyed." Also the line from the inner to the outer corner of their eyes is not perfectly horizontal, the outer end being slightly higher than the inner corner, thus giving the effect of [illegible] termed the "almond eye."

In the Caucasian eye the end of the tear-duct at the inner corner is plainly visible, while in the Mongolian eye a fold of skin comes down over this, and only when the lid is lifted by the hand can the end of the tear-duct be seen. This peculiar formation is characteristic of the Mongolian eye and of no other. Sometimes this kind of eye appears in very young Caucasian children, giving their eyes the almond shape.

Another peculiarity of the Mongolian eye is that the lid seems to hang straight from the brow, instead of being sunken over the eyeball, as among Caucasians. When a Japanese looks downwards the upper lid is stretched out over the eyeball, and the lower lid interferes with the vision. On account of this peculiarity some scientists claim that the Mongolian eye is intended chiefly for looking straight ahead or upward.

Among the Japanese the brown iris of the eye is partially covered, but in Europeans it is always free. In Japanese children the fold of the upper lid is especially marked. The inner corner of the eye is a semi-circular fold, resting upon the lower lid, and even covering its edge. The outer edge is pointed, thus giving the typical almond shape to the eye. [illegible] of the eyes of the Japanese have much to do with these special characteristics of the eyelid, which give their eyes such a different aspect from our own.

6,000 MILES of SCALLOPS to Make EATING CHEAPER

IN these days, when the cost of living is so high, no little importance attaches to the discovery of an entirely new source of food supply almost, as one might say, at our very doors.

It is just a matter of scallops. But these shellfish are mighty good to eat—and just think, if you please, of a vast and continuous bed of them 200 miles long and averaging thirty miles in width. The Government Fisheries Bureau has found such a bed, not far off the Atlantic coast, extending all the way from Block Island to the Virginia capes. One of its exploring vessels, the Grampus, came across the bed—a mollusean deposit undreamed of—while on a trip from Boston to Norfolk.

The vessel was hauling a deep-sea net along the bottom just to see what there might be to catch, when a quantity of scallops was brought to the surface. This excited immediate interest, and the net—a kind of dredge on runners—was lowered again and again, fetching up on each occasion from one to three bushels of the bivalves. The bed seems to contain more scallops than ever were known in the world before.

Now, 6,000 square miles of scallops ought to furnish a practically inexhaustible supply for all time to come. The reason for gladness over the discovery is that these molluscs had begun to be rather scarce in our markets. Wherever found along our shores, fishing for them has been so actively prosecuted that they have been threatened with extermination. Greater New York alone uses something like 60,000 gallons of the "meats" annually, and of late the price has risen very much.

Another important point is that the newly discovered bed seems to be composed entirely of the species known as the "giant" scallop, hitherto found only in some places along the coast of Maine, and which is of greater food value and greater commercial value by reason of its superior size. A giant scallop is something like four times the size of the common scallop. When full grown it is as big as a fair-sized oyster.

The scallop is our only locomotive bivalve. An oyster, when only a few days old, settles down, attaching itself to a rock or some other convenient object, and there remains the rest of its life as a fixture. But the scallop is a lively swimmer, by which fact there hangs a tale.

Many years ago a Frenchman who was extremely fond of scallops bought several thousands of them and planted them in beds in what he thought was a suitable place—a shallow, tide-swept area, in an estuary on the New England coast. Next day, at high tide, he went to take a look at them and found, to his great astonishment, that they had all disappeared. In fact, they had taken a notion to swim away and the scallop farm was thus wiped out of existence between two tides

The scallop swims by opening and shutting its pair of shells energetically, thus expelling the water from between them and driving itself backward. They often travel in this way in shallow water with such rapidity that the eye can hardly follow them. Sometimes they form a considerable family in large companies. One can scarcely imagine a lovelier sight than that of a flock of these pretty creatures, with shells of every hue from purple and white to pink and yellow, darting about in clear water—the flight-like movements, vertical, horizontal and zigzag, being more suggestive of a flock of little birds than of bivalve molluscs.

It is not without appropriateness that the scallop shell is used in heraldry to indicate that the bearer of a coat-of-arms has made long voyages at sea. The scallop has been the badge of several orders of knighthood, especially those of the Crusaders. Only the big muscle, by which the valves of its shell are held together, is used for food.

Speaking of "locomotive" molluscs, there are many univalve kinds that are habitual mountain climbers. Only the other day the Smithsonian Institution received a collection of shells representing no fewer than 2,500 species of such creatures gathered by one enthusiastic scientist in the Philippine Islands, many of them being obtained from the very summit of Mount Apo, the highest mountain in the archipelago

How did they get there? Why, they walked up, of course. Snails are notoriously slow pedestrians, and it is by no means to be supposed that these made their way from the foot to the top of the mountain in a week or even in a year. To accomplish the journey must have taxed the climbing powers of many successive generations.

That clams climb mountains—some kinds of clams that is to say—is a fact admitting of no possible doubt Their shells are often found at very lofty elevations, and until science found out how they got there, the matter seemed a good deal of a puzzle. Inasmuch as they do not walk on land, the solution of the problem is simply that in the course of many generations they have made their way up the slope by way of streams.

Watch ANIMALS for the WEATHER

MOST birds and beasts are much more sensitive to approaching changes of weather than human beings are and by close observation of some of their habits the weather can be forecast with a considerable degree of accuracy.

Cattle are among the most infallible weather prophets. When they see them early in the morning scarring to graze, heights and uttering a hoarse, croaking sound they can be reasonably certain of a fine, clear day. So also flying unusually high in the early morning are a sign of fair weather

The lowing of cattle, geese and other water fowl is a sign of rain. Just before a storm you will always find white cocks and hens rubbing in the dust and in other ways showing their uneasiness. Cattle and sheep announce a storm long before its arrival by huddling in one corner of the field with their heads turned away from the wind

Just before a severe rain dogs are apt to be very sleepy and dull and to lie all day before the fire. If they bark long and loud during the night without any visible cause, it is a sign of a sudden change in temperature.

When moles throw up more earth, when numbers of spiders appear on the walls, when pigeons return slowly to their dovecotes, when the frogs croak with unusual vigor and when the bees are reluctant to leave their hives—all these are declared by close observers to be forerunners of rain

Before a severe wind-storm sets in, pigs will run scolding about as if they had gone suddenly mad. In regions where cyclones and tornadoes are prevalent, it has given rise to a widespread belief that these animals can actually "see the wind

In Autumn the flight of wild geese in a westerly or easterly direction, trees and hedges very full of berries and the early appearance of woodcock, snipe, etc., are thought to be indications of a severe Winter

That the next day is going to be fine it has been noted that bats continue flying about very late of an evening. The floating of gossamer and especially its presence on the rigging of ships are indications of fair weather, in which from time immemorial sailors have placed much confidence

The appearance of gulls, petrels and other sea birds in some distance inland presages stormy weather

Almost everybody has noticed that flies are more troublesome and gnats more apt to sting for several hours before it begins to rain.

When the dew lies plentifully on the grass of an evening you may look for a pleasant morrow, but if there is little or no dew, a wet day is ahead.

When a cat washes over her ears you may be pretty sure that it will rain before the day is out. The action is a very noticeable one. After wetting her paw with saliva she passes it energetically several times over the upper side of her ear. The action may be performed on the right or left side, or both.

The explanation probably is that the change of atmospheric pressure causes a pressure about the cat's head with she seeks to relieve by washing

It may be that she will do the same thing if she feels a foreign substance upon the ear, but in that case she usually scratches vigorously with the hind leg. In the majority of cases washing over the ear is a valuable sign of rain.

The common English sparrow will stop its chatter- house seven or eight hours before the arrival of a [illegible] storm, and ominously silent. All birds give [illegible] and [illegible] atmospheric changes of the weather but with some [illegible] the signs are easier to read than with [illegible]

YOU MIGHT TRY--

To Label Jelly.

A SIMPLE way to label jelly is to write the name on the hardened paraffin which seals the top.

To Test Baby's Bath.

DO not dip your hand in baby's bath to find out if it is too hot, your hand is tough and not a good indicator of heat for baby's tender skin. Stick your elbow in the water, if not too hot for that it is safe for baby.

A Good Egg Basket.

KEEP eggs for cooking in a wire basket. The basket is light to carry, and one can see how many eggs are on hand without taking the basket off the shelf. They are in less danger of breaking also, than in a box or tin pail

To Take Rust Out of Steel.

COVER the steel with sweet oil well rubbed in, and in forty-eight hours use unslacked lime, finely powdered, and rub until all the rust disappears.

The RIGHT WAY to BEGIN the DAY

By A. L. Wood, M.D.

THERE is a right way and a wrong way to begin the day, and the method you choose may have a decided effect upon the success or failure you will achieve during your waking hours.

Try to plan your activities as far as you can the night before. Five minutes of calm looking ahead in the early evening will go a long way toward lessening the burdens of the morrow.

This done, take a bath, not too warm nor too cold, and be careful not to remain in the water. This nightly bath, followed by eight hours sleep in a well-ventilated room, is the best preparation one can have for a successful day

When your alarm clock arouses you—or, better still, the morning sun—don't jump out of bed and rush into your clothes as if the house were afire. Hurry in the early morning interferes with your heart action and your circulation and irritates your nerve centres. By going slow for the first few minutes you will be able to do more and better work throughout the day.

First of all, remove the pillows from under the head and take a score or more of long, deep breaths

Next, place the hands above and back of the head, separate the feet and stretch the arms and legs to the fullest extent, pushing upward with the arms and downward with the legs six times.

Alternate the motion of the arms and legs, pushing up with the right arm and down with the right leg, at the same time drawing the left arm and shoulder down and pulling the left leg up. Keep the arms and legs straight. Repeat this six times and rest for a minute.

Place the hands, palms down, under the small of the back, one hand resting on the other. Bend the knees, placing the feet flat on the bed, and keep them bent. In this position raise and lower the hips as far as possible, using the hands under the small of the back as a fulcrum. Repeat this exercise ten times.

With the hands in the same position, bring the knees as near the chin as possible, then force the hips far down

With the hands still in the same position, rotate the knees upon the hips in a large circle ten times. Then reverse the motion ten times.

These exercises limber up some of the most important joints of the body, accelerate the circulation of the blood and cure indigestion.

After your bath or a brisk rub-down with a coarse towel or a stiff brush, drink one or two glasses of cool water

Dress and take a short, brisk walk, with deep breathing, and you will be ready to enjoy your breakfast

CATERPILLARS That FLY in Their Own BALLOONS

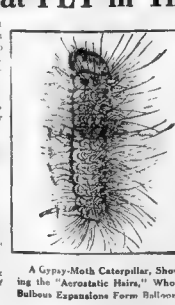
THE Government Bureau of Entomology has just chanced upon a very curious discovery, which seems to throw light upon what has hitherto been a puzzle—namely, the appearances of small gypsy moth colonies in widely scattered, separated patches of New England, far away from any line of automobile or [illegible] travel.

The difficulty now seemed impossible to explain, inasmuch as the female gypsy moth cannot fly, and the insect must therefore be carried in order to pass rapidly over considerable distances.

The solution of the problem seems to lie in the fact that the caterpillars, though devoid of wings, of course, can themselves waft through the air, with the aid of numerous silk balloons.

These balloons, which had never excited notice, are small balloon expansions of the hairs that grow on the back of the caterpillar, and it is thought at least likely that they are filled with a gas lighter than air

With any sort of a breeze blowing, the balloons give the caterpillar enough buoyancy to enable it to float over long distances, a fact which has been definitely proved by setting up screens in various places, on the lees of forests, to [illegible] let out from shore, etc., covered with a "sticky" substance to catch any of the creatures which they might happen to come blowing along. These experiments resulted in the capture of many caterpillars



A Gypsy-Moth Caterpillar, Showing the "Aerostatic Hairs," Whose Balloon Expansions Form Balloons

The first experiments were made by releasing gypsy moth caterpillars in front of electric fans, before which they would drift to a distance of thirty to forty feet. But this method did not yield conclusive results and so the outdoor plan was adopted, with screens and [illegible]

A box filled with gypsy moth egg clusters and larvae was fastened to the top of a six-foot pole (stuck into the ground), with both ends open, so that the breeze might blow through it and start the caterpillars floating. By placing the tanglefoot screens at various distances, in the path of the wind, and counting the number of larvae caught on them, definite data were secured

It is believed that the silk spun by this kind of caterpillar is of exceptional buoyancy. Experiments have shown that an average specimen will spin about seventy yards of silk. This might help a good deal to keep it afloat.

But it is deemed likely that the caterpillars, with the help of their little balloons, are frequently carried for hundreds of feet up into the air by the little whirlwinds which act in the same way upon leaves or pieces of paper, and that in this manner, rising far aloft, they may be borne over many miles of distance before falling to the ground again

Such a thing, of course would be particularly likely to happen when the caterpillars were hanging suspended [illegible] their silk from branches of trees.

What I Think of My Wives—By Nat Goodwin

No. 1 "Like a Mother," No. 2 an "Obligation," Maxine Elliott a "Roman Senator," Edna Goodrich an "Error," No. 5 His "Life Preserver," Says America's Champion Husband

MR. NATHANIEL GOODWIN, one of the greatest and best beloved (except by his wives) of American actors, has long been promising to write a book which would set forth his rich store of stage and matrimonial experiences.

He has written his book, and in it, if he has not made perfectly clear just why beautiful women marry him, he has made perfectly clear why he has separated from so many of them.

The book is brilliant, full of fascinating anecdotes upon the great and lesser folk of the stage with whom Nat has come in contact with in his decades of acting. It will be published during the Fall, and will no doubt take first rank among stage memoirs.

He might still have been a happy and deserving once-turned husband, according to his book, had not one wife died and three divorced him. To the sixth wife, who appears in his horoscope, according to grave astrologers, he gives no present thought. He is living, three months after his fifth marriage, on a little island of content.

The following article, taken from the manuscript sheets of the book, is printed by the courtesy of Mr. Goodwin himself. Here is how the five-wived fascinator bares his soul and airs the troubles of a five-ply husband in the book "I Wonder."

By Nat Goodwin
In His Forthcoming Book of Memoirs.

I HAVE been censured, sometimes harshly, for my versatility in the choice of wives, and many have marvelled at my fortunate—or unfortunate—selections. I have always been long on the market of home and wives.

I truly believe that no home is complete without a wife, providing she is of the kind that enjoys the company of honest and intelligent people. Some men only lease their mates and then prate about respectability. If I have decided at different times to tear down any of the Ephesian domes which I have erected, is the fact of my destroying them enough to warrant my being known, as was Alexander, as the fool that razed (or was it raised) them?

The three saddest events in my life were the burial of my son, the child of myself and the former Mrs. Nellie Baker Pease; the death of my wife, Eliza Weathersby, and in expecting Her Majesty's Theatre, London, with Sir Henry Irving, under the guidance of Beerbohm Tree, then the lessee and manager.

The three happiest events were the birth of my son, the presentation of a loving cup to me by the Lambs Club, and my first night's performance of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice."

Eliza Weathersby was one of the loveliest women I ever saw, and without doubt the most amiable and capable of the deepest devotion. A superb artist she entered burlesque to the surprise of all who knew her and to the deep regret of many. The reasons for her entry into the burlesque field was that the salary offered enabled her to support her widowed mother and five sisters, who were left in want by the death of their father. Every week, after our marriage, a certain sum was sent across the ocean out of our joint salaries to the widow and orphans left in London, and one by one, each succeeding year one of the five sisters would come over to join our happy family.

I was only a stepping when I married this beautiful creature. Moreover, I was unreliable and, I confess, unappreciative of what the fates had been so kind as to bestow upon me in the form of a wife. It was I who began the suit. I was very much embarrassed during the trial when the judge asked me to give him the name of my wife before I married her. I told him I thought it was Hall. He said, "Don't you know?" I said, "It's the name of her brother, who had previously played under my management.' When the papers were returned from her attorneys we gave her maiden name as McDermott. I said, "That's the name of our next husband." We afterwards discovered that her name was McDermott and that she had married a man of the same name. Hence arose the awkward situation."

(He gives to Edna Goodrich but a few lines. Indeed Number Four narrowly escapes the oblivion of silent contempt so far as her former husband is concerned.)

My marriage to her was one of the great errors of my career. I realized we were mismated. I had fallen in love with her while trying to save her from a scoundrel. My zeal outran my discretion. Her mother was a jarring chord. In short the avenues of our lives did not run parallel and the milieu she created in our home became one of trying ordeals rather than domestic felicity. She was marvelously beautiful—so they tell me. But, to quote from James Whitcomb Riley, "Pretty is what pretty does."

(After his third divorce drama, in which she played the heroine, Miss Goodrich had little to say of him, only: "When a man is fat and past fifty he would better stop his pursuit of romance," and, when in softer mood: "It is a great pity. He was once such a fine actor. What a waste of life!")

In May, 1913, I again startled the world by marrying Margaret Moreland, and set the buzzards and the gossips to wagging their ears (Nature query: Does a buzzard wag its ears?) and lashing their tongues in spasms of spleen. Irrespective of my love for the lady, her devotion to me during my late illness was worthy a crown of rubies. I only wish I possessed one to place upon her brow. She saved my life and I owe it to her. The trouble has been that I have always admired beauties and they have handed it to me.

I have constantly referred to fate while writing my book, taking my cue from Homer, but had I known he simply used the word fate to save time, and since my course through life was directed by "fates" rather than fate, I should not have marvelled at my many disappointments in the matrimonial field. With those "Three Little Maids from School"—Ladies Luckless and Atropos—leading me through life with their silken threads through my nose, allowing me to go and then reeling me back again, as one toys with a game fish, I have felt like giving up the game long ago.

Young ladies, you certainly have made it very warm for me.

"There is an expressive verb 'to pan'—its meaning is 'to roast,' 'to criticize.' 'They've always handed it to me,' says Nat. 'But even an ex-husband will turn. It's quite a "pan" for his ex-wives, this book of Nat's.

Maxine Elliott, Wife No. 3, Whom Nat Calls "The Roman Senator."

Edna Goodrich, Wife No. 4, Whom He Calls His "Error," and Who Cost Him Half a Million.

Nat in the Pacific Surf Cooling Off.

Many have accused me of wanton neglect. I may have neglected her, but only for the companionship of men. She never complained, and during the ten years of our happy married life there was never one discordant note. She was ten years my senior and treated me more like a son than a husband, but, like the truant boy who runs away from school now and then, I was always glad to return and seek the forgiveness that an indulgent mother always gives a wayward child. Our own house near Boston was a little paradise. A loving sister, a dutiful daughter, a loving wife, she is resting in Woodlawn and the daisies grow over her grave.

[There was a brief matrimonial hiatus. Of the resumption of his marriages he says:]

About this time I began to weary of the solitude of single life. Living with dear old John Mason, in our flat on Twenty-eighth street, life became to me a burden. We were very respectable persons, John and I, at that time and led a most exemplary life.

It was during these disconsolate hours that I became interested in a Mrs. Nellie Baker Pease, wife of a dilettante living in Buffalo. She was desirous of entering my profession, and asked me if I would introduce her to Mr. Steele Mackaye, who was teaching the Delsarte system in New York. During my week's sojurn in Buffalo I was introduced to her mother, sister, brother and husband. The brother must have emanated from the same pod as the husband, Pease, or perhaps on some coral reef where sponges predominate. He proved a most absorbing person. I wired him once to spend a few days in New York. He wired me that he was coming for a cup of tea—and stopped two years.

I noticed during my visits to her house that she bestowed no love nor even respect upon that dilettante husband. I promised her to assist her to meet Mackaye, and after binding myself with this obligation I took my departure.

I met her afterwards in Boston where she told me she was suing for a divorce, and in a few days I was served with papers from the husband, who charged me with alienating his wife's affections. When the summons came she took it as a joke, saying, "What a great relief from a little incubus." I failed to see the joke and suggested that she furnish some solution for escape from this most embarrassing situation. I realized the publicity and scandal that must surely come. She had met my mother and father in the meantime and they were greatly upset about the matter. I realized the publicity and scandal that must surely come. I put the question directly to her: "What shall I do?" She said: "It is very simple. Go to Buffalo. Buy them off. Come back to Boston and marry me. Your mother has become quite fond of me, likewise your dad. I am passionately fond of art. I think you are the most charming of men, and I know I can make you superlatively happy." I fell for this. What else could a true born American do?

It was at a banquet given by Mr. Tim Frawley, in San Francisco, I first met the Juno-like Maxine Elliott, one of the most beautiful women then I had ever seen. Her raven-black hair and eyes in delightful contrast to the red hues that formed an aureole, as it were, above her head were wonderful. There she sat, totally unconscious of the appetites she was destroying, absorbing the delicate little compliments paid her by that prince of good fellows, John Drew. Serene and superior she reminded me then, as many times she has since, of a Roman Senator and upon her I afterward bestowed that sobriquet.

During my marriage to Maxine Elliott she purchased a house on Duke street, London, without my knowledge. I had previously placed my furniture in a storehouse together with the contents of my wine cellar, which she quietly confiscated. I did not mind the furniture so much, but to tickle the palates of her English friends with my expensive St. Emilions and Veuve Cliquot was rude, to say the least. Besides I was never invited to her Duke street house. After I had tried so hard to entertain her at Jackwood, my English home, I think her conduct was most discourteous.

A great many people have the idea that Maxine Elliott divorced me. It was I who began the suit. I was very much embarrassed during the trial when the judge asked me to give him the name of my wife before I married her. I told him I thought it was Hall. He said, "Don't you know?" I said, "It's the name of her brother, who had previously played under my management.' When the papers were returned from her attorneys we gave her maiden name as McDermott. Why Crime Does Not Pay—

No. 21 of a Series of Remarkable Revelations by Sophie Lyons, "QUEEN OF THE BURGLARS"

How the "Queen of the Burglars" Smuggled Chinamen Into the United States and the Daring Methods She Used

Written by Sophie Lyons

Sophie Lyons

A GREAT many men and women who would scorn taking a penny not their own in any other way think there is nothing wrong in defrauding the Government by bringing valuable goods into the country without paying duty.

I used to have that feeling myself, but now I see that the smuggler is not one whit less a thief than the man who robs a bank or picks your pocket. In some ways, indeed, the smuggler is far more culpable, for he is usually well enough able to pay the Government's tax, while the burglar and pickpocket are often forced to steal in order to keep themselves and their families from staving.

Smuggling was, of course, a necessity to a criminal like myself, who operated in both Europe and America. When I returned to this country with a satchel full of stolen diamonds it was out of the question to think of declaring them, even had my conscience inclined me to pay Uncle Sam his duty. To have done that would have been to invite arrest, for in many cases detectives on the trail of the missing gems arrived on the same steamer with me.

I couldn't begin to estimate the total value of all the stolen goods I have smuggled into this country, but it must have been several hundred thousands of dollars.

Smuggling with me was for a long time only incidental to my other crimes. I was only natural, however, that the reputation I had in the underworld for cleverness in eluding the customs officials should spread to other circles and lead to my services being sought by men who make a business of smuggling.

When I first went to live in Detroit I took a trip to Chicago, and in looking about the place went into an antique store to see the curiosities.

While there a man came in who knew me, and he introduced me to the proprietor of the place, who was a chinaman. My friend in introducing me said I lived in Montreal, and this seemed to interest the Chinaman very much. My friend made a small purchase and went out of the store, leaving me there alone.

The Chinaman talked to me about his antiques, and suggested that I call to see him the following day. He said he had friends in Montreal and would like to send them some little presents through me. This Chinaman's store was on South Clark street, and I was stopping at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

After leaving the store I called on the man who had introduced me and inquired about the Chinaman. My friend assured me he was a very wealthy man and had a great deal of influence with his countrymen.

At my hotel I found a ticket for the opera awaiting me, and when I went there that evening I found my Chinaman and two of his countrymen sitting in the box where I had a seat. He greeted me, and after the first act he and his countrymen invited me to dine with him after the performance at a Chinese restaurant, which I agreed to do.

In the restaurant he told me that he would like to get me to bring over several of his friends from Canada to Detroit. I asked him to explain how I could get his friends over. He said:

"You can get him over to Detroit in a boat, and then take a train to Chicago."

"But suppose I get caught," I replied, "I would be fined and probably have to go to jail."

"If you are caught," he replied, "I will pay the fine. There is no prison penalty for smuggling a man."

Then I began [illegible] him on the price I was to be paid. I asked a thousand dollars, but he demurred and we finally compromised at $750. He wanted to hold the money until I had safely delivered the Chinaman, but I would not consider this, and refused to undertake the job until the $700 was handed over to me. He came to my terms, and handed me the money, along with some articles of clothing to be used by the Chinaman I was to pick up in Canada.

I went home to Detroit and began figuring out how I could get this Chinaman safely into Chicago. I was always on the alert to make money, but this particular job was one I had never before undertaken with, and I did not see my way clear to it. I hated the idea of being arrested as a Chinaman. It took me a week to make up my mind, but I finally decided to go after the Chinaman and do my best.

I went over to Windsor, Canada and met the Chinaman who was to come with me. I had a letter of introduction to an Americanized Chinaman, and he turned over the fellow I was to handle. That night I brought my man over in a rowboat and placed him in one of the houses I had built on my rear lot. A day or two later I got him safely to Chicago, and the Americanized Chinaman was so grateful for my work that he gave me a number of valuable presents.

This was my first experience in smuggling Chinamen, and my success encouraged me to further efforts.

A few weeks after my first job I received a letter from my Chicago Chinaman asking me to undertake another smuggling operation. This time the contract called for seven Chinamen instead of one. The Chinaman promised me $500 for each Chinaman I brought over safely.

I then asked him how much I would get in case I lost some of my cargo or did not succeed at all in the work. I would not take the job unless he agreed to give me $500 for every Chinaman in the crowd whom I lost, and $500 for every one I got in. He agreed to my bargain, and I prepared for the work.

The seven Chinamen were to be ready for me at Windsor, just across the river from Detroit, and after I received information that they were waiting for me, I crossed over to take them in hand. The Chinamen were boarding at a Chinese laundry, the address of which had been given me, and I went there with my letter of introduction.

I was not cordially received by the laundryman, who was anxious to keep his seven men with him as long as possible, because of the board they were paying. I made a fuss with this man, and he finally let me have four of the Chinamen. My boat was at the dock, and I had two men in it waiting for me. On such a big job as this it was necessary to have some help, especially in keeping the Chinamen quiet and preventing them from jumping out of the boat. We got the four Chinamen over to Detroit in safety, and I placed them in hiding in my house on the rear lot. A night or two later I got them all on a car and landed safely in Chicago and received my money. I then went back for the other three Chinamen, and found, to my disgust, that the laundryman would not let them go with me. He even called in one of the Canadian police and wanted to have me arrested as a smuggler, but it was not against the laws of that country for me to smuggle Chinamen into the United States, and he could not do anything. I finally got them safely to Chicago and then went home.

There was an influential Chinaman over in Canada who wanted to get to Chicago. He had lived in the United States, but had gone back to China on a visit and found it impossible to return to this country. My job was to show him the way into his old place of residence. I rowed him over from Canada in my boat and we got aboard the train for Chicago. We hadn't gone far when the conductor ordered us out of the swell parlor car into one of the coaches, and we hadn't got comfortably seated there when a brakeman came in and spotted us.

"You've got a swell Chink there," he said. "Where did you get him?"

I laughed knowingly and handed the brakeman a twenty dollar bill. He threw the money in my face, and I picked up the bill and put it back in my purse.

"This Chink is a swell," said the brakeman, "and I suppose you will get a show and out of it; you can afford to give me more than twenty."

"I don't have to give you anything," I replied, "so please go away from here and don't bother me."

The brakeman went off scowling, and shortly after the conductor entered. I complained to the conductor about the brakeman's treatment, but he paid little heed to me. The Chinaman was sitting in the seat in front of me, where I could keep him under my eye. Shortly afterwards midnight the brakeman came in again and said:

"I see you still have the Chink with you. In a little while the Government inspector will be around, and both you and the Chink will land in jail."

"All right," I said, "when the inspector comes in I will explain matters to his satisfaction." But I was quite upset over the prospect of meeting the inspector.

A few minutes after the brakeman had passed the conductor came through the car, and I stopped him, saying:

"Mr. Conductor, I understand the inspector will be in shortly. Have you any idea what will happen to me and my friend here?"

"Why," he said, "I have no doubt you will be arrested."

I then asked him where we were, and he said we were in the woods a few miles outside the city limits.

I immediately jumped up, pulled the stop signal of the train and whipped out a revolver, which I pointed at the conductor. I told him not to stir or I would put a bullet in him, and I then grabbed my Chinaman and jumped off the car when it had stopped. The ground was covered with snow and it was early in the morning and quite dark. I did not know where to go with my Chinaman, but after looking around a bit I saw a dim light in the distance, and we traduced for it. When we got near the light I found it was a farmhouse.

I told my companion to stay a little distance behind while I went up to investigate. I peeped through the window and saw a farmer in his bare feet lighting the fire. I went up to the door and rapped. The old man came to the door, and I went inside. I told him I had got lost in the woods and offered him ten dollars if he would hitch up his wagon and drive me into Chicago, which was several miles off. He agreed to do this, and after finishing his work about the fire he dressed himself and called to his wife and told her he would be gone an hour or two.

The horse was brought out, and everything in readiness. I went over to the clump of bushes behind which the Chinaman was concealed and brought him over to the wagon. The farmer was astonished at the sight of the Chinaman and inquired who he was. I told him he was an actor on his way to the World's Fair in Chicago and was to join a Chinese company of players there. This satisfied the old fellow and the three of us got aboard.

We drove along the unfrequented roads so as not to meet any inspector who might be hovering in the district, and soon were safely landed in Chicago. I received my payment for the Chinaman, and went back home to Detroit.

A year passed before I again took up business with the Chinamen. The Chicago Chinaman had another job for me, and I went out there to talk it over with him. Since my last experience a number of smugglers had been arrested and I was not so anxious to take up the work which was now becoming more hazardous. When I started for Chicago at that period, there were twenty Chinamen in the Detroit jail. They had been caught while being smuggled into this country and were being held while arrangements were made for their deportation.

When I reached Chicago the Chinaman told me what he wanted done, and promised to pay me $5,000. He introduced me to another Chinaman, who he said was an officer of the society for the care of friendless Chinamen, and this man desired to visit the Detroit jail and talk with the Chinamen confined there. To get $5,000 for getting a permit for a Chinaman to visit the jail seemed an awful price to pay, and I guessed there was something beneath the surface which I could not fathom. No Chinaman is foolish enough to throw away money so carelessly as this fellow seemed to be doing. But my agreement was to get this Chinaman into the Detroit jail, and I went about that job awaiting developments to show me what the real motive was. When the Chinaman and I arrived in Detroit, I thought it safest to get out at a station before the regular stopping place. The next morning I went with him to the jail where the twenty Chinamen were, and I left the Chicago Chinaman talking to his companions behind the bars. He visited them several times during the next few days, no doubt prompting them in the parts they were to play later on, and a day or two before the plan was to be carried out he gave me the details.

It seems that there were a number of Chinamen in Chicago who wanted to pay a visit to China, and, naturally, wanted to save the expenses of such a trip. The scheme was to substitute these Chinamen for the ones who were going to be deported, thus allowing those who wanted to get into the country a chance to stay here and at the same time allow the other Chinamen to go back to China at the Government's expense.

On the day set by the authorities for the shipment of the Chinamen they were taken out of the Detroit jail and put on a special car bound for the Pacific Coast. When this car arrived in Chicago, the passengers had to be transferred to another car, and there was a wait of an hour or more.

At the Chicago station there was a great throng of Chinamen on hand to say goodby to the unlucky fellows being deported, and many of them had baskets in their arms filled with fruit and presents. As soon as the Chinamen got out of the car there was a rush of the Chicago Chinamen to shake their hands and kiss them and hand them the presents. The police deputies in charge of the job looked on amused at the love-making of the Celestials, and after a reasonable time twenty Chinamen went back into the car, bound for China.

During the mixup the Chinamen who were [illegible] slipped into the crowd and changed places with the other Chinamen who wanted to go back to China. The car started off and the Government sent back twenty Chinamen to China, but not the original consignment that had left Detroit. It paid the fares of those who had wanted to go back!

In the course of my smuggling experiences I ran across many engaged in the same trade. It was a profitable line of work.

Nevertheless, I don't know of a single professional smuggler who really had anything to show for his work in the end. Their earnings, like those of other professional criminals were invariably squandered.

My experience in smuggling only served to convince me that CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

SOPHIE LYONS.

What the Stars Predict for September

THE luminaries are fortunately conjoined with Jupiter in the lunation for September, which gives promise of improvement over the present month. While diplomatic problems will continue disturbed, a more agreeable atmosphere will attend affairs of state. This may be regarded as merely a lull in the storm—a more amicable trend to matters previously precipitated. Venus sits very benignly in the quarter of foreign relations and circumvents much of the ulterior activity of Neptune in the same angle. This latter shows machinations against our national integrity, but unsuccessfully directed.

Uranus nearing the horizon indicates an unsettled condition of the public mind, with a general protest against machine methods in politics and a clamoring for new systems of public policy. This will be emphasized in fusion campaigns under the banner of reform, and factional differences will be practically eliminated. The conjunction of Sun-Moon with Jupiter is essentially an aspect of adjustment, and the candidates who represent this policy will receive popular acclaim.

There will be interesting happenings in scientific and literary fields during September, an invention of note will be heralded and there will also be marked activity in ecclesiastical circles.

The public health will be jeopardized in the first half of the month, febrile, pulmonary and stomachic ailments prevailing, and many cases of ptomaine poisoning will be reported. The death rate, how ever, will be below the average, with a general health improvement after the full moon on the 15th.

Congressional activities and Cabinet policies will be approved, and military and naval movements will succeed, although a casualty affecting the latter is predicted.

There will be a concerted effort on the part of the interests to bolster market values preparatory to unloading present accumulations, furthered by improved money conditions and currency legislation. Some definite reactions are to follow, however. Benefits will be accorded public institutions, crime will be noticeably less, and the law courts will temper justice with mercy.

The President and Eastern executives will be worried over impending difficulties, despite the present even tenor, hence vigilance and caution will characterize their official acts. Any threats against the Monroe Doctrine, however, will be confronted with confidence and maintained to the point of belligerency.

Particular events of interest may be looked for on or near the following dates:

September 1.—Casualties on the water and in parades will mar the festivities of Labor Day. Weather fine, with northeast winds.

September 2.—Approval of a traffic or taxicab ordinance; some popular adjustment of this nature.

September 3.—An electrical storm, with premonitory symptoms of the equinox. Destruction by tidal waves; a humid atmosphere. A mysterious murder puzzles the authorities.

September 5.—An important diplomatic transaction effected; a healthy impetus in the executive department of Government.

September 6.—Storm areas much disturbed, with spasmodic evidences of same between this and the 15th. Excitement on the Stock Exchange centres about this day.

September 7.—A Newport function attracts notice. Weather fine on this and the following day, with an active and rising market on the 8th; a public bequest will be announced and monetary affairs greatly benefitted.

September 10.—A lower temperature, death of a public official and a church dignitary. Depressed market conditions. Wharfage property endangered. Government affairs temporarily disturbed.

September 11-13.—A prominent social function; a diplomatic entanglement satisfactorily settled.

September 15.—Marked atmospheric disturbances, with full moon on the equator; storm centres intensified, and seismic shocks reported; a dangerous period for mariners.

September 16.—A special meeting of the President's Cabinet, International amities affected. Unusual market activity. High winds due to sun conjunction Mercury, a condition that extends practically to the 20th.

September 23.—Sun on equator at the moon's quarter accentuates the weather disturbances. This is a critical point of the month in more ways than one, with industrial unrest as a feature.

September 24.—A more tranquil period begins; a prominent engagement or marriage announced.

September 26-27.—Marked political activity. A pronunciamento from a Mayoralty candidate meets with approval. Mid cooler weather at close of month, with new moon at an eclipse node on the 29th.

Jupiter will prove a benevolent factor throughout September in the lives of those born around the close of February, April August or December, or in the early days of September or November. Good health, fortunate prospects, new friends and favors may be confidently looked for. Jupiter is termed the "greater bonfic," and begets noble impulses, attracts preferment and inclines to generosity and extravagance. The eligible of the fair sex born at these times will have new admirers and marital opportunities during next month.

Saturn influences will prevail next month for those born between the 8th and 11th of March, June, September or December. As nature evolves according to preordained law, it would be foolish to run counter to her methods; therefore, the best course for these natives is one of non-resistance; avoid initial effort, attempt to force nothing, postpone important matters, as no headway will be accomplished, and beware of colds and stomach troubles.

Unwise changes and investments will inconvenience those born near the 25th of January or April, or the 28th of July or October; the fair sex will have domestic or affectional disturbances; iconoclastic tendencies will also show themselves in these lives.

Advancement in the coming year of life if born between the 8th and 11th, the 15th to 22d, or in the last week of September. Domestic difficulties if born around the 2d, 4th or 12th, but business prospects good; ill health and bereavement if the natal day be near the 10th or 22d. Radical changes in the next twelve months if born near the 27th.

Newport Tango-meters The Trot!

Newest Unusual Fads of Society as Revealed by the Famous Fish Ball--Dancing by the Mile, the Paid Partners, the Anti-Fat Frolic

Newport, Aug. 20

"GOOD morning, how many miles did you dance last last night?" This curious salutation is heard everywhere in Newport this season, for "dancing by the mile" is the latest fad in the Circus Set

The debutantes started it and now everyone, from Elsie Stevens, 'the youngest bud, to matrons of Mrs Stuyvesant Fish's class, are wearing pedometers on their left legs, thus keeping careful record of the miles they dance day after day and night after night. Hearing of this new fad, several of the men of the colony, headed by Joseph Harriman, have offered a prize for the girl who shows the greatest number of miles at the end of the season, the prize to be a jeweled pedometer.

And now Newport has discovered another astonishing thing. In order to make big records the feminine dancers have what they call dancing partners. They dance only with this one man, and in some cases pay them a good salary for their labor. In their craze for the Fish walk, the "Trot" and the "Dip," the girls soon found that they must have most efficient partners, else dancing was no joy and their records small. There are always a number of masculine hangers-on in the Newport colony and from this coterie were selected several who danced divinely. These men make a fairly good living. And why not? they say. The new dances are really a form of athletics. It is hard work to kick and dip and throw one's partner in the air hour after hour, mile after mile, and they feel perfectly justified in taking money for their muscular labor.

"We take the place of athletic instructors," they say, "and as we really help the women to keep their figures our services are well worth what they cost."

In order to make decent records the dancers' steps must fit. Therefore, when a girl finds a man whose feet and knees and step fits here she engages him as her dancing partner for the season. The dance is the thing, and these young women of gentle birth would dance with a coal heaver if his feet happened to fit theirs.

"Dancing by the mile' originated early in the Newport season. It began as an amusing fad among a few of the younger girls whose dancing abilities place them in the near-professional class. They began by dancing by the hour. Each girl wore a wrist watch and counted the number of minutes she kicked, dipped or swirled But this method lacked finesse and did not give a fair endurance test. Some girls could dance longer than others and not cover nearly so much ground. Rose Dolan, the pretty debutante daughter of the Clarence Dolans, called a council of war at her home just before Mrs. Fish's fairy ball.

"With some of us doing the one-step and practically standing on one spot for minutes at a time, it seems to me our present plan is all wrong. Anybody can make a time record by just standing still and holding fast to her man, letting him do all the work."

"That's so" chipped in Mimi Scott, the three-million-dollar debutante "We must show that we really do the work ourselves. Just think of the miles we must dance every night! Oh, dear, how tired I am this morning."

"Tired," groaned Elsie Stevens "I am dead I know that I danced ten miles last night at the Wilsons' racket. There, I have it! Let's wear pedometers on our legs and then we can tell how many miles we cover each night. It will be lots fairer than counting the minutes, for then we will have to work and not depend on the men to swing us around."

And so it happened that nearly every young woman in the Circus Set "danced by the mile" at Mrs. Fish's wonderful ball, and now every woman who dances wears the curious little instrument on her leg.

These pedometers are worn attached to the garter. They look like a watch and are about the same size. They register every move of the legs Not to have one argues that a girl or matron is not in the dancing class. And to-day no woman is too old to "trot," "dip" or "hug."

At present the girls compare notes every morning, and the saturation which opens this story is heard all along Bellevue Avenue, from the Casino to Bailey's Beach. Among the debutantes Elsie Stevens is ahead with a score of one hundred and fifty-nine miles; Roberta Willard second, with one hundred and forty miles to her credit, and Mimi Scott third, with a score of one hundred and thirty-five miles. And still there's more to follow.

Of course, the girls could not keep their secret. It was speedily discovered, and the fad took like wildfire with the matrons, who also wanted to know how much ground they covered every time they "trotted" or "hugged." But the general public did not know anything about it until the night of the fairy ball, when many curious and unusual things opened the eyes of parents and chaperons, husband and brothers.

Mrs. Fish's ball has so far been the most brilliant event of the Summer. Every member of the Circus Set was there, dressed in some fantastic fashion.

In the doorway watching the mad scene were the hosts and the Russian Ambassador and his wife, Monsieur and Madame Bakhmeteff. They did not belong to the pedometer wearers.

"That is a very pretty Jumping Joan," remarked Madame Bakhmeteff, "but I wonder why she runs away at the end of each dance."

"I'm, mm," commented the staid and saturnine Stuyvesant Fish, "I also wonder I shall appoint myself a committee of one to investigate."

"While you are about it," broke in his charming [illegible] suggested as a Fairy Queen [illegible] also find out why [illegible] girls are hiding back of the [illegible] in the conservatory, and why that pretty little Miss Muffett prefers to hide in the morning room rather than join her chaperon at the end of each dance."

Departed Mr. Fish on his journey of investigation, returning a sadder but wiser host

"It's all right, I see are all having a perfectly precious time, they tell me, but they simply have to hide in order to read their pedometers. I don't know just what they mean, but evidently think they can't read them in the ballroom."

"Pedometers?" queried Mrs. Fish, why, that's something to be worn on the er—er leg I must go at once and investigate for myself."

And Mrs. Fish floated off, although both the Ambassador and Mr Fish were perfectly willing to investigate further for her

And thus it was that the pedometer fad was discovered. And every-Lody's doing it now

There is almost no chance for those who did not have their "counters" on at the Fish ball to catch up to those who did. They have made a wonderful stride ahead and the recent converts are despairing of getting within speaking distance of them. The average record made that night was twenty miles. There were some lucky ones who made a score of twenty-five miles, but they trotted and dipped even during intermissions Some of the debutantes—it is hardly fair to give them away by mentioning their names—have acquired the trick of making their pedometer work at all odd moments by shaking their legs. This is frowned upon by the older girls and not considered good form. There were, however, no idle moments for many of the counters on that record-breaking night.

"Let's do a one-step," said a clown to a Carmen. "Thanks, I will if you promise not to swing me over your head. My pedometer won't work when I'm swinging"

"Come, let's do the Fish walk," said Jack Spratt to a slender and pallid Snow White, "Thanks, yes, but you must not mind if I kick My pedometer scores more when I kick than when I walk. "Kick as much as you like and as high," replied Jack. "My wife, who eats no lean, cannot kick, and, anyway, she is not here to-night."

Poor little Snow White did not make as big a score as she hoped, for her lovely white tulle gown was literally torn off her back,, and she had to flee for repairs, thus losing several dances.

The pedometers were kept busy until 3 o'clock, when the band played "Home, Sweet Home," and Mrs. Fish looked expectantly at the door. But nobody wanted to leave. They kept on twirling and dipping until, to quote an Indignant dark-eyed Spanish dancer," "Mrs. Fish just threw us out before our pedometers counted anything."

But did they go home? They did not.

"We want breakfast; we are hungry," complained one of the many Mistress Marys. "Hungry!" exclaimed a stalwart Indian chief; "I could eat nails, I am starved, to say nothing of my thirst."

Then up spake a kindly apple vender, ordinarily known as Mrs. Richard Wilson. "Let's all go over to my house and dance some more and have some eats, too."

"I have a better plan," spoke up Reggie Lanier, disguised as a gentleman. "Our house is closed, the rugs are up and the furniture piled in the corner. Let's go over there and we can rough-house all we want."

Witness therefore fifty or more pedometer wearers finishing their night under the Lanier roof, just because they wanted to add to their "leg scores" as Freddie Prince said.

"But I forgot that there's nothing in the house to eat," said Reggie, as they swarmed into the deserted house

"Easily remedied," said Mrs. Wilson. "I'll go over to my house and see what I can find." Goes. Returns in a motor car laden with drinkables and eatables, the car resembling a cross between an animated barroom and delicatessen shop.

At 5 o'clock the sun peeped into the rooms and looked surprised. It is even rumored that he blushed, for at that moment ten of the prettiest of the dancers were comparing notes or one might almost say, legs.

"Bang! Bang!" went someone on the front door. "Who is in this house? This is an empty house."

"It's not so awfully empty," murmured one of Bluebeard's wives.

"No, it's not exactly empty," said young Lanier, opening the door to one of Newport's "finest."

"Oh, so I see," grinned the "finest." "Sorry I mentioned it. Good morning"

At 6.30 the pedometers resumed work. Some went to bed, others to Hazard's Beach for a swim.

And another thing Why do the feminine members of the Circus Set revel in the wearing of fancy costumes? Because such costumes have short skirts and give greater freedom to the legs in dancing, thus adding to the score run up on the pedometer

My Secrets of Beauty

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty

No. 233.—Secrets of Your Complexion.

THE palmist reads your hand the doctor counts your pulse and sounds your lungs, but the average man glances at your face and instantly forms his first impression as to whether you are a desirable woman or not. Later on other things may cause him to revise his opinion, but first impressions usually stand, and they are usually right.

A man thinks he is attracted to you because you are pretty, but it is much deeper than that. Prettiness or beauty usually means a foundation of good lungs, heart, kidneys and liver, a well-balanced nervous system—in short, a healthy, normal woman who would make a good mate and mother.

A bad complexion usually indicates that the liver or kidneys are not doing their share of the work. The birth of [illegible] upon the skin, makes it sallow or ruins its texture. All these are warning signals to man, who is repelled without knowing or caring why.

Absence of wrinkles, fineness of features, velvety skin, all play a part in our estimate of facial beauty. And, really, a woman has so many different ways of being pretty even if it be only by the general expression, that we are almost tempted to say that there is no ugly woman.

Moreover, even though we may not alter a crooked nose, or change a distorted feature, there are many ways of modifying and helping the effect [illegible]

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

It is really the triumph of art, and where the face is concerned we can never know too much about helping ourselves to overcome defects.

Use of Creams and Powders.—It is not enough to buy a fashionable cream or powder, no matter how broadly advertised, as bringing back lost youthfulness. Before you select a cream or powder to be put on your face, see that it is adapted to your skin. Besides it is necessary to know how to apply creams and powders with discretion and skill.

For instance, if your skin is dry select an oily cream, containing only such softening ingredients as the following:

Olive oil	250 grammes
Rose water	250 grammes
White wax	15 grammes
Cocoa butter	15 grammes
Oil of roses	10 drops

Melt on a slow fire the wax and cocoa butter, mix in the rose water, stirring constantly. Last put in the olive oil and oil of roses.

On the contrary, persons with fatty skins should use an astringent cream, such as this one:

Oil of sweet almonds	30 grammes
Rose water	100 grammes
White wax	20 grammes
Tincture of benzoin	20 grammes
Powdered alum	5 grammes
Oil of bergamot	1 gramme

After cleansing the face with warm water, spread the cream with a bit of damp cotton, and rub in gently, rubbing from the end of the nose toward the hair, upon the temples and around the eyes, not too hard. On the cheeks the motion should be from the mouth toward the ears, and lastly rub in on the chin.

Dry with a bit of cotton and powder with a puff, not with a cloth, or use a rabbit's foot.

Cucumber pomade is very agreeable to use; it is easy to make according to this formula:

Pure asunge	100 grammes
Fat from veal kidneys	25 grammes
Cucumber juice	150 grammes
Powdered starch	8 grammes

Melt the asunge and veal suet, then add 75 grammes of the cucumber juice and mix well. Let this stand for a day; then add the rest of the cucumber juice. Melt again over a slow fire and add the powdered starch. Put into jars.

Washing the Face.—Before you wash your face see to it that the hands are perfectly clean. Be careful not to wet the hair. As the skin of the face is very tender, use only filtered or boiled water, but use the water cold and be sure that it is not "hard." Rain or river water is best. If you have none, add a pinch of borax. In the mornings, Winter or Summer, wash your face in cold water. Use a bit of cotton wadding as a sponge and throw away after using once. In this way you will avoid the contamination of the vessel. It is a good idea to add to the boiled water a few drops of tincture of benzoin or a little eau de cologne or toilet water vinegar.

Washing with warm water has an excellent effect in the evening before retiring, as the skin is thoroughly cleansed, but this tends to stretch the skin.

Warm water is recommended especially to her persons with dry skins, as well as to the timid who have a tendency to wash easily. Very warm water is pernicious in cases of redness of the skin and pimples. When washing, do not rub the skin, but pass the water over it lightly. Then wipe off the moisture with a fine cloth or cotton batting. One thing to be absolutely avoided in the toilet of the face is soap, which makes the skin shiny, and in which are many injurious elements.

Rose water	60 grammes
Cocoa butter	100 grammes
Plain wax	50 grammes
White spermaceti	50 grammes
Olive oil	200 grammes
Tincture of benzoin	10 grammes
Tincture of myrrh	5 grammes

Melt the wax, the white spermaceti and the cocoa butter in the olive oil. Then place all in a marble mortar to allow it to congeal, after adding the rose water, tincture of benzoin and tincture of myrrh, stirring all in thoroughly. Put into jars.

Here is the formula of the famous Tully Vinegar, which was invented at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Water	7 quarts
85% alcohol	4 quarts
Oil of bergamot	30 grammes
Oil of lemon	30 grammes
Oil of bitter orange	12 grammes
Oil of rosemary	25 grammes
Oil of neroli	4 grammes
Balm-mint alcohol	500 grammes

Shake all well together in a large demijohn, and allow to stand for twenty-four hours; then add

Balsam tolu	60 grammes
Tincture of benzoin	60 grammes
Tincture of cloves	60 grammes
Tincture of orris root	60 grammes

Shake up well once more and add two quarts of good vinegar. Allow to stand twenty-four hours, then filter. A few drops of this vinegar will make the water used for the toilet milky and perfume it. After you have finished washing in the time to use special lotions and the creams and powders by which the toilet of the face is completed.

VACATIONS FOR ANIMALS.

"Never let your white mice run loose at the seashore," says Mrs. Ehrlich.

Mrs. Jacob Ehrlich, Who Believes in Vacations for Animals.

Very New Humane Movement Which Aims to Give Every Dog His Day and to Relieve Psychologically the Tedium of the Lives of Cats, Horses and Birds

WOMEN of wealth and prominence connected with the Humane Society of Philadelphia are earnestly and persistently advocating the enactment of a law requiring the owners of animals to send or take them away on a vacation each year. As earnestly and persistently Mrs. Jacob Ehrlich president of the Horse Aid Society of New York and founder of the Drivers' Club of New York, composed of 500 teamsters, whose purpose it is to help the horse through teaching the driver humane treatment of the animal, advocates an animal vacation. The society is doing excellent work in this direction, at its new clubhouse, 37 Seventh avenue, New York.

Mrs. Ehrlich believes your horse your dog, your cat, your pet monkey, your parrot, even your pet pig and white mice, need a vacation as greatly as you yourselves require the annual letting down, the yearly relaxation from toil, or change from surroundings. Take them to the country for a month, if you can; for two weeks at any rate.

Keep them away from the seashore. They require the grass and trees and fields.

Give the horse a field of lush grass for his stomach and soaking pots for his burning, tired feet. Take his shoes off.

Be sure to take the cat's own cushion along.

Put the birds where they can see the trees and carpet their cages every day with fresh grass.

Provide them with companions of their own kind. Animals need society as greatly as we do.

The dog that has lived in a flat all Winter and has guarded your house from burglars and against fire is "all tired out." He is on the verge of nervous prostration from close attention to duty, and should go where he can be quite free from care.

Tell the monkey's boarding mistress to only half fill his cup with milk or water. There's a scientific reason.

These and other facts are contained in Mrs. Ehrlich's vacation appeal for pets.

"I am working to the same end and concentrating chiefly on the horse," said Mrs. Ehrlich, "although I send all my pets to the country. I found my parrots greatly improved in their vacation when I paid them a visit at a farm on Long Island yesterday.

"I am demanding that a horse shall have at least every seventh day of rest at his home in town and that he should have at least two weeks in the country during the summer. Owners of horses can get more than the equivalent of the expenses in the increased value and efficiency of the animal. Some horses work sixteen hours a day in a peddler's cart and then take the family for an outing on Sunday. He is forced to break his gait, which is to stay in his stable on Sunday. When he awakes, a bucket of fresh water should be ready for him and he should have his breakfast of four or six quarts of oats. He should have a second meal about three o'clock in the afternoon.

"There should be a law preventing taking out a working horse on Sunday. Suppose that any middle-aged man or woman were told to run two miles. If he or she were not accustomed to running, the effort might kill either. The horse's Sabbath should be one of rest. He has enough exercise during the week and should be allowed to devour it. If you have ever seen a cat rolling in a catnip bed you will know the ecstasy it brings him."

"Every bird needs to see the trees and stretch himself."

"Give the monkey freedom and only half a cup of milk."

"Dogs get as tired of their owners as wives of their husbands."

Mrs. Ehrlich has the eyes and air of a zealot. A millionaire's wife, she spends all the money that most women would pour into society channels for alleviating the condition of animals. A tiny woman of eighty-seven pounds, she looks like a smaller edition of Maude Adams. She drives a touring car of her own, that usually has one or more animal passengers, for if she sees a stray dog or cat she picks it up and endeavors to find a home for it. To applicants she always says: "Do you live in a flat?" If they reply, "We do," she replies, "Then I am sorry, for I cannot let you have this little beast. No animal should live in the confining quarters of a flat." Last year she picked up three hundred such strays, and to those for whom she could not find homes she administered chloroform. Like certain other notables, she was "born to old Kentucky," and the habit of love for, and companionship with, animals persists.

"Prescribe a horse's vacation, please," said an interviewer from this newspaper.

"It should be for a month if possible," she said, "though I am only agitating one for two weeks, for, given that, a longer vacation will follow. The horse should be taken to a farm and placed in a field where there is a marshy corner, or, if not, soaking tubs should be sunk for him. You won't need to lead him to the marsh or the soaking tub. He will stand in it of his own accord. His instinct, and tired, feverish legs will lead him there. Before placing him in his pasture his shoes should be taken off. The relief is as welcome as when you remove your hot street shoes. When you do this, what is your first instinct? To plunge them into water. The horse has the same instinct.

"If he has fallen hoofs, the wisdom of his own instinct will lead him straight to the mud. If his legs are swollen and feverest, he will seek the tub of water. Better if it have ice in it. There should be a shade tree in one corner of the field, for the horse needs to avoid the direct rays of the sun as surely as we do. He suffers as much from headache as do we. The water in the soaking tubs should be changed at least once a day. So should the mud.

"The soaking tubs may be made of a vinegar barrel cut in half. Sink them into the earth so that the upper part will be on a level with the grass. The horse turned out to grass will show improvement in a few days. An old horse with fallen feet, the hoofs loosened from the legs, became a different-looking animal and was worth twice as much to his master.

"Animals have the same psychological need of rest as their owners. The dog that lives cooped in a flat with no continuously grows as tired of us and is as greatly in need of a vacation as are husbands and wives. Husbands and wives get on each other's nerves. So do we upon the nerves of our dogs. The dog's duties have taxed him. He has given alarm in case of fire. He has slept with one eye open for burglars. His nerves have been taut. He needs a complete change. He ought to be sent away from the family and boarded in the country. He should be sent where he can have dog companionship and where a family will be kind to him. He should be allowed to play at will in a large yard or field, and if he can go hunting, all the better. He should have twice as much to eat as usual, for he is rebuilding his body and renewing his strength.

"Monkeys are nervous animals and need a change from their human associates, so it is well to send them away in the Summer. Instruct their boarding house keepers to give them double rations and let them play among trees and grass. Tell their feeders to never give them a cup more than half full of water or milk, invariably a monkey will spill half the contents of the cup. Why do you suppose they do that?"

"Perhaps they've seen their masters spill beer over their shirt fronts, and monkeys strive to be neater than their masters."

"I think it is a throwing back to the time when their ancestors used to brush the scum from the pools in the ancestral jungles."

"What's the vacation for white mice, or guinea pigs, or rabbits, or snakes?"

"Light. I love animals, but don't understand that any persons but of decadent taste could bear the society of a snake. Normal pets should have normal treatment, the grass, the trees, the fresh, sweet country air, and double the amount of food."

A Somewhat Fanciful Idea of How an Old Racehorse Would Spend His Vacation.

Sunday, especially for a pleasure jaunt, when he would have to break his gait. If the day is hot, the family want a breeze. The way to get a breeze is to force the horse to trot. And if he isn't used to trotting, this is arrant cruelty. I would have every one sent to jail who makes an animal break his gait.

"When Summer comes, the horse should be sent to a farm. Not to the seashore. The horse that is forced to wade in the surf loses more by his shivering fear of the waves than he gains by having his feet washed. I see no healing in the seashore for animals. The sea air is overstimulating to them. Dogs seem to lose their senses at the shore. They go crazy, as it seems, and because they jump wildly about their owners seem to think they are getting the air's worth. We should learned remember the physician's injunction: 'Twenty minutes a day for four weeks are enough for consecutive sea bathing.' The limit of endurance for human beings is a fair gauge for animals.

"Horses, dogs, cats, monkeys, birds, even white mice, need the grass and trees and the healing of the earth. When I turn my dogs loose on the ground in a yard in the country they actually eat the earth. I have seen a spaniel devour two teaspoonfuls of earth. Cats need grass. They

How the CHILD LEARNS TO THINK

By David Forsyth, M. D., D. Sc.

Steps by Which BABY'S SENSES Develop and Make Him a RATIONAL BEING

NOTHING is more fascinating than to watch the development of a child's mental powers, and it is of the utmost importance for parents and nurses to understand the exact stages through which the child passes in becoming a rational, thinking being. Science has been making an exhaustive study of this subject lately and is now able to mark with accuracy all the various stages in the brain development of the normal infant.

At first the infant spends the greater number of his hours in sleep. He is so quickly tired by the new stimulation of the sense-organs that he at once falls again into the sleep in which he was wrapped before birth.

Light and noise begin to be appreciated before the end of the first week, but seeing and hearing are of little importance immediately after birth, and in their stead the senses of taste and smell are relatively acute. In the lips and tongue the sense of touch and the ability to [illegible] heat and cold are particularly well developed.

The new-born baby has no experience, intelligence or emotion, no appreciation of self and no muscular sense. He is incapable of expression by movements, looks or sounds.

Crying is among his earliest acts, but this is reflex and does not yet attain the level of an expressive utterance. Children born without brains will cry as readily as normal children and on the same provocation.

With regard to muscular action, the only movements that are made belong to one of two groups. They are either automatic—random and purposeless motions of the limbs—or reflex, as in sneezing, coughing or sucking. A reflex act which deserves special notice is that of clasping the fingers around any object such as a pencil that is allowed to stimulate the skin of the palm of the hand. The grasp is often sufficiently powerful to support the entire weight of the baby's body.

With these primitive endowments the infant begins at once to enlarge his powers, but for the first month he leads a purely automatic life. The instinctive movements of stretching after waking appear in the first week or two. Though he can grasp and does, the power of opposing the thumb—an action which gives man his supremacy over animals—does not appear for three or four months. The eyelids can be opened or shut, but the eyes move irregularly without associated action. They often turn in contrary directions, seeming to squint.

During this period an infant's food is his absorbing interest. His mouth is his world. Taste is so keenly developed that foods with unnatural flavors are rejected, and the appreciation of temperature is acute in lips and tongue. The baby looks at moderate light steadily and avoids glaring light. Soft noises are appreciated, especially the lulling sound of mother's voice.

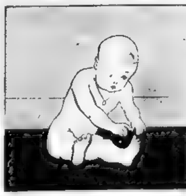
All infants dislike cold and protest against wet, chilling clothing. They are gratified by the warm bath. The first sign of expression is the gentle smile, indicating a general sense of well being. Speech really appears in the first month, for in crying the child utters some vowel sounds, if only by chance. Memory and recognition, however, have not yet appeared.

In the second, third and fourth months his progress, especially in the higher forms of mental activity, is rapid. His muscular movements are made less at random. He rubs one foot against the other and moves his eyes together, showing control of the eye muscles. The child blinks if an object threatens. A little later he develops control of the neck muscles and begins to balance the heavy head. This usually comes toward the end of the third month.

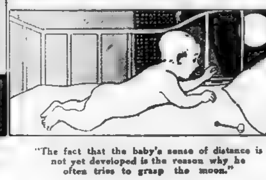
Sensory impressions now begin to awaken more interest. Glistening objects are especially attractive, and even elementary differences in color appear to be noticed. The baby begins to connect sight and touch. A desire to grasp with the hand the bright object held before the eyes arises, but there is as yet no sense of distance and the infant may try to grasp the moon or a light that is ten feet away. These efforts result from the undeveloped muscular sense which grows only with experience.

Loud noises cause the child to start, and harmonious noises please, such as the ticking of a watch or the notes of a piano. He soon learns to try to locate sounds and although at first often mistaken he gradually becomes able to turn his head in the direction whence the sound issues.

Emotional states are now developed. The baby is displeased if the spoon is taken away or the toy is out of reach. Laughing in response to tickling has been noticed in the sixth week, but real laughing does not come until much later. About the second or third month the first consonant is uttered in such sounds as "ma," "pa."



"The baby feels his own hands and feet, and learns in this way to distinguish himself from the outside world."



"The fact that the baby's sense of distance is not yet developed is the reason why he often tries to grasp the moon."

The measure of the child's development is its growing interest in its surroundings, and this is gauged by watching the movements of the head, eyes, arms in connection with what it sees and hears. It has begun to recognize surroundings and even faces. It may be afraid of strangers.

In the next three months of life there is rather a broadening of the powers already attained than the rise of any new powers. It is not until the sixth month that the infant seems to have an appreciation of self. He is more certain in every muscular movement, he has developed his muscular sense, and has localized sensations in himself as well as become able to estimate distances outside. He tries to sit up. He strikes a table repeatedly with a spoon or bunch of keys. He expresses feelings of joy or dislike with many variations. He even begins to talk to himself in a kind of babble.

The sense of touch is of greatest importance in laying the foundation for the consciousness of self. He feels his own hand or feet, and learns in this way to distinguish himself from the outside world.

During the eighth, ninth and tenth months the process of maturing goes on apace. The baby is now learning to imitate. He will clap his hands or nod the head "yes" or "no," if taught. During this period he begins to stand and tries to walk.

During the next four months the child is improving rapidly in powers of imitation and locomotion. He goes on all fours if he cannot walk. He is beginning to learn that words have meanings and to associate sounds with things and persons. The chief actors now at work in building up the knowledge of self are: (1) The sense of pain, which always marks off self from the outer world; (2) the perception that changes can be effected by the child's own activity (cause and effect), and (3) the comparison of himself with those around him.

FLAGS at "HALF-STAFF"

NEARLY every one speaks of a flag, when being flown at a distance from the top of the pole, as at "half mast." This is not the correct expression. Such flags are at "half staff" because they are flown in this manner whether on land or sea from the flag staff.

To see a flag at half staff means death. It may mean, on an incoming ship, that one of the passengers or crew died at sea. Many a little fishing vessel comes into Gloucester and T wharf in Boston every season with a flag at half staff, and this means one of the fishermen, or more, has met death, generally by being swept overboard.

This custom of flying flags at half staff originated first as a token of defeat. That is, when an army was defeated, its flag was lowered down the staff to give room for the victorious army to place its flag above that of the defeated army.

From this the custom grew into flying the flag at half staff when an officer, army or navy, died. Later it was adopted by civilians as well, and to-day, when a man of prominence dies, regardless of whether he was sailor, soldier or civilian, the flags are hung at half staff. Whereas, in the olden days, when the custom started, the upper space was left to indicate that the victor could put his flag there, now it seems that Death is the victor, and so the space is left. It is, of course, a mark of respect to the dead person to have flags at half staff for him.

Why All Our Money Is NOT LEGAL TENDER

IT would probably surprise most people to know that all of our American money, meaning United States, is not legal tender. As a matter of fact it is a bigger surprise yet, and that is in the knowledge of how little of this money is actually legal tender.

"Legal tender" means money that can be given in payment of debt or obligation of any sort to the creditor "in full of all demands."

Of course we have a special enactment in our country which stipulates that no foreign coin of any kind or denomination is legal tender in the United States. But aside from all this, there is a lot of our own coin, and the word here includes paper money, that is not legal tender, although of course practically every one will accept it without question. The point is, however, there are various sorts of our money which are perfectly good but which, if it came to law, we need not accept as legal tender.

In the first place there are ten kinds of money in circulation in our country, never counting foreign money. All of it may look alike, yet all of these ten varieties are not exactly legal tender. These ten varieties include:

Gold coins, standard silver dollars, subsidiary silver, gold certificates, silver certificates, Treasury notes, United States notes (greenbacks), national bank notes, nickel coins and bronze coins.

Some of the most impressive of the paper currency included in the above list is not legal tender at all. As for the minor coins, they are legal tender in such small amounts as would surprise ninety-nine out of every hundred people.

Gold certificates, silver certificates and national bank notes, of which such large quantities circulate everywhere in this country, are not legal tender. Silver dollars are legal tender and may be paid as such to any amount. But silver half and quarter dollars are legal only to the amount of ten dollars, while nickel and copper or bronze coins are legal tender only to the amount of twenty-five cents.

Treasury notes of the act of 1890 are legal tender to their face value in payment of all debts, public and private, unless in some contract stipulation is made to the contrary. To be exact, the United States notes or greenbacks, as they are equally well known, are legal tender, with the exception of duties on imports and interest on the public debt. Practically, however, since the resumption of specie payment in 1879, greenbacks have been received freely and without question by the Government.

While the gold and silver certificates are not legal tender as between individuals, both issues are receivable for all Government dues of whatever sort. In this respect they are legally more acceptable than the greenbacks. National bank notes, while not legal tender and not receivable for duties on imports, may be paid by the Government for salaries and in discharge of all debts of the Government, except interest, dues and redemption of national currency.

"MARRIAGE MARKET" GOWNS

By Lady Duff-Gordon

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

MATING is the strongest instinct of feminine nature. No matter what enticing arguments the Feminists advance to strengthen their case, every woman brave enough to hold a mirror up to her soul knows that this instinct is the mainspring of her life. It guides her from her youth up. It lies dormant during childhood, but as girlhood advances it begins to "sit up and take notice," as you would say in America.

The most natural thing in the world, therefore, is the preening of feathers which the girl begins early in her teens. Whatever her social position may be, she wants to look pretty just for one reason in the world—to win a man's love or to keep it after it is won.

Until a woman is married life is to her not only a battleground where she fights for her man, but a market place in which she displays her wares. The debutante, too young to grasp entirely the meaning of the "wonderful "coming-out" wardrobe provided by her mother, nevertheless does her part nobly in making the most of her small talents. She knows that she has a part to play.

The older woman is more fully alive to the end she is striving for, and there is more art in her market display. The woman who has already disposed of her wares is naturally keen about keeping the buyer in subjection, and employs her art in never letting him realize how very little, after all, he is getting for his money or in return for his love.

Few women will admit that they live but to get married, and few men will admit that they are influenced by the clothes a woman wears. There may be men who do not know or care what a woman wears, but I doubt it. They may not be able to tell whether her gown is made of satin or cloth, but they know if it is becoming, if it is smart and if it looks expensive. ing, if it is smart and if it looks expensive.

My friend James Barrie is of the opinion that what every woman knows is that Eve was made out of Adam's funny-bone. But I do not agree with him. What every woman knows is that she has to keep one step ahead of the woman next door or around the corner in order to make herself noticed in the marriage market. It is this feeling pure and simple that has created in woman the desire for display. She knows that a man likes to feel that every other man envies him the handsomely dressed woman he is seen with in public. At a dance a man enjoys the feeling that he is dancing with the best-dressed woman in the room.

These thoughts were rather forcibly brought to mind one day last week when I attended a garden party, which was nothing more nor less than a matrimonial grab bag under the auspices of a charming matron who has three daughters to marry off. And she was surrounded by matrons who also had their daughters to settle in life. Each girl in question was dressed with the utmost care. And invariably it was the girl with the most striking costume who won the first attention from the male beings who thronged the "market."

From this party I went to an opening, where I met a very much fatigued mother. "Help me choose some gowns for my daughter," she said on meeting me. "Nothing too girlish, for she has really passed the 'jeune fille' age."

I am sending you this week the "Marriage Market" gowns I selected for this mother. They are, as you can see, somewhat extreme in style, but what would you? This daughter must keep ahead of the daughter of some other mother. The two afternoon costumes, while extreme, are not outre nor grotesque. The chrysanthemum costume is striking in color and very graceful in line. The gown is white charmeuse; the draped coat is a flame-colored charmeuse just the color of the chrysanthemum she wears; the sash is a flame velvet. Her bag and her hat supply the needed touch of black. This costume worn by the slender brunette girl for whom it was bought will make an impression in the market, even though the times be dull.

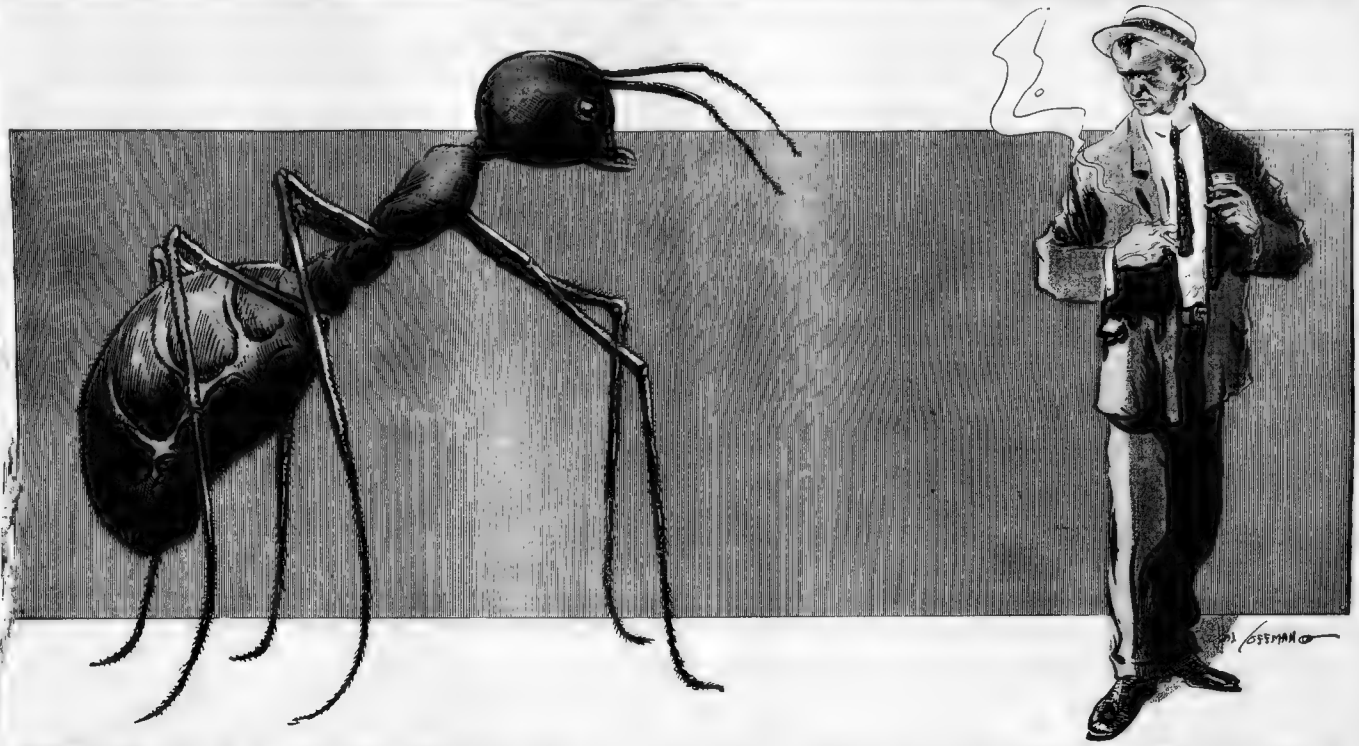
The other afternoon costume is a daring combination of blue and white. The large rose worn as a corsage is a glowing crimson.

In what surroundings is woman at her best? In the ballroom, at the dinner table or over the teacups? Who dare say? I had the tea hour in mind when I chose the delectable little rose and gold costume with its flesh-colored bodice and sleeves and its long, graceful lines.

There is dignity about the dinner costume of black chiffon over white that is most harmonious. A dinner gown should be dignified in fabric if not in design. This is so in both.

I nearly every costume I chose rose was used in some way, because rose is the color of allurement.

Most Wonderful Citizen in a Great City--The Ant



Suppose the Tiny Ant Were as Big as Man. Well Might Darwin Say of the Ant's Brain, "It Is One of the Most Marvellous Atoms of Matter in the World, Perhaps More So Than the Brain of Man." What One Day in Utica Developed. The Thinking Ants.

WHEN you wait at Utica to catch the Twentieth Century as she goes through, never fail to look carefully at the city. When you have finished looking, ask yourself, "What is most interesting in Utica?" and send us your answer.

In Utica so much is interesting. The policeman on Genesee street, with the red mustache and the gentle manner, is an interesting policeman, full of news.

He says, "It's a fine town, a little quiet. Not much of a place for men to make a living, however. The knitting mills here are the big industry. They employ mostly women, so it isn't what you would call a man's town."

That statement of itself is interesting, foreshadowing the days when the human being city will be like the city of the bees described by Maeterlinck—all the gentlemen condemned to be drones, all stung to death and thrown out of the hive, after one of them has been selected to act VERY TEMPORARILY as the husband of the queen bee.

It is quite pitiful, even for those that sympathize with suffrage, to think of a beehive where all the gentlemen are stung to death by the lady bees, excepting one single man, who subsequently dies high up in the air. Utica, of course, is not like that; it simply suggests it.

The same policeman, pointing to a corner red building across Genesee street, says: "That there is the tony man's club of the place," and, pointing to a yellow building exactly opposite, "This here is the woman's club. Queer, ain't it? They are just across the street from each other."

Very queer and interesting. It will be still queerer in days to come, when Utica and all creation shall know universal suffrage, when the lion and the lamb, politically speaking, shall lie down together, and a lady Mayor shall lead them.

In those days to come may the red brick man's club and the yellow brick woman's club of Utica be united, or at least connected by a tunnel under Genesee street.

The most wonderful automobile in the world lives in Utica. It belongs to, and is labelled, "Ball's Shoe Repairing."

It seems to have been built for Cleopatra. It is of pure white enamel, and rushes up and down Utica, always with the cut-out in full action. That palatial white enamel automobile for shoe repairing tells you that you are in the presence of a provident working population.

Then there is the "Clothes Hospital," managed by Lefkowitz & Son, by whom torn clothes are mended, soiled clothes cleaned and sick clothing made new.

Hence the term "Clothes Hospital." It has no nomenclatorial rival, except, perhaps, the Milwaukee "Pantorium," so called because that institution mends, presses and cleans "pants."

England & McCaffray's big drug store surprises you. For after you have used the public telephone and asked "How much?" they tell you that their charge is "Nothing." They don't do that in New York, Boston, Chicago or other less enlightened places. On the contrary, they charge you ten cents when they ought to charge you five.

Considering England & McCaffray's telephone politeness, it seems captious to point out that they keep their little parcels of chloroform right beside the public telephone, where anybody could get them without asking questions or paying anything. It is dangerous, even in such a moral, good, pure city as Utica, to have neat little packages of chloroform distributed around the public telephone. Too tempting to bad men from without Utica.

We advise all druggists to keep packages of chloroform and all poison packages away from the immediate vicinity of the public telephone.

Business will soon invade the resident section of Genesee street. Wise men of Utica will buy cheap property out there now, and make money later. The man who changed the big, dismal brick dwelling that was empty and put a store in the far end is now putting a store in the near end. He is wise.

You might say that the very greatest thing in Utica is the Public Library. But it isn't.

It is a beautiful library, with a big room for children, with little tables, comfortable chairs and the most intelligent assistants to tell the children what is interesting, what is good and where to find it.

And it has an admirable arrangement that makes it easy for teachers of public schools to come with the children of their classes, direct them and help them in their reading.

Every city in the United States could learn something from the Public Library of Utica—built by the citizens, with their money, not by Andrew Carnegie.

It is a library sufficiently intelligent to supply special shelves with Italian books for Italians, French books for Frenchmen and German books for Germans.

It was interesting on the Italian shelf to see a little volume of "Health Hints," by Pope Leo, with Dante's Divine Comedy on one side of it and Fogazzaro on the other. The intelligent lady kindly asks you if she can help you in selecting your choice of reading, and is well able to do it.

She tells you that Italians ask for the best books, and read them.

It is a fine library. Would that every boy and girl, every woman working in the big mills, knew what the library contains, AND HAD TIME TO PROFIT BY IT.

Unfortunately, in Utica, as elsewhere, the library full of knowledge is like the great ocean, full of water.

The trouble is to get the water from the ocean onto the BARREN SOIL, and to get the knowledge from the library into the barren mind.

The lady who wants to help you select your reading comes from Massachusetts—Plymouth.

She tells you to go to Martin's Restaurant for your dinner, and adds: "I would suggest the Hotel Utica, but it would cost you twice as much, and I expect you wouldn't care for that."

She judges you, as she would NOT judge a book, by your poor cloth binding.

The Hotel Utica is interesting. It has its elevators arranged in such a way that when they stop on the ground floor an electric light turns on automatically, right at your feet, and keeps you from stubbing your toe when you get out.

The New York Central is building a new railroad station to cost $750,000. And that is interesting to Utica, which has waited forty years for that station. Utica's population has doubled in all many hundreds of thousands of mile across a long bridge and down a narrow railway into a dirty shed called a station. The fact that the New York Central of its own accord is building a new station in a town where it has no competition is interesting, but not the MOST interesting thing in Utica.

The MOST interesting thing in Utica is the collection of ants that do NOT walk on the fly paper which has been put around the elm trees of the gentleman who lives in the red brick house on the corner of Cottage place and Genesee street.

Genesee street is a great avenue of beautiful elms. The wise man who lives in the red house on the corner means to save his elms from the caterpillars. And around each tree he has put a nice, fresh, glistening, sweetened, sticky piece of fly paper.

The idea is to have the innocent caterpillar as he crawls up the tree walk on the fly paper and stay there, to die a sad, sweet, sticky death.

There were no caterpillars on the fly paper when this writer looked. They were to come later. But there were many flies and small moths and other wild things on the fly paper.

And the interesting thing in Utica, THE GREAT MORAL LESSON IN UTICA—greater, perhaps, than any lesson ever preached in the editorial columns of the Observer or the Dispatch—was the conduct of the black ants, dashing up and down the tree trunks encircled by fly paper.

Other insects got on the fly paper, BUT THE ANTS DID NOT.

They ran up and down the elm tree, above the fly paper, and below the fly paper.

BUT NOT A SINGLE ANT WAS TO BE SEEN ON THE FLY PAPER.

Your faithful correspondent watched those ants for thirty minutes, and several small Utica children helped him to watch.

The ant would dash madly down the tree, bound for home, eager to see his family. The moment he came to the fly paper he would stop. He would not even put one foot on the sticky sweetness.

His little antennae, little telephone lines sticking out beyond his head, told him instantly that there was danger there.

His mad downward flight was checked. And so it was with the ants running up the tree—although why the ant should run up, or why he should run down, no one could guess.

No matter which way he was running, the wise ant would stop suddenly when he came to the fly paper and brace himself.

He would run backward, forward and sidewise. He would keep on investigating until he had found a little hole in the bark UNDERNEATH the fly paper. He would dart underneath the paper in safety and continue his business instead of perishing as did the flies and the moths and the silly insects on the sticky sweetness.

Oh, young men, and young women, and all you citizens of Utica and other cities, observe the wisdom of those ants!

They were tempted by that fly paper undoubtedly. THEY LIKE SWEET THINGS.

And the little moths fastened to the fly paper are just the kind of food that ants like to take home to their loving families.

Each ant could have been a hero by reaching out, getting one of those flies or moth millers and carrying it home all covered with sticky sweetness.

But one step on the fly paper might mean destruction. And the ant had brains enough to know it, although nobody knows HOW they know it.

Probably they have been actually thinking and using the brains in those little round heads, while the moth millers and flies have been wasting their time. Take this to heart, young men.

After watching ONE individual piece of fly paper, and one large collection of ants for a sufficient length of time, each piece of fly paper on each tree was inspected. And the man, or, perhaps, widow lady, who lives in the red house on that corner will confirm this testimony that there isn't a single ant on any piece of fly paper.

Young men, take a lesson from the ants of Utica. Learn to go by the open saloon door, refusing to go in, as the ants refused to tread upon the fly paper.

And learn to shun the gambling room and the card game, which waste time and breed crime.

And, young women, take a lesson also from your relative, the ant.

Learn to do without that which will hurt you, no matter how tempting it may be.

The fine dress that you can't afford may be as dangerous to a tempted woman as fly paper to a fly.

And you business men, who laboriously spend your life piling up money and then squander it like idiots in Wall Street speculation, why can't YOU learn to recognize the fly paper that is fatal to you, as the ants learn to tell what is dangerous to them?

A lesson to everybody, big and little, old and young, rich and poor, is contained in the wisdom of the ants.

And that is why they are the most interesting thing in all Utica, which is, perhaps, the most interesting city in the United States—excepting two or three.

What Will She Do to "The Money Master"?

Remarkable Studies of a Conflict Between a Dreamer and a Beautiful Woman Presented in "The Money Master," Sir Gilbert Parker's Greatest Novel, Now Beginning in HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

SIR GILBERT PARKER, who, it is well known, put Canada on the fiction map, has written what he considers his greatest story. It it called "The Money Master," and the first instalment appears in the August number of Hearst's Magazine. The work is made additionally attractive by the charming, brilliant and poetic illustrations by Andre Castaigne that accompany it.

In this story Sir Gilbert draws a picture of a simple-minded, idealistic French-Canadian, the richest man in his parish, with a talent for money-making. He is "The Money Master." After a pleasure tour in France he meets on the ship coming home to Canada a handsome, sensuous Spanish girl, fleeing with her father from a conspiracy in which her lover lost his life. She determines to marry him, not because she loves him, but because she needs a comfortable home. She beguiles him artfully. Off the Canadian coast the ship is wrecked. She saves his life and he marries her at once.

What will they make of their lives? She, the sensuous Spaniard, living amid very unconventional surroundings, is bound to a man whom she married for his money alone, a simple-minded man, yet a money maker and shrewd enough to find out in time that he has been deceived by a woman. Here is the interesting problem that is to be worked out in these pages. The following excerpts from the story show how it begins:

CARMEN had made up her mind from the first to marry Jean Jacques, and she deported herself accordingly—with modesty, circumspection and skill. It would be the easiest way out of all their difficulties. Since her heart, such as it was, fluttered, a mournful ghost, over the Place d'Armes where her Gonzales was shot, and only a cenotaph remained, it might better be filled by Jean Jacques than any one else, for he was a man of parts, of money, and of looks, and she loved these all; and to her credit she loved his looks better than all the rest. She had no real cupidity, and she was not greatly enamored of brains; for she had some real philosophy of life got in a hard school, which was infinitely better founded than the smattering of conventional philosophy and Jean Jacques from his compendium picked up once the quay at Quebec.

Yet Jean Jacques' cruiser of life was not wholly unarmed. From his Norman forbears he had, beneath all, a shrewdness and an elementary alertness not wholly submerged by his vain, kind nature. He was quite a good business man, and had proved himself so before his father died—very quick to see a chance, and even quicker to see where the distant sharp corners in the road were, though not as quick to see the pitfalls, for his head was ever in the air, and not upon the ground. And here on the Antoine with his head in the air there crossed his mind often the vision of Carmen Dolores and himself in the parish of St. Saviour's, with the daily life of the Beau Cheval revolving about him, while flashes of danger warned him now and then just at the beginning of the journey, as it were, just before he had found it necessary to become her champion against the captain and his fulminous face, and he began to be counsel for her, he was on the road to collision with something or other which would bring him up standing one day, or roll him broken and shattered in the dust. But champion as he became, and worshipping as his manner seemed, it all might easily have been put down to a warm, chivalrous and spontaneous nature which had not been bitted or bridled, and he might have landed at Quebec without committing himself, were it not for the fact that he was destined not to land in Quebec.

That was the fact which controlled his destiny. He had spent many, many hours with the Donna Dolores, talking, talking as he loved to talk, and only saving himself from the fate of boring her by the fact that his enthusiasm had in it so fresh a quality, and he was so like her Don sales, that he kept her attention, and she would always endure him. Besides, quick of intelligence as she was, she was by nature more material than she looked. She had a well of sensuousness which might one day become sensuality; she had a richness of feeling, and the contour of harmony with it, which might expand into voluptuousness if given too much sun, or if untamed by the normal restraints of a happy married life. There was an earthquake zone in her being which might shake down the whole structure of her existence. She was unsafe, not because she was deceiving Jean Jacques now as to her origin and as to her feelings for him, for, being a woman, she could love tomorrow one she cavarely revolted from or deceived today; she was unsafe because of the natural strain of the light of love in her, joined to a passion for comfort and warmth and a natural self indulgence. She was determined to make Jean Jacques offer himself before they landed at Quebec.

But they were not destined to land at Quebec.

The journey wore on to the Canada coast. Gaspe was not far off when, still held back by the constitutional tendency of the Norman not to close a bargain till compelled to do so, Jean Jacques sat with Carmen far forward of the deck, where the groaning Antoine broke the waters into surly foam, and silently watched the sunset, golden and purple and splendid—and ominous, as the captain knew

"Look, the end of life—like that!" said Jean Jacques oratorically with a wave of the hand toward the primitive radiance.

"All the way round, the whole circle—no, it would be too much," Carmen replied sadly. "Better to go at noon—or soon after. Then the only memory of life would be of the gallop. No crawling into the night for me, if I can help it. Mother of Heaven, no! Let me go at the top of the flight—yes, yes!"

"It is all the same to me," responded Jean Jacques. "I want to know it all—to gallop, to trot, to walk, to crawl. Me, I am a philosopher I wait"

* * * * * * *

"Tell me about your life, my friend," Jean Jacques said eagerly, and his eyes no longer hurried here and there, but fastened on hers and stayed thereabouts—ah, her face surely was like pictures he had seen in the galleries that day when he had ambled through the aisles of great men's glories with the feeling that he could not see too much for nothing in an hour.

"My life? Ah, m'sieu has not my father told you of it?" she asked.

He waved his head in explanation, his cocked his head quizzically. "Scraps —like the buttons on a coat here and there—that's all. Born in Andalusia, raised in exile, penury and misery, a beautiful boun," Carmen's eyes drooped, and her face flushed slightly—no brothers or sisters, visits to Madrid or on political business, you at school, then the going of your mother, and you at home at the head of the house. So much on the young shoulders, the kitchen, the cow, the market, the shop, society—and all that. That is what he said except the last and those, when your father, for the sake of Don Carlos and his rights near lost his life—ah, I can understand that, to stand the thing you have sworn to! France is a republic, but I would give my life to put a Napoleon or an Orleans on the throne! It is my hobby to stand by the old ship, not sign to a new captain except por!"

She raised her head and looked at him meditatively, calmly now. The flush had gone from her face, and a light of determination was in her eyes. To that she added suddenly a certain tinge of recklessness and abandon in carriage and manner, as one flings the body loose from the restraints of clothes, and it expands in freedom and the joy of the careless.

She wanted to have a home and not to wander. And here was a chance—how good a chance she was not sure; but it was a chance. She would not hesitate to make it hers. After all, self preservation was the thing which mattered. She wanted a bright fire, a good table, a horse, a cow, and all such simple things. She wanted a roof over her and a warm bed at night. She wanted a warm bed at night—but a warm bed at night alone. It was the price she would have to pay for her impasture—that if she had all these things, she could not be alone in the sleep-time. She had not thought of this in the days when she looked forward to a home with her Gonzales. To be near him was everything till the time when my father became a rebel. Then she used to cry, too; and she would sing no more; and when my father was put against a wall to be shot, and fell in the dust when the rifles rang out, she came at the moment, and seeing him lying there she threw up her hands, and fell down beside him dead"——

He drew nearer to her, his hand was outstretched to take hers, his eyes were full of the passion of the moment, pity was drowning all caution, all the Norman shrewdness in him, when the Antoine suddenly stopped almost dead with a sudden jolt and shock, then plunged sideways, jerked and trembled.

"We've struck a sunk iceberg—the rest of the story tomorrow, dignorina, different not—The Love of Isabella,' 'The Flight of Rohadil,' 'Saragossa.' 'My Little Mandillero,' and so on, and all so sweet that the women used to cry. Always, always she was singing till the time when my father became a rebel. Then she used to cry, too; and she would sing no more; and when my father was put against a wall to be shot, and fell in the dust when the rifles rang out, she came at the moment, and seeing him lying there she threw up her hands, and fell down beside him dead"——

He drew nearer to her, his hand was outstretched to take hers, his eyes were full of the passion of the moment, pity was drowning all caution, all the Norman shrewdness in him, when the Antoine suddenly stopped almost dead with a sudden jolt and shock, then plunged sideways, jerked and trembled.

"We've struck a sunk iceberg—the rest of the story tomorrow, dignorina," he cried, as they both sprang to their feet

"The rest of the story tomorrow," she almost said in suppressed anger at the stroke of fate which had interrupted the course of her fortune, but with a voice also charged with fear, for she was by nature a land-farer, not a sea-farer, though on the rivers of Spain she had lived almost as much as on land, and she was a good swimmer.

"The rest tomorrow," she repeated, controlling herself.

The rest came tomorrow. When the Antoine struck the sunken iceberg she was not more than one hundred and twenty miles from the coast of Gaspe. She had not struck it full on, or she would have crumpled up, but had struck and glanced, mounting the iceberg and sliding away with a small gaping wound in her side, broken internally where she had been weakest and most needed strength. Her condition was one of extreme danger, and the captain was by no means sure that he could make land with her if a storm or a heavy sea came on, she was doomed.

As it was, with all hands at the pumps, the water gained on her, and she moaned and creaked and ached her way into the night with no certainty that she would show a funnel to the light of another day. Passengers and crew alike worked, and the few boats were got ready to lower away when the worst came to the worst. Below with the crew the little money master of St. Saviour's worked with an energy which had behind it some generations of hardy qualities; and all the time he refused to be downcast. There was something in his nature or in his philosophy after all.

And while Jean Jacques worked "like a little French pony," as they say in Canada of every man with the courage to do hard things in him, he did not stop to think that the scanty life belts had all been taken, and that he was a very poor swimmer indeed; for, as a child, he had been subject to cramp, and he had made the Beau Cheval River and the St. Lawrence less his friends than would have been useful now.

He realized it, however, soon after daybreak, when, within a few hundred yards of the shores of Gaspe, to which the good Basque captain had been slowly driving the Antoine all night, there came the cry, "All hands on deck" and "Lower the boats," for the Antoine's time had come, and within a hand-reach of saore almost she found the end of her rickety life. Not more than three-fourths of the passengers and crew were got into the boats, and Jean Jacques was not one of these, but he saw Carmen Dolores and her father were safely bestowed, though in different boats. To the girl's aspect to him to come, he gave a nod of assent, and said he did not do, pushing into the boat instead a crying lad of fifteen who said he was afraid to die.

* * * * * * *

The boat in which Carmen had been placed was swamped not far from shore, but she managed to lay hold of a piece of drifting wreckage, a wooden seat, such as that on which they had sat so often on the way over from France, and she began to fight steadily and easily for the shore. Presently she was aware, however, of a man struggling hard some little distance away to the left of her, and was sure from the tousled hair she, in the water that it was Jean Jacques.

So it proved to be; and thus it was that at his last gasp almost, when, he felt he could keep up no longer, there came to which Carmen clung came to his hand, and a word of cheer from her drew his head up, with what was almost a laugh

"To think of this!" he said presently when he was safe, with her swimming beside him without support, for the piece of wreckage would not sustain the weight of two. "To think that it is you who saves me!" he again declared eloquently as they made the shore in comparative ease, for she was a fine swimmer, and he had the wooden seat given up by her.

There was nothing else for him to do. The usual process of romance had been reversed. He had not saved her life, but she had saved his. The least that he could do was to give her shelter at the Manoir Cartier yonder at St. Saviour's, her and her father. Human gratitude must have its play, and it was strong in this case that it alone could have overcome the Norman caution of Jean Jacques, and all his worldly wisdom (so much in his own eyes). Added thereto was the thing which had been greatly stirred in him at the instant the Antoine struck and now he kept picturing Carmen in the big living-room and the big bedroom of the house by the mill where was the comfortable four-poster which had come from the house of the last Baron of Beauport down by St. Laurent.

Three days after the shipwreck of the Antoine, and as soon as sufficient finery could be got in Quebec, it was accomplished, the fate of Jean Jacques. How proud he was of the check his cheque book before the young Spanish maid, and write in crumped, characteristic hand a cheque for a hundred dollars or so at a time! A moiety of this money was given to Sebastian Dolores who could scarcely believe his good fortune, and that a situation was got for him by the help of the good abbe at Quebec who was touched by the tale of the wreck of the Antoine and by the no less wonderful tale of the refugees of Spain who naturally belonged to the true faith which "feared God and honored the King."

(The next instalment of this great story will appear in the September number of Hearst's Magazine.)

"He admired, yet he wished to be admired; he simply wanted people to say: 'Here co. Jean Jacques Barbille. Here comes Jean Jacques, who loves fine things and great deeds, history and music and philosophy.'"

"It is the rest of the story," he said, as they stood on the shore in the morning sun, shoeless, coatless, but safe, and she understood. He had not saved her life, but she had saved him."

Why We Should Prohibit Skyscrapers to Stop Tuberculosis--

By S. Adolphus Knopf, M.D.
Professor of Medicine, Department of Phthisio-therapy, New York Post Graduate Medical School.

I PLEAD for a law that will check the growth of skyscrapers because they are directly responsible for the spread of tuberculosis.

I ask the people to pass this law before it interferes too greatly with vested interests, and therefore before it becomes impracticable.

I urge the law in the interests of the cities' beauty as well as of public health.

A tall building, driven to twenty stories high, with all the modern improvements and conveniences and sufficient fire protection, situated on a public square, park or playground, which does not take away the light or air of neighboring buildings, is a monument to man's ingenuity and architectural skill. The same building, no matter how handsomely built, situated in a narrow street, with buildings close to it on either side, or at the front or rear, so that these living in less high buildings are deprived of light and air, is a manifestation of man's thoughtlessness or, what is worse, selfishness and greed.

Sunlight and air are as essential to man's well-being as water. If I shut off water so that my neighbors cannot procure any, I should be prosecuted as a criminal, and justly so, for thus I take away what does not belong to me. In that case I should be a thief pure and simple. Yet I may construct in my narrow street as high a building as my means and the builder's skill will permit, thereby depriving a great number of my fellowmen of the light and air which are necessary to their health. In other words, I may steal from them the sunlight and air which God has given all His children, and to which all should be entitled by right of being freeborn American citizens. There is as yet no law which will punish me for this crime, for that is what it is.

Tuberculosis, which is propagated by bad air, foul air and lack of sunlight, causes annually a loss of 200,000 citizens to the United States. In the city of New York during the last statistical year it was responsible for 10,000 deaths. This disease could be largely prevented if we lived and worked in pure air, in air relatively free from mineral and vegetable dust, and, last but not least, if we were to construct the buildings in which we live and labor so as to allow sunlight to enter more freely. Tuberculosis is far more prevalent among the workers in our downtown office buildings than is generally known and much more than should be the case, when one considers the wealth which is represented there and the relatively good pay the bookkeepers and clerks receive as a rule.

Carefully gathered statistics show that in the city of New York the garment workers are afflicted more frequently with tuberculosis than any other class of workers. The majority of these workers do not, as is often thought, work in their homes. They work in the tall crowded buildings, situated in congested districts, ten, twelve, twenty or more stories high, where every floor masses hundreds of workers. Many are tuberculous without knowing it. Others know that they are tuberculous, but, perhaps fearing discharge, hide their disease as long as they can, but in the meantime they disseminate the germs of tuberculosis by coughing in their neighbors' faces or over the clothing they manufacture, or, what is still more frequent, spread the disease by careless expectoration on the floor. During luncheon hour they crowd streets and avenues, and those who feel with the disease expectorate freely on the sidewalks and streets. The infectious sputum dries and pulverizes, and is inhaled with the dust and causes tuberculosis in any susceptible individual who may frequent that street.

Again, the infectious sputum of the consumptive may be carried on the soles of the workers' shoes back into the factory or into their own homes, causing the infection of wife and children. The infectious dust may also settle on the garments, and thus tuberculosis may be carried into the home. In case of epidemics of pneumonia and grippe, the same process of infection through spitting and coughing is carried on, and both diseases are by no means so infrequent or rarely transmitted to others as is generally supposed.

And now, not content with the many altogether too tall buildings already lining the part of Fifth avenue south of Twenty-third street and the adjoining streets, some (let me hope, not greedy but only thoughtless) capitalists wish to increase the number of these breeding and destructive skyscrapers and erect them in the one principal and most beautiful street of New York city, where there are as yet relatively few of these unsanitary and unsafe structures.

A second danger, although not purely medical, both which as a citizen and physician I nevertheless have the right to call attention to, is that of fire. Stand pipes have not proven sufficient protection for most skyscrapers. It is for this reason no less than for the others already mentioned that the time for limiting the height of buildings in our crowded streets has come. Too many lives are sacrificed directly and indirectly through the erection of too tall buildings.

While in would leave the details of regulating the height of buildings to the many architects and experts who feel as I do in this matter, there are certain principles that recommend themselves to common sense. The first rule is that no buildings should be higher than the width of the street or space upon which it faces. This makes it possible to put very high buildings facing parks or open spaces, while making it impossible to build them on narrow streets, where they do harm to the public health.

We cannot pull down the existing skyscrapers, but I believe that it would be wise to tax them in proportion to their height, so that they might be made to pay for the undue share of air and sunlight which they take from their neighbors.

The restriction of skyscrapers by these methods should have a good effect on the general development of the city. At present there is an abnormal development along Broadway and a few leading thoroughfares, while districts a few blocks away are entirely neglected. If we checked the skyscrapers our business man would be forced to give us a more rational and well distributed development of the city.

Measures should be taken to make the lower floors of the existing skyscrapers as sanitary as possible. Something can be done to make them healthful by giving them proper ventilation and moisture at a certain temperature. The air should be kept in motion. An ideal temperature is 65 degrees, with sufficient moisture.

CHAPTER I.

Panthers or Bears?

THE defeat in the opening game of the final series of the season between the Panthers and Bears had been a hard blow to the championship hopes of the Bears, and its effect was evident in the demeanor of the players and those associated with them. It was the second week in September. Since early in May the Blues, the Panthers and the Bears, conceded to be the three strongest teams in the league, had struggled day by day almost upon even terms, first one team leading by a narrow margin, then another, until the interest of the entire population of the country was centered upon the battle for supremacy.

Then, with the Blues holding the lead by the narrowest of margins, Maloney, their premier pitcher, strained his arm, and the Blues, in despair, battled too harder only to overtax the strength of the remaining pitchers, so that the team slumped rapidly into third place, still fighting gamely to keep close [to] the flying leaders and hoping against hope to get their crippled pitching staff back into condition for the finish.

It was the consensus of opinion of the followers of the sport that the four game series between the Bears and Panthers probably would prove the crisis of the year's efforts, and decide the question of supremacy. On the eve of the [illegible] of that series the Bear hopes had received a shock. Carson, the heaviest batter, the speediest base runner and one of the most brilliant outfielders in the [league], had fractured a leg in sliding to a [base] and was crippled so seriously that all [hope] of his recovery in time to play again [illegible] was abandoned. For two days prior to the opening of the critical series with the Panthers the Bears had kept the seriousness of Carson's injury a secret, knowing [that] announcement of the true condition of the player would give Hartman, manager of the Panthers, additional advantage in knowing how best to use his pitchers.

[illegible] vague whisperings. It was [illegible] Carson's leg was badly fra[ctured] [illegible]. The [illegible] of this truth came as a [shock to those] who had wagered heavily upon the Bears to win, and following that came [illegible] reports and charges that a favored few among the professional gamblers who had attached themselves leech-like to baseball had received earlier information, and that they had profited by it to wager heavily that the [illegible] would win, securing advantage of [illegible].

Until the day the news that Carson could [not] play again during the season became [illegible] the Bears had been favorites, but with their hardest batter crippled, and Holleran, the substitute, known to be weak against curve pitching, and in addition, a poor thrower, their hopes seemed destroyed. The odds changed instantly. There was a scandal brewing that aroused the league officials and [illegible] while the newspapers [illegible] a thorough investigation. Manager William Clancy of the Bears, his kindly, weather-beaten face wearing a troubled expression in spite of his customary cheerfulness, was investigating. The defeat of the Bears in the first game with the Panthers had revealed to all the vital weakness of the holders of the championship, and Clancy, as he sat nibbling the end of his penholder in the writing room of the hotel at which he and his team were stopping, faced a discouraging situation.

Across the table from him a slender girl, attired in a close-fitting street gown, was writing rapidly, covering many sheets of hotel stationery with tall, angular hieroglyphics as she detailed to her dearest friend at home the exciting events of the day.

"Betty," said Manager Clancy, looking up, "if you and Ellen are ever going to get ready you'll have to start."

"I'm ready now, Mr. Clancy," the girl responded brightly, lifting her bowed head until she revealed the perfect curve of her firm chin, and smiled. "I left Mother Clancy in the rooms sewing on some buttons. She will be ready soon."

At that moment a slender youth, easy in movement, almost graceful in his confident carriage, entered the hotel lobby. Something in his bearing gave evidence that he was accustomed to association with persons of breeding and refinement. His closely cropped, curly hair, sandy to the point of redness, attracted attention to his well-formed head, set well upon a pair of shoulders so wide as to give him the appearance of strength, in spite of the slenderness of his waist and the lightness of his body. His face was freckled and the uptilt of his nose added to the friendly impression created by his blue eyes. His clothes were almost threadbare and his shoes were worn, but his linen was clean and his appearance neat. He seemed unconscious of any contrast of his raiment with the rather flashy but costly garments worn by some of the Bears who lounged in the lobby. The youth hesitated, glancing from group to group of the players, as if trying to decide which one to approach.

"Silent" Swanson, the giant shortstop, who had earned his nickname because he was the noisiest player on the field, was standing talking with "Noisy" Norton, the second baseman, so called because he seldom spoke either on or off the field, and Adonis Williams, the star left handed pitcher of the team. The newcomer's eyes fell upon this group, and his face lighted as he observed that Williams' hair was only a shade darker than his own. As if deciding quickly, he walked toward the group.

"You are Williams, are you not?" he inquired easily, smiling in a friendly manner.

"That's my name, but most people add a mister to it," responded Williams, eyeing him from head to foot half-sneeringly.

"I beg pardon, Mister Williams," he said, quietly; "I was seeking Manager Clancy. Perhaps you can tell me where to find him?"

"It isn't very hard to find Clancy," responded Williams, in the tone used by him in repulsing the advances of the fanatics who claim acquaintanceship with ball players. "We can't lose him."

"Perhaps you would be so kind as to point him out to me. I never have had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Clancy."

Neither of them had observed that Swanson and Norton had drawn aside to permit the girl who had been in the writing room to pass on her way to the elevator. Evidently she overheard the youth's inquiry, for she hesitated just as Williams laughed in an ugly manner and said:

"If you don't know him you'd better peddle yourself somewhere else. He won't be in a mood to talk to boobs tonight."

Before the slender youth could speak, the girl, flushed with indignation, stepped forward and said quietly:

"Pardon me, but I overheard you inquiring for Manager Clancy. He is in the writing room."

Her brown eyes flashed with anger, her lips were set tight and her sun-browned cheeks flushed as she passed quickly on toward the elevator, not waiting to respond to the thanks of the slender youth, who had removed his hat quickly to utter his gratitude. For an instant he stood staring after the slender girl as she disappeared into the elevator car without a backward glance. Then, turning toward Williams, who still flushed and angry, his blue eyes narrowed and he said:

"Just for that, I'll kick you on the shins in the clubhouse and dare you to fight."

"What? You will, huh?" spluttered the astounded pitcher.

He would have said more, but before he could recover from the double shock of the girl's rebuke of his surliness and the man's quiet scornful threat, the newcomer, smiling oddly, turned and walked toward the writing room and held out his hand to the famous Clancy, for six years leader of the Bears.

"Who's your friend, Adonis?" inquired Swanson, grinning at the angry pitcher.

"Some fresh busher, I guess," snarled Williams angrily. "Got sore because I didn't want to steer him on to Bill. I guess he's joining the team."

"I heard him say he would be in the clubhouse," responded Swanson, with grinning sarcasm.

"I'll take some of the freshness out of him," threatened Williams.

"Seems to me you had it coming," retorted Swanson, as he turned to join Norton.

The slender youth stood with extended hand while Manager Clancy gazed up interrogatively from his writing.

"Mr. Clancy?" he asked, smiling.

"Yes. Sit down," responded Clancy, his intention of rebuffing the intruder changing as he saw the smile. "What can I do for you?"

"I read in the evening papers," replied the youth, still smiling easily, "that Carson broke a leg and that, to win the pennant, you must find an outfielder who can hit."

"Perhaps you also read that I'd like to find a diamond about the size of my head?" responded Clancy in a half-indignant attempt at sarcasm.

"The paper also said that you might switch Pardridge from third base to the outfields if you could find a hard hitting infielder." The caller was unruffled and the smile remained in the blue eyes.

"Possibly the paper also said that if I found the diamond I'd move my gold mine to make room for it?" Clancy evidently intended to say more in the same sarcastic vein he used in dealing with his players, but he restrained himself from further comment, feeling vaguely uncertain because of the quiet confidence of his visitor.

There was a pause, the veteran manager studying his caller as if puzzled, and the slender youth sat smiling and entirely at his ease, as if expecting Clancy to resume the conversation.

"Well?" said Clancy, glancing at the half-finished letter as if to hint that his time was entirely too valuable to be wasted discussing academic impossibilities with entire strangers.

"Well," replied the visitor, smiling, "I'm it."

"You're what?" asked the astonished manager.

"Third baseman who can hit."

"When shall I move the gold mine?" Clancy's voice was dangerously quiet, the calm that usually preceded his storms of wrath.

"Tomorrow if you like."

Clancy sat gazing at his visitor as if undecided as to whether he should explode in wrath, laugh at some joke too deep for him, or believe the slender youth was in earnest.

"Say, kid," he said slowly after studying the youth for a moment, "I admire your nerve, anyhow. If you have half the confidence in a ball game that you have off it you'll be a wonder. Where did you ever play ball?"

A troubled expression came over the boy's face.

"Mr. Clancy," he said, quietly, "if you take me you'll have to do it without asking questions. You'll have to take my records on faith. I can play ball, and it's up to me to make good at something. All I ask is a chance to prove to you I can play. It will not cost you a cent to find out."

In spite of the confidence of his bearing and his self-assurance a note of anxiety had crept into the voice of the youth, and the blue eyes seemed troubled. Clancy was watching him closely.

"Done anything?" he asked, sharply.

"Criminal? No," responded the boy, flushing.

"Ever signed a professional contract?"

"No."

Clancy studied him for a full minute as if trying to decide what to do. Then, raising his voice, he called:

"Oh, Sed. Come here a minute."

A tall man, his hair gray, his face wearing a frown of perpetual worry, came from the hotel lobby.

"Mr. Tabor," said Clancy, without rising, "this is Mr. Jimmy McCarthy, who is to have a try-out with us at third base. Room him with the players. You aren't stopping anywhere else, are you?"

The last question was directed to the surprised youth.

"No—I'm broke," answered the youth, flushing quickly.

"I'll fix you up in a moment," said the secretary in friendly tones as he shook hands with the youth. "Please wait until I finish settling up with the baggage man?"

The secretary hastened from the room, and the boy turned impulsively to the manager.

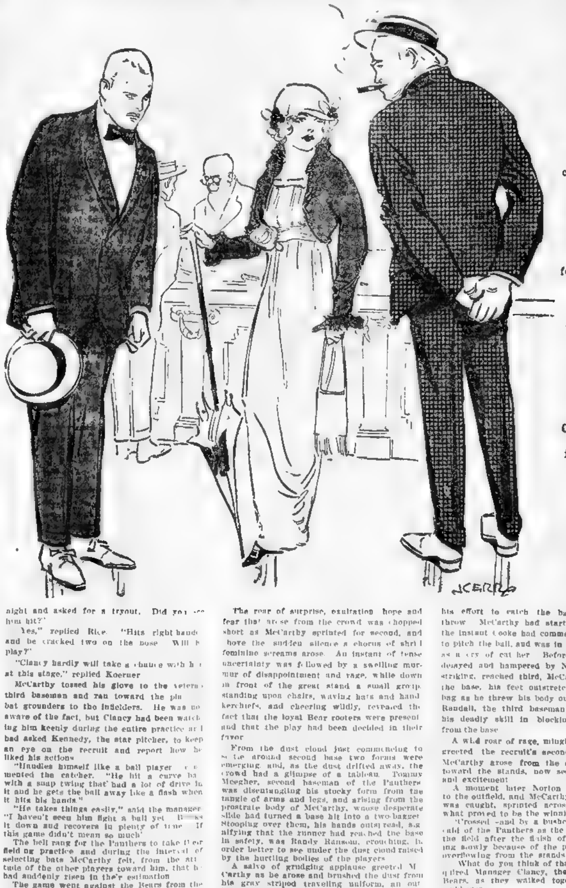
"Mr. Clancy," he said in a tone of gratitude, "I want to thank you—I don't know how. I was broke—ball playing is about all I'm good at. How did you know I didn't want to use my own name?"

"I figured you might want to forget it for a time anyhow," said Clancy. "McCarthy is a good name and it fits your eyes and hair."

"I can't tell you how grateful I am," said the boy, impetuously. "I'll make good for you. I've failed trying to make a living. Baseball is the only thing they taught me at college that I'm good at, and when I read that you needed a third baseman I"——

"College man, eh?" asked Clancy, quickly. "Well, I won't hold that against you or tip it off. Don't thank me. If you make good I'll be the one to give thanks."

The youth turned to follow the secretary as if to hide a little mist that came into his eyes, and he left Manager Clancy gazing thoughtfully after him and nibbling the end of his penholder.



"Before the slender youth could speak, the girl, flushed with indignation, stepped forward and said quietly: Pardon me, but I overheard you inquiring for Manager Clancy. He is in the writing room."

"It would be a miracle," said Clancy to himself. "But I've got a hunch it will come true. He's bred right—tell it from his looks. He's game, light on his feet; good shoulders, and—and—and a pair of eyes."

He frowned less than he had done in two days as he resumed his letter writing.

CHAPTER II.

A Miracle Called McCarthy.

Thirty thousand persons, banked in the great triple-decked steel grandstands and massed in the field seats, roared with increasing excitement as from every direction solid streams of humanity poured toward the park to witness the second game of the series between the Bears and the Panthers.

The batting practice of the teams had ended and the Bears trotted out upon the field which was freshly lined with whitewash, showing clean against the green of the newly cropped grass.

"Who is that red headed bird practicing out there at third?" inquired "Chucky" Rice, the veteran reporter of the Panthers.

"Name is McCarthy, a busher Clancy picked up somewhere. He is to have a trial this Fall after the pennant fight is over," said Koerner of the Globe, who traveled with the Bears.

"Looks pretty sweet on ground balls," commented Rice, watching the slender, graceful athlete who was occupying Pardridge's place at third base. "Where did Clancy find him, Tom?"

The question was addressed to "Technicalities" Feehan, the odd little reporter who had traveled with the Bears for twenty years.

"I have not been informed," responded Feehan, adjusting his glasses and watching McCarthy closely. "He came to the hotel last night and asked for a tryout. Did you see him hit?"

"Yes," replied Rice. "Hits right handed and he cracked two on the nose. Will he play?"

"Clancy hardly will take a chance with him at this stage," replied Koerner.

McCarthy tossed his glove to the veteran third baseman and ran toward the plate to bat grounders to the infielders. He was not aware of the fact, but Clancy had been watching him keenly during the entire practice and had asked Kennedy, the star pitcher, to keep an eye on the recruit and report how he liked his actions.

"Handles himself like a ball player," commented the catcher. "He hit a curve ball with a snap twing that had a lot of drive in it and he gets the ball away like a flash when it hits his hands."

"He takes things easily," said the manager. "I haven't seen him fight a ball yet. [illegible] it down and recovers in plenty of time. If this game didn't mean so much."

The bell rang for the Panthers to take their fielding practice and during the interval of selecting bats McCarthy felt, from the attitude of the other players toward him, that he had suddenly risen in their estimation.

The game went against the Bears from the start, the break of the luck seeming always to favor the Panthers. The Bears were hitting hard and threatening to score, yet it happened that at the critical times, when the hit was most needed, Holleran was at bat. Twice with runners perched on second and third Holleran had hit feeble grounders to the outfield, one resulting in a runner being caught at the home plate and one in an easy out at first that finished an inning in which the Bears had threatened to amass a half-dozen runs.

The seventh inning staged with the Panthers leading 3 to 1, and the Bears seemingly beaten beyond hope of recovery. An error followed quickly by a base on balls and a successful sacrifice bunt put Bear runners on second and third bases with but one out and Holleran coming to the bat. Holleran was half-way to the batter's position when Clancy signalled him, and an instant later Umpire Maxwell turned and announced:

"McCarthy batting for Holleran. McCarthy will play third base. Pardridge in left field."

"That's that red headed bird," remarked "Chuckie" Rice in the press box. "Well he can't be much worse in a pinch than Holleran. Say, that [illegible] must be a [illegible]. He [illegible]."

McCarthy came to the batter's box quickly, swinging a [illegible] borrowed from Swanson, the shortstop. He let a fast ball cut across the plate just at his shoulders and only glanced inquiringly at the umpire when it was called a strike. The next one was a quick breaking [illegible] coming straight at him. He [illegible] slightly forward, snapped the [illegible] the ball and drove it down the [illegible] foul line; two runners sprinted across the plate, and the score was tied.

"That auburn hair can hit them curves," commented Rice. [illegible] called the [illegible].

The game went [illegible] the tenth, the pitchers working harder and harder and the teams battling [illegible] them without a break to bring the victory that meant so much to them. The excitement in the big crowd increased inning after [inning], and when the eleventh started [illegible] were in a furore of expectation.

Jimmy McCarthy was the first batter for the Bears. From [illegible] he had become the sensation [illegible] and thousands were asking who he was. Twice he had hit Cooke's fast [illegible] and hit it hard and Cooke [illegible] shook his head [at] his catcher's signal for another curve. The recruit [illegible] a sudden [illegible] position. The first ball was [illegible] his shoulders as Cooke had [illegible] before. This time instead of taking the first strike McCarthy met the ball [illegible] over the [illegible]. He turned first base [illegible] although [illegible] McKeever, the [illegible] right fielder, known as one of the greatest throwers in the league, was in position to field the ball.

The roar of surprise, exultation, hope and fear that arose from the crowd was chopped short as McCarthy sprinted for second, and above the sudden silence a chorus of shrill feminine screams arose. An instant of tense uncertainty was followed by a swelling murmur of disappointment and rage, while down in front of the great stand a small group, standing upon chairs, waving hats and handkerchiefs, and cheering wildly, revealed the fact that the loyal Bear rooters were present and that the play had been decided in their favor.

From the dust cloud just commencing to settle around second base two forms were emerging, and, as the dust drifted away, the crowd had a glimpse of a tableau. Tommy Meegher, second baseman of the Panthers, was disentangling his stocky form from the tangle of arms and legs, and arising from the prostrate body of McCarthy, whose desperate slide had turned a base hit into a two-bagger. Stooping over them, his hands outspread, signifying that the runner had reached the base in safety, was Randy Ransom, crouching, in order better to see under the dust cloud raised by the hurtling bodies of the players.

A salvo of grudging applause greeted McCarthy as he arose and brushed the dust from his gray striped traveling uniform, an outburst that was followed by a frenzied spasm of enthusiasm from the Bear followers. Tommy Meegher threw the ball angrily against the ground, picked it up quickly as the umpire glanced threateningly toward him, and tossed it to Jimmy Cooke, the pitcher.

"Never mind, Cookie, old scout," he yelled encouragingly; "we had him a foot. That hit was an accident. This busher shut his eyes and hit it. They won't get another hit in a week."

On the Bears' bench Manager Clancy grinned for the first time in three days.

"I believe that kid will do," he said to Kennedy, who sat next to him on the bench. "He called the turn on that fast ball, just met it, and turned first on his stride. He slid under Meegher clean. Lay one down now," he added, addressing the order to Norton, who was selecting a bat from the row in front of the bench.

The skill of Noisy Norton as a sacrifice hitter was well known to the spectators in the stands, but better known to the tense, anxious infielders of the Panthers, who crouched, watching his every motion as he came to the [illegible]tion, shortened his hold upon the bat and batter's position. Norton stepped into position, glanced quickly around the infield as if noting the position of each man. Suddenly he started as if in surprise and glanced hurriedly toward the Bears' bench. Manager Clancy, who had been frowning worriedly, grinned quickly, then nodded his head affirmatively and again Norton crouched, shortened his grip upon the bat still more, and slowly churned the inoffensive air with it. The Panther infielders, alert to detect the plan of attack to be tried by the Bears, had caught the rapid exchange of glances and they crept a step or two closer to the batter, poising ready to leap forward to field any ball pushed toward them from Norton's bat.

The plan of assault to be tried seemed clear to the thousands of spectators. Rice, veteran of two thousand games, muttered something about "the old gag," and prepared to score a sacrifice. It appeared certain that a sacrifice hit was to be attempted; that the third baseman of the Panthers was to pretend to field the ball, but that instead, he would return to third base the moment Norton bunted, permitting Cooke, the pitcher, to try to reach the ball in time to throw to third to catch McCarthy there instead of throwing to first to retire Norton. The second baseman and shortstop of the Panthers were jockeying, pretending they were striving to reach the bag in time to take the throw from Cooke and trap McCarthy off the base. In reality, the object of their movements was to prevent the runner from gaining an extra foot or two start toward third as the ball was pitched.

Cooke pitched fast and straight over the plate, intending to make Norton push the ball back to him, or into the air for a fly out. Norton, however, struck viciously, but without making an effort to hit the ball, swinging his bat in order to handicap the catcher in his effort to catch the ball and make a throw. McCarthy had started at full speed the instant Cooke had commenced to wind up to pitch the ball, and was in full flight toward [illegible]. Before Nixon's throw, delayed and hampered by Noton's tactics in striking, reached third, McCarthy slid behind the base, his feet outstretched to hook the bag as he threw his body outward to prevent Randall, the third baseman, from exercising his deadly skill in blocking runners away from the base.

A wild roar of rage, mingled with applause, greeted the recruit's second daring feat as McCarthy arose from the dust and glanced toward the stands, now seething with noise and excitement.

A moment later Norton drove a long fly to the outfield, and McCarthy, waiting until it was caught, sprinted across the plate with what proved to be the winning run.

"Crossed—and by a busher," lamented Kincaid of the Panthers as the teams started off the field after the finish of the game, walking slowly because of the press of humanity overflowing from the stands.

"What do you think of that kid, Slats?" inquired Manager Clancy, the manager of the Bears, as they walked together toward the clubhouse.

"He's a ball player if he don't swell," responded Hartman, laconically. "He pulled that steal of third wise. He figured we wouldn't expect a busher to try to steal at that stage, and we didn't. He's a wise head for a kid."

"Looks good to me," replied Clancy. "He slipped Norton a signal not to hit, but to let him steal—and I almost fell off the bench when I saw it. I expected him to toss the game away."

"Where'd you get him?" demanded Hartman.

"He washed himself on to me," grinned Clancy. "He told me he could play ball and I believed him."

The lobby of the hotel at which the Bears stopped presented a different scene that evening. Confidence, renewed by the victory, was revealed in every action. A swarm of reporters descended upon the headquarters of the visiting team striving to discover something of the history and antecedents of the slender, red-haired youngster whose coming had revived the waning pennant hopes of the Bears. McCarthy was not to be found. He slipped away after [illegible] telling any one his plans. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] to-day," commented Rice. "How [illegible] a square."

By [illegible] steadily. "If I needed any more evidence, he was offered $500 to sign a Panther contract after today's game and told them to [illegible] to me—and we haven't even [illegible] salary."

"What'll we call him?" asked one reporter.

"Say," replied Clancy enthusiastically, "I dreamed last night that I had found a pot of gold wrapped up in a million dollar bill, with a diamond as big as my head on top of it. Call him Kohinoor."

So Kohinoor McCarthy sprang into fame in a day as the most timely find of the baseball season and the mystery of the league.

CHAPTER III.

Hope for the Bears.

The Bears were joyous again. They scuffled, joked, laughed and romped joyously as the team gathered in the railway station, where their special cars were waiting for them to make a hurried departure for the city of the Pilgrims on the evening after the final game of the series with the Panthers. Three victories out of four games played with the Panthers instead of the dreaded three defeats had lifted the Bears back practically to even terms with their rivals. All they had hoped for after the injury of Carson was to divide the series with the Panthers, and it was due to the sudden appearance of Kohinoor McCarthy that the victories were made possible. McCarthy suddenly found himself one of the most advertised players in the country; his sensational playing in the three games, the fact that he came just at the crucial hour, unheralded, and, above all, the mystery surrounding him drew attention to the young player.

All the notoriety that suddenly was thrust upon McCarthy had failed to affect him, although Manager Clancy watched his "find" anxiously, and pleaded with the newspaper men not to spoil him. No trace of the dreaded affliction known as "swelled head" had revealed itself, and because McCarthy was able to laugh over the wild stories printed concerning him, Clancy breathed more easily and hoped for the best.

The Bears, for a week a grumbling and worried aggregation of athletes, were themselves again: buoyant, full of hope and in high spirits that bubbled forth in almost childish horseplay as they gathered to catch their train for the final long trip of the season. The team, as Kirtland, the eccentric veteran outfielder, remarked, had regained "the old confee-dence." The spirit to fight and to win had returned, and Manager Clancy smiled quietly as he watched the horseplay and the rough joking that bespoke minds free from care. He, better than the others, understood that the sudden renewal of confidence after it has been shaken is better than hope unbroken, and he knew that his team was in better condition to face the gruelling days of the finish than it would have been had it never felt the discouragement and bitterness of surrender to ill luck. It was a team that had "quit" and "come again," and such teams, as those in baseball know, are as hard to beat as is a regiment that has broken and rallied to redeem its honor.

During all the joyous celebration McCarthy, who had made it possible, stood apart from the others, feeling a little lonely. He did not [illegible] that a team that has played together for several seasons becomes like a big family and that no matter how well they may like a newcomer, he must needs disturb the settled order of things. McCarthy stood watching them, smiling quietly at their antics with a feeling that he was an intruder. The truth was, however, that the Bears had welcomed him from the start. He had won their admiration on the field and the undying friendship of Silent Swanson by his conduct in the clubhouse on the afternoon after the close of his first game. It was that incident that made for him a chum and an enemy, who were destined to play a big part in his career.

When the players raced off the field after that victory, striving, some of them in vain, to escape being engulfed in the torrent of humanity that poured from the stands, McCarthy was caught, with a few others, and delayed. When he reached the clubhouse the substitutes and the reserve pitchers already were splashing and spluttering under the showers, and on the tables the lame and the damaged athletes lay groaning and complaining under the hands of rubbers who were working upon their sore muscles. McCarthy walked directly across the dressing room to where Adonis Williams, already stripped to the waist, was preparing to take his shower, and without a word he kicked the pitcher on the shins—a mere rap, but administered so as to leave no doubt as to its purpose.

"Here—— What did you do that for?" demanded Williams, turning upon him with a roar of surprise and anger.

"I told you in the hotel when you insulted me that I'd do it. [illegible]"

McCarthy's blue eyes had grown narrower, and a colder blue [illegible] them.

"I'll break you in pieces, you —— —— ——you," Williams spluttered with rage.

"Drop that talk and fight," challenged McCarthy, stepping into a fighting attitude.

Just then McCarthy received help from an unexpected source. Swanson, the giant of the team, broke through the circle of players that had formed in expectation of seeing a fight.

"You're all right, bo," he roared, throwing his huge arms around the shoulders of the recruit. "You're perfectly all right, but he won't fight you."

"I'll smash"——

"Naw, you won't, Adonis," said the giant, contemptuously. "I think he can lick you, anyhow, but you had it coming. Now kick his other shin, and after that Adonis will apologize."

(To be continued next Sunday.)

Was "Spirit of God" Electro-Magnetism?--

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

Professor Birkeland's Experiments With a Steel Sphere in a Vacuum Hint That the Universe Was Created by Electro-Magnetic Force

The Peculiar Markings of the Planet Mars and the Mysterious Lights on Jupiter Are Repeated in This Vacuum.

By PROF. GARRETT P. SERVISS

PROFESSOR KRISTIAN BIRKELAND believes that he has got a clew to the manner in which the Great Architect of the Heavens forms the planets that revolve around the suns of space. If so, then, of course, he has a clew to the way in which our own earth was created, and is able to suggest an answer to one of the grandest problems, of a physical and mechanical nature, that the human intellect can undertake to solve, that of the origin of this world in which we live.

This great problem, which has puzzled the minds of men ever since they first began to think, is touched upon in the very opening words of the Bible.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.

"And the earth was without form and void, and darkness rested upon the face of the deep.' And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

But this leaves us plunged in mystery, and tells us nothing that we can clearly understand.

Now comes Professor Birkeland, uttering the magic name of electricity, and suggesting, in effect if not in words, that the "Spirit of God" spoken of by the writer of Genesis may have been electro-magnetic force, and that we may not only see it in operation today, creating other worlds in the depths of space, but that we may actually experiment with it, on a small and imperfect scale, in the laboratory!

Professor Birkeland's experiments are based upon what occurs when a magnetic globe is exposed in a vessel exhausted of air to the action of electric discharges. He has used a globe of this kind nearly fifteen inches in diameter to represent the sun.

By varying the degree of magnetism and the strength of the electric discharge, he has produced astonishing imitations of such phenomena as the zodiacal light (which is a great lens shaped luminosity stretching out for millions of miles on each side of the sun); the coronal glow (which is seen surrounding the sun during an eclipse and often exhibits curved streamers of vast extent); and the rings of Saturn (which surround that planet in the form of perfect circles, one within an other, and are apparently composed of a multitude of solid particles like dust).

He has also produced equally surprising imitations of sunspots, arranging themselves in bands parallel to the equator of the globe, and gradually drawing in toward the equator from both sides, just as occurs with the actual spots upon the sun.

These imitated sunspots consist of "electric eruptions" on the magnetized globe, and they send out long streamers which can be photographed. They also exhibit a rotation, circling in one direction on one side of the globe's equator, and in the opposite direction on the other, exactly as happens with the spots on the sun. More than this, these artificial sunspots resemble real sunspots in being centres of magnetic action. In the case of the sun, these magnetic centres sometimes react upon the earth, producing magnetic storms and displays of the aurora borealis.

Then, Professor Birkeland has observed that his imitation sunspots exhibit the same tendency to periodicity as the real sunspots. It has long been known that spots appear upon the sun in cycles of about eleven years on the average. The periods shown by the artificial phenomena are, of course, incomparably briefer in duration, but Professor Birkeland believes that the cause of the periodicity is similar in both cases. He finds that as the magnetism of his globe increases in intensity the eruptions diminish, but increase again when the magnetism is reduced.

His explanation, as applied to the sun, is that the electric eruptions give rise to strong induced currents in the sun's core which increases its magnetism, and an atmosphere of ions electrified particles) accumulates over the sun's equator. The currents in the sun then begin to lose their intensity, through their being transformed into heat, and the atmosphere of ions returns to its primitive condition, that of a spherical jacket surrounding the whole sun, and thereupon, the magnetism being decreased, a new set of eruptions begins toward the poles and drifts in toward the equator; once more giving rise to induced currents and increased magnetism.

More remarkable, because it bears directly upon the question of the creation of worlds, are Professor Birkeland's observations on the conduct of electrified particles shot from a magnetic globe, such as that already described, when enclosed in a vacuum and subjected to electric discharges. Electrified particles are shot from it in great abundance, and with a speed depending upon the temperature and the degree of electric tension. He distinguishes between three sets of these flying particles.

The Phenomenon of Sun Spots and the Sun's Corona Can Be Produced at Will.

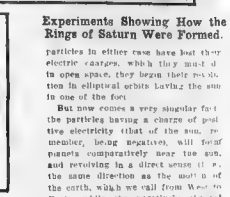
First, those which, if the action took place upon the sun, would dart away into space and never return. Second, those which fall back upon the sun. Third, those which, having attained a certain distance, collect together in clusters and thenceforth revolve around the sun in elliptical orbits.

This last class of particles are projected only in the equatorial plane of the magnetized globe, and Professor Birkeland's idea is that from such particles the earth and the other planets were built up at a time in the past when action of this kind upon the sun was vastly more intense than it is at present.

His theory, suggested by the actual results of his laboratory experiments, which reproduce on a minute scale the conditions required for the formation of the earth in this manner, assumes that a sun sustains, by virtue of its radiation of luminous rays and streams of electrified particles, a state of enormous negative electric tension, relative to the vacant space about it. This causes the action described to go on and on until the quantity of particles shot forth along the equatorial plane, and collecting in circles at definite distances (which distances depend upon the mass of the particles with relation to the electric charge that they bear) becomes sufficient to form a planet. It is by the gradual consolidation of the rings into a single body such what as imagined in the old Laplace theory, that the planets are formed.

The reader will notice the statement that the particles which tend to aggregate in circles, and thus form bodies revolving in elliptical orbits are shot out only near the equatorial plane of the magnetized globe, for this corresponds with the known fact that all the planets revolve around the sun in orbits which lie nearly in the plane of its equator. This in itself seems a strong confirmation of the theory.

Professor Birkeland has subjected the results of his experiments to mathematical calculations which enable him to assert that the particles or corpuscles having the largest mass must assemble in circles relatively near the sun, though the distance is not be great compared with the sun's diameter, while those of slighter mass must go relatively far away. When the particles in either case have lost their electric charges, which they must do in open space, they begin their motion in elliptical orbits having the sun in one of the foci.



Experiments Showing How the Rings of Saturn Were Formed.

But now comes a very singular fact the particles having a charge of positive electricity (that of the sun, remember, being negative), will form planets comparatively near the sun, and revolving in a direct sense (i. e., the same direction as the motion of the earth, which we call from West to East), while the negatively charged particles will go to greater distances and revolve in a retrograde or backward direction.

Now, the revolution of the planets (as yet discovered) is direct, and according to this hypothesis, they must have been built up from particles shot forth from the sun with charges of positive electricity, but I myself have long suspected that there exist one or more undiscovered planets at a distance greater than that of Neptune (the most distant now known) and Professor Birkeland ventures to predict that if other planets exist are found, with our growing telescopes, revolving around the sun far beyond the orbit of Neptune, they will be seen moving in a retrograde direction. This, of course, would indicate that they had been formed from negatively charged particles.

It is a bold prediction, but it deserves considerable support from the curious fact that both Saturn and Jupiter have each a satellite, situated enormously farther away than their other satellites, which actually revolves in a retrograde direction.

Professor Birkeland explains this by asserting that Saturn and Jupiter were formerly in a condition resembling that of the sun in condition which they have lost because, being so much smaller than the sun, they have cooled off quicker), and that, at that time, they shot off particles which condensed into "miniature planets, or satellites, revolving around them as the true planets revolve around the sun and that, the same law operating, it negatively charged particles formed a satellite, at relatively enormous distances revolving, unlike the nearer ones, in a retrograde direction.

As to the present rings of Saturn, Professor Birkeland's hypothesis considers them to be composed of particles, in the form of dust, from which the nine innermost satellites which are large, which is far away, and the outermost reveals have been formed, retrograde in its motion may have been formed independently of these dusty rings. But it is suggested that the forming of the rings into satellites is a process which may not yet be finished, and that ultimately all the substance of which they consist may condense into satellites, when the nebulous spectacle, which we now behold, of a great planet surrounded by glowing rings, will vanish from the heavens, but Saturn will appear attended by several more near satellites.

Professor Birkeland also makes the singular suggestion that in the process of transformation of the rings into satellites small bodies may at first be formed, the number of which will afterward be diminished by their colliding and coalescing with one another, and thus forming a smaller number of larger bodies. But an astronomer would probably have to live several million years in order to watch that astonishing spectacle of small astronomical bodies crashing together to form larger ones—for the creation of a solar system is not performed with the weightless impalpable with which we see a fifty story buildings.

The same theory is applied to explain the existence of the great ring of planetoids asteroids, or small planets as they are variously called which circulate around the sun between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. These are supposed to have been formed out of rings of electrified particles which have condensed into some 700 small bodies, which for some reason, have not, and may never coalesce into either a single body, or a smaller number of larger ones.

Let us now try to form a mental picture of the process of creation that is suggested by Professor Birkeland's researches, and which may represent the true way in which the "Spirit of God" moved to form the worlds.

Looking into one of Professor Birkeland's vacuum chambers, with its glowing magnetized globe in the centre to represent the sun, we see the latter projecting in the plane of its magnetic equator a broad sheet of electrified corpuscles, which form a phosphorescent band on the glass walls of the chamber where they encounter it. We have then only to imagine these walls removed, the space within them magnified to the dimensions of the solar system, the magnetized globe turned into a blazing sun more than 800,000 miles in diameter, and the rays of projected particles condensing into rings and the shaping themselves into planetary bodies in order to have the whole wonderful scene of the original creation before us.

Let us imagine millions of years to roll swiftly by while we look, and we see the whole marvellous process, as if it had been, by some miracle of the cinematograph, quickened into a flickering motion picture, and caused to pass before us for the entertainment of an idle hour. The worlds shape themselves out of electrified dust cast forth from the sun. At first they are rings, then, presto! they change into globes. In one of them, for those inspection, we recognize our earth. At first it is covered with concealing clouds; then, as the clouds break away, the gleam of a universal ocean shows upon its surface. Upheavals of the surface take place, and dry land appears. Volcanoes spout fire toward the heavens. We draw nearer, we focus our glasses on the scene, and behold life appears upon that newborn globe which has been shaped by gravitative, cohesive forces, out of corpuscles shot from the sun's centres of electric eruption.

The forms of life multiply and advance until at last the light of intelligence bursts upon the earth, and man appears, the master of the planet.

Matter, not only because he has conquered it physically, but more because he has dared to use all his faculties in an effort to discover the ways in which the Omnipotent Master brought it into existence.

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S PURE FOOD DEPARTMENT---

Conducted by H. P. Cassidy

Meat Consumers Being Defrauded by Government Inspection Which Does Not Prevent Dangerous Food from Reaching the Buyer, Official Label Untruthful: Meat That Is Unfit Goes to Retailers

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

"LET the label tell the truth," has an especially pat bearing on the federal meat inspection laws. These laws were primarily intended to protect the packer so he could sell his goods to the foreign trade.

Back in the eighties the European governments kicked on the kinds of meat furnished by the packersof this country. A federal inspection was devised and became a law.

The mystic words "U. S. Inspected and Passed" on the packers' label backed by the approval of the government revived the foreign trade. But what about the meats intended for HOME CONSUMPTION?

The meat inspection act of 1906 was supposed to be a safeguard to the public health. By it, it is forbidden TO EXPORT meat products or any carcasses unless both the animals and their carcasses and products have been FORMALLY CERTIFIED AS FREE FROM DISEASE. NO SUCH CERTIFICATE IS GIVEN FOR HOME CONSUMPTION.

"U. S. Inspected and Passed" is all we get. The average consumer thinks this means the animal from which the meat came was free from disease. The law not being mandatory for meat intended for home consumption allows the Department of Agriculture discretionary powers as to just what "U. S. Inspected and Passed" means.

Cost Is $3,000,000.

Here's the way its worked by the packers while the people pay $3,000,000 a year for the inspection:

The published regulations of the department do not allow this discrimination BUT A SYSTEM OF SECRET ORDERS DOES THE BUSINESS.

These are entitled "Service announcements" which employes are informed are "not intended for the public" and are "cautioned against showing outsiders."

Take sausages. They are wrapped in portions of the intestines or other visceral vessels of animals. In the regulations of 1904 the entire viscera, including the intestines of all tuberculous animals, were condemned, even where the carcass had been passed.

Later the various organs were not condemned unless they contained tuberculous lesions, but the intestines were condemned in carcasses where there was tuberculosis in the abdominal cavity.

Next, the intestines were not necessarily condemned UNLESS THEY THEMSELVES WERE TUBERCULOUS.

A secret order of July 15, 1910, did away with the regulations requiring even the infested portions of intestines to be condemned and allows their use in case of a slight infestation of the intestines with parasitic nodules which are in such a state of development as to be readily removed.

And so on with other diseases. Tape Worm comes from the meat of "measly" cattle or hogs. The regulation orders that no "Measly carcass of cattle or hogs shall be passed for meat food," and that if the infestation is excessive they may not even be rendered into lard or tallow.

A secret order qualifies this and says that beef carcasses are not to be adjudged excessive unless "incidence on various parts of the musculature, exposs on meat of the cut surface two or more cysts within an area the size of the palm of the hand."

Correct Law Is Needed.

In other words, the carcass must be nearly rotten with disease before it needs to be condemned.

Currency legislation may be of great and urgent importance in Congress just at present. But there can be little legislation more urgent than that of a law which shall make meat inspection a protection to the public rather than an aid to the packers securing increased profits.

Here's another definition from the secret orders that has to do with meat inspection. It explains when a tuberculous carcass can be passed and cut up for the public's use.

Localized tuberculosis" is understood to be tuberculosis limited to a single or several parts o. organs of the body without evidence of recent invasion of the numerous bacelli into the systematic circulation."

"In other words if a steer or cow is diseased with a tuberculosis liver or kidney or any other organ, the Department of Agriculture says, "cut that part out and use the rest of the carc."

The regulations order the heads and tongues of lumpy jaw animals condemned. A secret order allows the cutting out of slight and limited lesions of lumpy jaw, and of abscesses overlying bone.

There was a case where a federal inspector in his work of inspecting cattle had to cut out some disgusting ulcers from the tongues of cattle. He sent how results with the superintendent of a packing plant because the superintendent objected to the size of the holes in the tongues. The superintendent evidently thought part of the ulcer might have been left so the hole would not be so noticeable.

Another part of the regulations says that any organ or part of an organ which is the seat of a tumor benign or malignant, or of abscesses or suppurating sores shall be condemned.

But a secret order authorizes the cutting out of the abscess, tumor or sore and passing the remainder of an "otherwise sound and fit organ."

A year later in another secret order the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry relates that some five hundred and eighty cases of livers, bearing the stamp "U. S. Inspected and Passed," had been seized and condemned by port medical officials in England because 20 to 30 per cent of the livers had been mutilated and were therefore held to be diseased.

Then the chief passes the word along in a secret order that hereafter no certificates should be given for livers for export from which portions had been cut.

For People at Home.

Now see the chief wanted to keep these delicacies for home consumption.

We are indebted to Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane for many of the facts we are telling you. But I have met the same conditions over in Philadelphia and prosecuted scores of butchers who got by the federal law, but came in conflict with Pennsylvania food regulations.

Mrs. Crane says: "Knowing how difficult it is to differentiate between benign and malignant tumor in human patholo.y, I would think that by such a ruling consumers would be in danger of eating an organ impregnated with cancer cells and toxins from which merely the visible part of the cancer had been cut out."

It would seem that this is pretty good logic. At any rate we ought to make the Department of Agriculture tell us when we are to run any risk like this, so that we can be forewarned and have a chance to protect our health.

I would like to see the Department of Agriculture compelled by law to reserve its stamp "U. S. Inspected and Passed" for animals which have been found to be free from any of these long list of diseases.

It would be a good idea then to have it classify the diseased animals into second, third and fourth classes, according to the progress of the disease or the size of the holes that had to be cut out on account of the disease. Then the consumer would be at least getting a run for his money, and would know just what kind of meat he was eating.

You remember Dr. Mark W. Richardson, the secretary of the State Board of Health, went on record some months ago with the statement that he believed poor people would have time to eat the diseased meat in time because good meat would soon be above their reach in price.

If Dr. Richardson wants to eat this diseased meat, that's his business. But how much better it would be for him and others like him to allow Congress to make federal meat inspection a real inspection. If laws were passed by Congress which would stop the "Secret Orders" and make the regulations real regulations not afterwards emasculated, for the benefit of the packers, it would seem pretty fair ready to predict that even poor people would not have to eat diseased meat.

What is the use of our public spirited citizens spending their time and money organizing campaigns of education to suppress and eliminate tuberculosis when the Federal government throws the machinations of packers in daily allowing diseased meat to find its way to people's stomachs there to engender disease.

We believe meat is in the same category with eggs or any other food. It is either good to eat or not good to eat. And all the arguments of high priced experts in the packers' employ cannot convince us that diseased meat any more than rotten eggs was ever intended to be used for human food.

To allow it to be eaten is a political outrage. Congress ought to put an effectual stop to it by drastic legislation. Protect the health of the people. The packers can look out for themselves.

MILK—UNCLE SAM'S WARNING AND ADVICE

The department of agriculture has, through its dairy experts, prepared a series of instructions regarding the care of milk in the home. Unless persons who use milk take proper care of it after it leaves the hands of the milkman the campaign of the department for a better milk supply will be largely retarded.

According to the department's dairy reports, "no matter how carefully milk is handled between the farm and the home, or in how pure a state it is delivered at the domestic lea-box, it can quickly become an undesirable food if carelessly handled in the home. Milk left only a short time in the summer heat may become unfit for food. It will quickly become contaminated when exposed to the air or when placed in unclean vessels.

Coolness Essential.

"Though some bacteria are always present, even in the best grades of fresh milk, they are generally harmless, provided their numbers are small and they are not of the disease-breeding type; but milk must be kept cool to prevent the bacteria already in it, and which may get into it by accident, from multiplying to a point where the milk is undesirable.

"Milk should be taken into the house and put in the refrigerator as soon after delivery as possible. The interior of the food compartment should be wiped every day with a clean cloth, and thoroughly scalded as often as once a week. Under no circumstances should the drain pipe of the ice box be connected with a sewer.

The milk should be kept in the original bottle, and the bottle left in the refrigerator until needed. Any unused milk should not be returned to the bottle after having been poured into another vessel. Before the lock of the bottle and the cap should be washed and then carefully wiped with a clean cloth before the cap is removed. Milk should not be left in a refrigerator compartment with onions or other food having a strong odor.

Should a table milk bottle into a sick room, because infectious diseases can be spread through a milk bottle returned to the farm and delivered to some other home. This is a civic duty that every one owes to his neighbors. If there is serious sickness in the home milk bottles should be boiled before being sent out of the house.

"Milk dipped from a can or drawn from the faucet of a can may be a source of danger and should be avoided where it is possible to get bottled milk. The air of city streets and houses is laden with dirt and bacteria, and frequently particles of filth. Even if the milk is clean in the milkman's receptacle, the pouring of it into an open vessel or pitcher for the customer gives an excellent chance for floating disease germs to get into it. In stores where dipped milk is sold, dirty conditions often prevail, and milk is frequently sold in most carelessly clean and even customers at a final drink out of the milk dipper. It is dangerous to give such milk to children and invalids, and it is not a safe food.

Vessel Must Be Covered.

"If bottled milk cannot be obtained try to have the milk delivered to some member of the family and receive it in a scalded covered vessel that has not been exposed to the air of a room or street. Otherwise set a scalded covered dish or bowl or a glass pitcher serving jar with a good top, but no open pail in the case. Avoid an unprotected vessel be used.

"If it is impossible to keep to the milk bottle can be kept cooler than the surrounding air by keeping it out in jar or pail set in running water. Where this is impossible, wrap the bottle in a damp cloth and put it in a current of air. This method will keep the milk a few degrees cooler than if left simply in the air. The use of ice, however, is always preferable."

The experts proudly recommend outside refrigerators or refrigerator, set in the wall with an opening on the outside. It is always possible to provide locks for these refrigerator doors and supply the milkman with a key.

ALBANIA'S FATE PROBLEM THAT WORRIES EUROPE

Archbishop of Scutari Declares It Is Most Delicate Task Confronting the Powers.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

Special Cable to Boston American.

ROME, Aug. 23.—Monsignor James Seregji, the Albanian Archbishop of Scutari, was a recent visitor at the Vatican, where he was received by the Holy Father and Cardinal Del Val, the Papal Secretary of State, to whom he made a full detailed report of existing conditions in the newly born State of Albania.

Later, in a talk with the Boston AMERICAN'S representative, the Archbishop said the world must not entertain gloomy ideas as to the future of Albania, as it will be years before this unhappy country can enjoy the blessings of civilization.

According to the Archbishop, the organization of the new State will be one of the hardest problems with which modern civilization can be confronted. Whether the great Powers will succeed or not in restoring peace to that troubled country and in organizing it in a way that will prevent internal discord depends wholly on the spirit with which they undertake the extremely delicate task.

As Helpless as Children.

"Albania, or rather the territory with in the borders fixed for the new nation by the Ambassadors' Conference in London," Archbishop Seregji said, "can be compared to a group of children with whom their tender mother must deal according to their needs, their age and even to development.

Will the nations most directly interested in the future of Albania set aside their aspirations for economical and political expansion and combine their efforts to augment the welfare of the country?

The Archbishop refused to give his views on the surrender of Scutari to the Montenegrins, saying history would in due time reveal many facts of which the world is still ignorant.

Scutari Mass of Ruins.

The old Scutari," he said, "is now a wilderness of dilapidated buildings and black ruins. The marks of the long siege will be visible for years to come, and some of them are indelible. The cathedral was hit by forty shells from large guns of large calibre.

Today a ragged population of men women and children, impoverished by the ten days of Ottoman rule, roams through the ruins, helpless from months of suffering.

Princess to the Rescue of Poor Shows Gratitude for First Babe

To Provide for Young Mothers of the Poor Classes in Germany.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Princess August-Wilhelm of Prussia has adopted a novel way of showing her gratitude for the birth of her first child after four years of marriage. She is starting an organization, the object of which is to provide for young mothers and infants of the poorer classes.

Every well-to-do young mother who has just been blessed with an infant is expected to help. Instead, however, of appealing to the rich mothers, the Princess' organization proposes to appeal to their babies. At all houses where the stork has arrived, a letter will be delivered bearing, "Dear Little One." The letter will congratulate the "Dear Little One" on its good fortune in being born among the rich, and proceed

"There are thousands of others of thy age and size who have not thy advantages," and so on.

The end will be an appeal for money.

An "All-British" Trousseau for Duchess of Fife

England to Provide Silks, Ireland Linen, and Scotland Tweeds.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The Duchess of Fife is to have an "All British" trousseau for her marriage to Prince Arthur of Connaught. Orders have already been sent out England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales are all receiving their share. England is to provide the silks and other costly textiles, as well as gowns and footwear. Ireland the linen and lace, while Scotland and Wales will supply tweeds and woollens and corsets.

The young Duchess will have eight bridesmaids. Four will be princesses—Princess Maud, her sister, Princess Marie, Princess Patricia of Connaught and Princess Mary of Teck. Prince John and Prince Olaf of Norway will carry the bridal train.

All the royalties in England will be present at the ceremony. By particular request of the Duke of Connaught one or two representatives of the Canadian Dominion, of which he is the Governor-General, will be included in the invitations.

'Jaeen's Necklace' for Miss Sackville-West

Jewels About Which Dumas Wrote His Novel to Be Here Some Day.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Miss "Vera" Sackville-West will one day inherit not only pictures, but jewels of great interest. Among these is a Greek-patterned diamond tiara, famous as having formed part of the diamond necklace that caused the romance between Marie Antoinette and Cardinal Rohan, about which Dumas wrote his great novel, "The Queen's Necklace."

The Sackvilles also have a fine pearl and diamond necklace with a pendant, in the centre of which is a huge diamond known as the "Dorset." Lady Sackville wore this stone on a velvet neckband when her portrait was painted by Carolus Duran.

At St. Petersburg in Tramp Around World

J. F. Mickalec Walked There from Vladivostok, He Declares.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Promenaders on the Nevsky Prospect are accustomed to queer figures from the Caucasus and Mongolia, but they were startled the other day by a man clothed from head to foot in a red garment, suggesting a stage Mephistofeles.

His only overgarment was the Stars and Stripes wrapped around him. Written in Russian around the cape were the words, "Around the world."

He went to the American Consulate to have his arrival certified, and stated that he had left New York January 16, 1911, to encircle the world on foot, except where traveling by ship was absolutely necessary.

If he gets back in this way to the United States any time in 1914 he says he will win $50,000. His name is Joseph Frank Mickiec, and he has already tramped from Vladivostok to St. Petersburg, bringing letters from the Japanese government to the Japanese Ambassador here.

His pronunciation of the American language suggests that he may be a Pole.

Girl Athletes Outdo English Brothers

Evolution Might Lead to Feminine Olympics.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The English girl, like her American sister, is rapidly becoming an expert athlete while interest for sports is dwindling among our young men. If this evolution continues to go on, England may soon have to send our girl teams to maintain the honor of the nation at the Olympic games.

The view taken here of the modern girl athlete is rather grave. While many see in her a menace to the country and the doom of all womanly virtues, others are enthusiastic about her and say in her the ideal mother of a generation that will surpass any ever seen in England. A number of prominent people asked to express their opinion agree that athletic girls who do not exaggerate their sport, are apt to prove ideal mothers of a generation of exceptionally healthy children.

British Society Goes in for Dog Raising

W. C. Codman, Sharing in Fad Abroad, to Return for Newport Show.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The constant buying and selling of valuable dogs which goes on between England and America is causing many society women to take up breeding seriously, but how long the craze will last it is difficult to tell. Mrs. W. H. Herbert of Kensington, one of the greatest experts on Pekingese dogs in this country, will go out to New York later to judge the Pekingese Club's show there at the Plaza Hotel.

William C. Codman of Providence, R. I., is now in London paying visits to all the dog shows, large and small. He will return to America in time for the Rhode Island Kennel Club show, which is held at the Newport Casino.

Decree Nisi Party Latest in England

LONDON, August 23.—Quite a novel idea in the way of entertainments is due to the initiative of Mrs. Robert Ellis, who has just obtained a decree nisi following an unpleasant contention of conjugal rights. Mrs. Ellis at once sent out invitations for a decree nisi tea party. All the guests received presents, consisting of a jack-in-the-box, and when the spring was released a little figure jumped up labeled "King's Proctor."

Mrs. Ellis is going to resume her maiden name, Miss Hester Stanhope, she is a daughter of Hon. Henry Stanhope and a direct descendant of the famous Lady Hester Stanhope, who led a wild life in the East.

Want No Yankee Baby Duke GermansProtestAmericanizing

THE HEREDITARY GRAND DUKE FRIEDRICH FRANZ

Rulers of Mecklenburg-Schwerin Admirers of the Land of Uncle Sam.

Anyone who runs across a newspaper from Germany these days and who knows enough German to read it, is apt to see an article protesting against the Americanising of His Infantile Highness, the hereditary Grand Duke Friedrich-Franz of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

If I H. the H. G. D., etc., is a fine, three-year-old kid who is the pride of his fond parents and of the loyal Mecklenburger-Schwerinners.

But what makes the German newspaper writers so peevish is the influence of Uncle Sam on the boy's life and upbringing.

In the first place the reigning Grand Duke and Grand Duchess speak English and are said to send to New York for much of their clothing, especially boots and shoes.

That's bad enough, in German eyes. But here is the way the baby, the H. G. D., being Yankeefied.

He will be taught English.

He has two American nurses.

He is to have a tutor later, an American.

His latest toy is an enormous ball, made in America.

This American ball is horribly suggestive to the German mind of an incomprehensible and crazy game called "Baseballen" in America. The Germans would rather see him playing with a toy sausage.

Dispatches from Berlin relate that the German writers are expressing a good deal of irritation over the way the Grand Duke is bringing up his heir. The agitators evidently hope to stir up such criticism that the Grand Duke will be forced to take notice of it.

HONOR FOR PRINCE ARTHUR.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—King George, it is said, will confer a royal dukedom upon Prince Arthur of Connaught on the occasion of his marriage, but has not yet decided on the exact title. It is probable, however, that Prince Arthur, who is a grandson of Queen Victoria, will be made a Duke of Kent, a title used by Queen Victoria's father, but which has not been used since 1820.

Czar Marches as a Soldier 7 Miles

Carries Regular Equipment and "Hikes" Over Hill and Dale.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Under the title "A Crowned Private," interesting particulars are just published here relating to the march made by the Emperor Nicholas as a fully-accoutred private in campaigning outfit, in order to gain personal experience of the toils and duties of the Russian common soldier.

The Czar carried the usual rolled overcoat, pouches with 120 rounds of ammunition, trenching spade, ration bag, etc., altogether nearly three-quarters of a hundredweight, exclusive of the weight of the rifle.

His Majesty marched up hill and down dale for seven miles, giving the saints to whom he entered himself, according to the regulations, on the regimental roll as Private Nicholas Roman of merited, of the Orthodox faith, coming from Tsarkoe Selo."

Spanish King Very Popular in England

LONDON, Aug. 23.—The recent visit of the King and Queen of Spain to England again demonstrates how exceedingly popular Alfonso is in London Whichever he went he was the cynosure of attention and there was general rejoicing among the nobility that he would add his brilliant presence to the regatta at Cowes. But the rejoicing was short lived.

Alfonso received word from some of his ministers that his presence was required at Madrid at once on account of new and formidable developments in the ranks of the revolutionists. With great regret therefore the youthful King was obliged to hasten to his capital, leaving the Queen in England to complete her visit with her mother.

VIOLET AND WHITE ATTAIN SUDDEN VOGUE IN LONDON

Fashion Born at French Watering Places Is Seized Eagerly by English Brides.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Some ravishing costumes in violet and white have been seen at the smart French watering places, and London copied them almost the next day, with the result that brideselect are choosing this color combination for some of their trousseau gowns.

Miss Gloucesta, one of the great English heiresses, who is marrying Major Parsons next month, is having a morning gown made for casino use, and with it a very original hat will be worn.

To take the violet velvet hat first, it is copied from the First Empire and bears some resemblance to a jockey's cap, but the up-to-date milliner has broadened the crown and brim and turned back the latter in order to show a circular plaiting of violet tulle.

A band and embroidered buckle in a similar velvet surround the waist, and shoes of the same material are worn over violet silk stockings.

The dress is in white linen, with the lower part of the jacket worked in raised white cotton. Large motifs of Irish point, outlined with narrow gold, are encrusted in square places starting from each shoulder and an insertion of Valenciennes heads the wide hem of the skirt beneath a double row of motifs—of pearl buttons. A scarf in violet chiffon completes this pretty dress.

There is a craze at all the fashionable resorts for oral white felt hats. These are very simple and easily packed. The hats can be made extremely attractive with a trimming of black velvet ribbon, tied plainly around, with white or silver tassels, but some smart women have gone considerably further, and now adorn these simple hats with red, blue or green necklaces in uncut stones.

Others, very young ones, trim the hats with baby ribbon or garlands of the tiniest flowers.

PLAN OPERA IN CANADA TO RIVAL METROPOLITAN

Director Max Rabinoff to Use Much Undiscovered Talent, Price Will Be $3.

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Is Canada to become the operatic centre of America?

According to Max Rabinoff the new director of the National Opera Company of Canada, who has just completed a tour through nearly all of the European countries in search of singers, New York, Boston Philadelphia and Chicago will have a formida le competitor for operatic glory in Montreal.

If he succeeds in all the projects he has in mind, Montreal will become the distributing point for grand opera in America.

"There is a fabulous idea," said Mr Rabinoff this week, "that grand opera can be nothing else than an entrancing delight. We intend to make grand opera a truly national institution.

When I say grand opera, I mean an organization which counts in its ranks singers of the highest order, which presents works in a manner that leaves little room for criticism and takes a place second to no other organization.

Whether I have succeeded in discovering new Carusos and Melbas or not, I can state that we shall have no failures among our singers.

Our plans enable us to give grand opera on a $3 scale; but this does not mean opera of an inferior grade. There is so much undiscovered talent that it would be an absolute impossibility for any combination of men to secure a complete monopoly of it.

"The opera company of which I am the head will not confine its operations to Canada. We intend to make an American tour, but not in the spirit of competition."

Many Go to Munich for Wagner Festival

Great Gatherings of Americans Nightly at Beautiful Theatre There.

MUNICH, Aug. 23.—There has been a great influx of Americans for the Wagner festival season. Among the artists are Mme. Charles Cable, Olive Fremstadt, Edith Walker, Marcella Craft and Maude Fay.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch and Mrs. Andrew Thomson, of New York, will be here the entire season. Mr and Mrs Joan Nelsen Armstrong are passing several weeks here. Mrs. Astor and the Misses Mary and Hope Avery are here for a month.

Mr. and Mrs John B. Sturtevant of New York, have taken apartments for several weeks. Other visitors are Rear Admiral and Mrs. Moore of Washington; the Rev. I. J. Perits of Syracuse; O. O. Wilson and family; Mrs. J. K. Hoover of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Holley, Mrs. J. and Miss Gilder, Mr. and Mrs. Malvin White of New York; Mrs. Virginia Well of San Francisco; Mrs. E. C. Barnes of Los Angeles and Dorothy Linn and Beatrice Butler of Chicago.

Anklet Stockings Are Latest Fashion Freak

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Ankle bracelet stockings are the newest fashion freaks for London society women.

They are in imitation of the jewelled bands and golden anklets so popular in a certain section of Parisian society. The new dainties are of black silk with a wide band, embroidered in blue, green, yellow or purple silk, encircling the ankle.

The advent of the slashed skirt is responsible for the changes in hosiery. The shorter the skirt the brighter the stocking.

One enterprising dealer has brought over from Paris dainty hosiery with jewels slashed around the ankle, the jewels and color being plainly seen through the thin silken mesh. As much as $200 is asked for a pair. These are made of fine gold thread and real lace. Chantilly and Mechlin being the popular fabrics.

France Now Plans an Aerial Militia

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Not satisfied with increasing the size of the French army on a peace footing of $20,000 men, the war department is now planning to provide France with the first aerial militia in the world. The kernel of this already exists in the force of 200 civilian aviators who have been formed into a permanent military organization which in case of war will be the nucleus of the aerial fleet of the Minister of War.

The scheme of aerial militia was originally launched by M. Alfred le Blanc, and has now been definitely approved by the government. A committee is now in process to organize all the aviation pilots into a body ready to be called at any time and when called upon by the military authorities.

Bachelor Tax Nearly Breaks Little Reuss

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Because he put a special tax on all bachelors, Prince one of those little German principalities which are apt to stick to your soles in rainy weather, the Minister of Finance of that miniature state is in trouble.

The tax has not brought the expected revenue, nor has it driven any confirmed bachelors into the state of matrimony, but the wealthiest bachelor in the country, who had announced a large gift to the public, has changed his mind and a number of bachelors have moved into the surrounding states causing a serious financial loss to Reuss.

Duchess of Fife to Have $50,000 Yearly

Big Allowance Also from Mother on Wedding to Prince Arthur.

LONDON, Aug. 23. The reports of the young Duchess of Fife's wealth have been greatly exaggerated. On her marriage to Prince Arthur of Connaught the Duchess will have an income of $50,000 a year. This, of course, will be supplemented by a big allowance from her mother, the Princess, Royal. On the death of the latter the Duchess of Fife will come into an income of $350,000 a year, while her younger sister will enjoy an income of half that amount.

It is highly improbable that Queen Alexandra will attend the Connaught-Fife wedding, but she will certainly be at Sandringham on November 9, the anniversary of the late King Edward's birthday.

Germany Alarmed at Empress' Health

Await Her Return from Hamburg, Where She Has Taken Cure.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Berlin is anxiously awaiting the return of the Empress, concerning whose health alarming rumors have been circulating for several months, though it is officially announced that she is as well as ever. Whatever the truth may be, it is certain that she has been in delicate health for nearly a year, and the Crown Princess has during that time been performing a great many of her social duties.

When the Kaiser left for Norway the Empress went to Homburg to take the cure and was expected to have come back to this city to welcome her husband on his return. Instead of that, it was announced that she was declining so much benefit from the cure that she had been advised to extend it for another three weeks, and the Kaiser went to join here there a few days after his return from Norway.

Label on Perfumes Vexes Queen Mary

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Ever since the close of the London season Queen Mary has been vexed. Princess Christian, aunt of King George, who is living in one of the gift houses at Windsor Park, has been making and selling perfume at Combehind, the name of her house. This, the Queen would perhaps have overlooked but the royal lady puts the Cumberland labels on the bottles to the annoyance of the Queen.

The latter was asked to discontinue making the perfume for the market, but Princess Christian stoutly refused to comply with the command, asserting that she has a perfect right to make perfume if she likes.

MRS. CRAIG BIDDLE POSES FOR PICTURESQUE PORTRAIT

One Artist Designs Costume for Picking Shells by Seashore; Another Paints Her.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—If Mrs Craig Biddle of Philadelphia does not have the most picturesque portrait in next year's salon it will not be the fault of her athletic husband. She is being painted at Trouville, gathering shells by the shore.

A special seaside costume has been designed for her, even to the most minute details.

Not merely the colors of dress and hat and shoes and sunsuade and pet dog de luxe have been taken into consideration, but the artist who designed her costume took into account the varying moods of the sky above and of the sparkling sea. All this was done by way of preparation and under the direction of Mr. Biddle.

She has had one artist for the preparation, or more ep scope, and another for the portrait. Count Charles de Chabannes de Polin, member of the jury of the Society of French Artists, and painter of the beautiful portrait of Her Majesty the Dowager Queen of Greece, is the artist who is painting Mrs. Biddle by the sea.

During his recent visit to Auteuil, the Count painted half a dozen portraits of beautiful women.

Hunt Sunken Wealth with Divining Rods

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Divining rods are the latest magical devices being used in a search for lost treasure. Two Parisians, M. de Chathelmeau and M. D'Ercelle, have adopted this course in a hunt for treasure reputed to be worth eight hundred thousand dollars.

They are trying to locate a strong box crammed with diamonds and gold ingots which has been lying since 1820 off the French coast between Rochelle and Rochefort. The Comte de St. Basil, a noble of La Vendée, who fled during the great Revolution to America, was returning to his native land with an immense fortune after thirty years' exile and toil. Disembarking him and the ship with the treasure was wrecked.

The divining rod is now marching up and down the French coast from Chasseron to Brest. The treasure hunters are still waiting for a sign.

How Premier Asquith Eludes Suffragettes

Takes House in Far North for Vacation, Guarded by Detectives.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Premier Asquith is not a man to be easily frightened, but he is very tired and desires above all things to be free from Suffragette outrages. For this reason he has taken a house for his vacation on a rather bleak spot in the remote North of Scotland, near the sea, and some golf links.

There are gates leading to the golf links and gates leading to the sea, and these will be guarded by detectives so that the chance of the Premier's holiday being spoiled is remote.

Winston Churchill and Lloyd George have three plain clothes men each in constant attendance, and Mr. McKenna, the Home Secretary, has two.

Russian "Musical Bomb" Coming to Boston

Grand Opera Contralto Who Is Good Looking

Wonderful Performance Expected of Russian Singer Secured by Henry Russell.

LYDIA RIENS KAIA, NEW CONTRALTO FOR BOSTON

By FREDERICK JOHNS.
The Sunday American's Dramatic Critic.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—One of the most interesting things that is going to happen in Boston this season is Russkaia, Russkaia is not a new brand of vodka or a cousin of even a Russian dancer. She is a Russian contralto. She has been engaged to sing in Boston opera next fall and the name of her name is Lydia

Lydia Russkaia is reported to be [illegible] in Boston, either that of a [illegible] anyway she is going to [illegible] I have been assured [illegible] musical people at least one [illegible] heard her sing. I can [illegible] you are to you of this, that she is a great young contralto. Good looking [illegible] are as rare as nasty [illegible] even the good looking ones are [illegible]

Russkaia is not exactly this, but she is thin for a contralto, and she has a jolly good tempered face as you will see by her picture. During my interview with Henry Russell, which occurred while he was spending ten minutes in one spot, he said, "Go and see Russkaia, and remember she is a Russian."

Puzzling Advice.

I thought [illegible] might be [illegible] and [illegible] drinking vodka out of a [illegible] taking Russian or [illegible] [illegible] Paris [illegible]

Madame Russkaia was [illegible] with the Princess Thomas upon the Boulevard Prince, which as every one knows, is [illegible] of the [illegible] Paris which is named after a horse that didn't win the Grand Prix last year, but was expected to.

I was [illegible] that I would be received at the tea hour and I arrived in a taxicab fifteen cents a mile is all the cost in Paris at 8 p.m.

The Russkaias received me very pleasantly and I seemed she had omitted to [illegible] on the corner of whatever it is her [illegible] sent out considered [illegible] for Russkaia fingers and she introduced me to Madame Kiaia, who was located on the north end of a sofa seating at me out of large, amber orbs. The singer motioned to me to take my corner at the other end of the sofa and the Baroness, instead of remaining to reference, escaped herself and departed. I really shouldn't have excused her but I couldn't think of anything to say, and there I was alone with the contralto whom I was told to remember was Russkaia.

I [illegible] her. She looked at me. I laughed. She did not. I made a desperate effort.

"Mad week. I regretted no speaks in Russkaia."

A smile nodded at one corner of her mouth.

"Does perhaps you talk English. She said just like that.

"Did I speak English. You ought to have heard me.

"It's funny how I forgot all my Russian," I explained.

Only Half a Russian.

"Not at all. I don't remember it very well myself," said the contralto in a rich deep voice. "You see I am only half Russian. The other half is French and I have lived in Paris most of my life."

"But Russell said to remember you were Russian!"

"Oh, yes, he told me that too. He likes to have Russian artists in his company. He has had great success with Russians."

Light dawned upon me. Then there was nothing in that vodka idea I remarked.

"Vodka, what do you mean by the drink? I can offer you whiskey."

Now who ever heard of a Russian drinking whiskey.

When you come to Boston you must bring some vodka with you," I said severely. "Otherwise your authenticity as a Russian contralto might be disputed."

"Very well, said Madame Lydia producing a [illegible] and [illegible] it is a pretty nice little book. "I shall not forget."

"Where have you been singing?"

Now that is a very annoying question to ask young artists because they have to tell you about [illegible] opera houses and inform you that although the town is small [illegible] seem to [illegible] wonderful. Lydia mentioned several French and Italian and Russian towns familiarly by name. I don't remember them, especially Lee Russian ones.

"You haven't sung in Paris."

I am not rich," she declared, looking me square in the eye. "Neither have I an influential gentleman friend to arrange things for me. Therefore I have not sung in Paris."

"That sounds like an excuse, but as a matter of fact she is pretty nearly right. If you doubt it hear opera in Paris. There must be some explanation for most of the singers at the opera and the Comique. They can't exactly sing.

"You must be famous before you can force your way into Paris. You must be sung to on your merits. You must have sung in America," said Miss Russkaia.

Now, what do you think of that? Here is the wail of the American singers repeated. Our little singers are compelled to Europe to get into our opera houses, while the European girls are not considered important until they have sung in America.

Truly Lydia was a very intelligent young person. I asked her what she expects to sing in Boston. Does she sing Carmen, Aida, Amneris, Navarrais and Martha in English. Will she sing them? Maybe. She looks like a real contralto.

Introduces American.

The baroness now returned, bringing with her a young American boy who [illegible] and [illegible] Mackey. [illegible] Mackey had been appointed leader of a Symphony orchestra in a [illegible] resort and he was looking [illegible] where he could buy a false beard, [illegible] he couldn't grow one, and he would [illegible] thirty French musicians awaiting [illegible] ready to foment his extreme [illegible] he got on the job.

"Tell them you are twenty-five, but going for your age," suggested Lydia.

"Never to [illegible] anybody was a great [illegible] I suggested.

"I'll win out somehow," said the young [illegible] magician, and let's take off our [illegible] [illegible] I think we will.

May Irwin a Player as Well as a Ball Fan

Actress Delights in Game of "Scrub" at Her Island Home on St. Lawrence.

One phase of May Irwin's private life of which little is known, is quite interesting. The actress is a good ball player and an ardent lover of the national pastime. Ball games, of course, is only one of the many sports that the indulges in during the Summer season at her home on the St. Lawrence River. Miss Irwin has proven herself an excellent sharpshooter as well as an adept at the rod. Her Summer home is one of the most beautiful among the Thousand Islands and her private flotilla consists of a 40-foot launch, several small motor boats, a substantial freight boat and numerous small fishing craft.

When the comedienne has had all the fun she wants in the kitchen for her ability as a culinary artist is well known, she usually attends a game of baseball. From the beginning of the contest her attitude would convey the impression that [illegible] championship depended upon the outcome of the game.

Coming Events.

"The Ghost Breaker" is the unique and unusual title of a new play that will be the opening attraction at the Park Theatre on Labor Day, with H. B. Warner in the stellar role.

Among the attractions booked for appearance at B. F. Keith's Theatre this fall are May Wirth, the world's great [illegible] rider, and the great Wirth family of [illegible] equestrians, Jesse L. Lasky's "Three Beautiful Types of Feminine Charm," and Clifton Crawford, the famous star of "Three Twins" and "My Best Girl."

"Hanky Panky" will return for a two weeks' stay at the Boston Theatre, beginning Monday, September 15. A popular scale of prices is planned.

"The Courtin'" will have its first presentation on any stage at the Boston Theatre on September 15. George Lowell Tracy has written a score well in keeping with the rural atmosphere of the piece.

The first presentation in this country of "Les Miserables," by motion pictures, will take place in this city at the Tremont Temple on Labor Day night.

"Her Little Highness" is announced as the attraction to come to the Tremont Theatre September 8.

Originals in Hanky Panky Are Coming

All-Star Aggregation Has a Record of Which Few Can Boast.

The fifty-ninth season of the Boston Theatre will begin on Monday, September 1, when Low Field's all-star, Hanky Panky Company will commence a limited engagement with a special Labor Day Matinee.

This occasion will serve as a dual celebration, for Hanky Panky will start its one-hundredth consecutive week and all its roster still contains the names of all the original people in their original roles. It is a record of which few, if any, musical comedies can boast.

The appearance of such stars as Max Rogers, Bobby North, Harry Cooper, Hugh Cameron, Clay Smith, Charlotte Nelson, Myrtle Gilbert, Flora May, Victoria Evans and that most virtuous of all [illegible] Willie Montgomery and Florence Moore, is sure to be accompanied by a [illegible] response.

The Boston Theatre management would especially call their patrons' attention to the fact that this is the same identical cast of stars who have on two previous occasions been seen in this city, at prices far in excess of the rates that has become so popular at this historic playhouse and they want their patrons to know that they will endeavor at all times to continue playing all the strictly high-class attractions on tour, at this scale of prices.

Cape Eager for Barnstable Fair

Big Show Opens Tuesday and Continues for Three Days.

BARNSTABLE, Aug. 23.—The great annual Barnstable Fair opens here Tuesday.

The fair grounds are already bustling with preparations. The stables are all [illegible] up and the exhibit buildings are crowded. Hawkers and vendors and "side shows" are pitching their booths.

The fair lasts three days ending Thursday night. The horse racing is the feature—drawing horses from Hockanum and Marshfield. Baseball games are scheduled with balloon ascensions and vaudeville.

IS THE REAL BACK BAY VANISHING?

Boston's "400" Fast Leaving Beacon Hill; 24 Beacon Street Homes Are For Sale.

AUTOMOBILE CHIEF CAUSE

Who wants to buy a house on Beacon street?

They are for sale—lots of them. Note these:

Nos. 40, 88, 111, 143, 170, 175, 183, 199, 200, 224, 230, 247, 259, 345, 356, 380, 388, 385, 344, 380, 397, 411, 435, and 474.

If the list of lamentable numbers that once formed a large part of Boston's "Four Hundred," but are now vacant with lonesome "For Sale" signs strung in the shuttered windows goes on increasing, as one of the "Old Bed dents" remarked yesterday, "There will be no Back Bay pretty soon."

From Charles street to Massachusetts avenue on Beacon, twenty-three houses wear the "for sale" sign and six more are to let—which is a record for Beacon street.

Over the [illegible] exodus, while not so great, is growing, and several fashionable residences appeared wearing the market sign and seven other shuttered mansions were "To Let."

Many of Folorn Aspect.

Moreover, many of the Beacon street houses which have not been listed for disposal, are shuttered the year round, and during the height of the [illegible] season these dwellings are conspicuous by their forlorn aspect.

"The result is be the [illegible] one of the causes for the Back Bay [illegible] exodus of the aristocracy," [illegible] agent in Boston yesterday.

"People who are wealthy aren't going to live in the [illegible] row houses on a [illegible] street—when it is always so convenient with an automobile to have a residence out where gardens and extensive grounds can be had [illegible] and where the air is pure and [illegible] can come and go at railway speed in [illegible] vehicles luxurious, too, so why should [illegible] live [illegible] one of a series of [illegible] Beacon street?

"The increasing travel of the [illegible] express trains through [illegible] and [illegible] is also given for the exodus.

Business Encroachment.

The encroachments of business long since disrupted the social status of Beacon street from the State House to Charles street, and a florist shop or two have secured location even beyond Charles street.

At No. [illegible] just beyond [illegible] the Edwin Utley book concern holds possession of the once famous Herbe mansion, the towering brown stone residence of the millionaire Bowse family of which [illegible] Archer Bowse was a member and also Miss Ida [illegible] Bowse, [illegible] and [illegible] life [illegible] romance.

Next to the [illegible] structure to the [illegible] abode, which was [illegible] the residence and home of Henry Lee, Esq., now given over to offices and a fashionable boot shop and tobacconist store. The Little, Brown & Book Company and the Boston Park Commission now are housed in the two dwellings at the up hill corner of Joy street, while a little further down at No. 40 a "Shoe Polish" sign hangs in one of the old Violet with dow-paned mansions which was among the first to give way to the inroads of business.

Still down the hill at No. 53 another book publishing concern has taken possession.

List of Homes For Sale

Following is a partial list of residents of Beacon street whose late place of residence is now on the market:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, No. 111 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] No. 141 Beacon; Dr. Arthur T. and Mrs. William Chamberlain, No. 199 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harnbower, No. 170 Beacon; Mrs. James T. Eldridge, No. 199 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Scudder, No. 200 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Stevens, No. [illegible] Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Sterling W. [illegible] No. [illegible] Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Thatcher, No. 288 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] No. [illegible] Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Frost, No. 33 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] No. 305 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Seluman, No. 397 Beacon; Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Barron, No. 474 Beacon; Dr. and Mrs. Francis P. Emerson, No. 484 Beacon.

Women Deaconesses at Mattapoisett

Part of Duty to Stop Gossip in Vestry of Church.

MATTAPOISETT, Aug. 23.—Two women members of the Congregational Church in this town have been appointed deacons in that church. They will adjust all personal troubles and do as much as possible to stop gossip in the vestry of the church.

This is said to be the first time in New England that women have been appointed as deaconesses for this purpose.

THE GREENROOM

A new and prospective Boston favorite is about to come to town this week. In fact, she has already come to town, and she is rehearsing the leading role of Lady Gay Spanker in "London Assurance" at the Castle Square, preparatory to the opening of that house next Friday evening. Her name is Doris Oliver, and she says that she "hesitated a little when she first imagined to her self for her debut at the Castle Square a role that has been acted during the past fifty years by many famous actresses. But I said right away that I began to rehearsals with fear and trembling," she said, "but the feeling was something similar to that I had when I began to study under Mr. Craig's helpful direction. I was reassured, however, and found that it was foolish of me to be afraid of the character. Lady Gay is just like many other heroines, in many respects. She is deliciously human. She is witty and bright, at both her tongue and best of all she strikes me as a very real woman, and very up to date in spite of the long history of the play in which she appears. And so I am just going to play her to the best of my ability, and trust to the good fortune that has followed me in my career on the stage."

Offerings at the Playhouses of Boston

Clever Players on the List This Week

BEHIND FOOTLIGHTS OF BOSTON.

Lexington Park.

A real [illegible] resort appeals to the lover of nature as Lexington Park. With [illegible] acres of wood land laid out in beautiful walks and trails and with its extensive zoological garden and other attractions, Lexington Park is one of the most popular recreation spots in Greater Boston.

Norumbega Park.

In the open air theatre at Norumbega Park [illegible] a real concert has been arranged with new motion pictures. Although the management at Norumbega's theatre very rarely presents any return engagements, "The Daisy Quakeress" will be presented by popular [illegible] next week.

Paragon Park.

The [illegible] week at Nantasket Beach and Paragon Park and as enticing as have been the entertainment offerings of Manager Lodge all the season he has made heavier expenditures than ever before for this big celebration week at Nantasket. He will have a brilliant fireworks display every night the coming week, beginning with the grand Italian Illumination tonight. A strong program of free circus acts will be seen every afternoon and evening on the Lagoon, including the Aerial La Rues in some astounding stunts, and the Todescos, in a unique bicycle act. In the Palm Garden the concert show every evening from 8 to 8:30 and from 9 to 11 o'clock will be the most attractive yet offered there.

Nantasket Carnival.

The week of August 25 a Summer carnival will be held at Nantasket Beach. It is going to be a real Mardi Gras of the Summer type. Nothing will be lacking, everything will be there, the noisy bells, the long strings of serpentine paper and tons of confetti. Special programs have been arranged for every day, which will include parachute drops, balloon ascensions, circus acts and free band concerts.

All these events will be free and will take place on the south beach at the Nantasket beach. The first day will be motorcycle day, when a baby parade will be the feature. Another of the week's features will be the firemen's muster, which will include hand hoses from the surrounding towns.

Bass Point and Nahant

The commodious steamers of the Bass Point and Nahant line, Massachusetts and Gen. Lincoln, are carrying their full capacity of passengers on nearly all their trips. In fact, on Saturdays and Sundays extra trips have to be made in order to handle the traffic. Special attractions will be offered at Bass Point today, which will include concerts by Harvey's Lynn Cadet Band.

Majestic Theatre.

At the Majestic Theatre tomorrow evening what happened to Mary will enter upon its second week of prosperity. "Mary" has proved an interesting play of pretty sentiment, whose lively story of many exciting incidents, laughter and tears, comes as a popular contrast to morbid dramatic offerings.

With its quaint characters and dowdy-ish era atmosphere, Mary is a sure cure for the blues or any other form of pessimism. Much of the real charm of entertainment rests with Ollive Wood has won her happy way of interpreting the waif Mary—and a more lovable, delightful character one could not wish for.

Waldron's Casino.

The happy comedian of burlesque, Billy W. Watson, and his "Girls From Happyland," will do the entertaining at the Casino this week. While Watson has always been a strong card, he will undoubtedly break all his former records with this season's offering. The new attraction gives the comedian endless opportunities to display his unique style of entertaining. He has surrounded himself with an excellent support and was careful in the selection of the chorus, which is considered one of the strong features of the show.

Orpheum Theatre.

Tomorrow's show at the Orpheum Theatre will be headed by Roland West's Players in a comedy farce entitled "Everybody's Doing It." Others on the bill will be Billy K. Wells, a Hebrew comedian, in songs and stories; the Miller Bros., European gymnasts; Rose Miller, who styles herself as the double-voiced singer, and Ahlrich and Walsh.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be a boy feast at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week, presented by Violet Mascotte and her "Forty Merry Maids."

Howard Athenaeum.

Sam Lanford, the Boston bass-weight, Jack Reid, the Australian lightweight; Joe Woodman and Jack Beasen will appear in an athletic sketch, entitled "The Training Camp," at the Howard this week. The burlesque feature will be furnished by Eva Mull and her "Beauty Burlesquers."

Grand Opera House.

"The Rector Girls" of the Progressive circuit will be at the Grand Opera House this week. Lydia Jewett, Lee Stevens, Helen Jessie Moore and Stella Gilmore will be seen in the lineup.

Provincetown Trips.

Whether one takes the 100-mile deep sea trip to Provincetown and return on the wireless equipped, [illegible] steamship, Dorothy Bradford, for the comprehensive sight seeing tour of Boston harbor and memories of a hot day, the day spent on this trip is well worth while and will long to be remembered.

Trips on Water and Amusement Parks Are Attracting Thousands.

Shubert Theatre.

Sam Bernard and his [illegible] comedy company in "All for the Ladies" will come to the Shubert Theatre tomorrow night for a limited engagement. Much has been heard of the success of this play from New York, where it ran for an entire season at the Lyric Theatre and all interest will be centred in its visit here. Those who have seen the [illegible] claim that Bernard has a role which surpasses in its humorous possibilities that of his memorable "Higgins."

The story of "All for the Ladies" deals with the troubles encountered by one Leo von Rauhenheim (Sam Bernard) when he engages himself to a fashionable tailoring establishment of Paris as its head fitter. The play is interspersed with many musical numbers.

Colonial Theatre.

The Colonial will begin its thirteenth season next Saturday with a new musical comedy presented by Klaw & Erlanger, entitled "The Merry Martyr." The work is by Ellis Macdonough [illegible] is a new Viennese composer, Max [illegible] fed. "The Merry Martyr" is founded upon the successful German comedy, "Narrenlaus" ("The Fools' Dance"), by Leo Birnecke, and the chorus effects devised by the able hand of Julian Mitchell. Marilyn Arbuckle—his debut in musical comedy. Alice Dovey, Forrest Winslow, [illegible] Jessie Bonstelle, Henry Hunt, [illegible] Goldsworthy, Denman Maley, Robinson Newbold, Hallen Mvak [illegible] Moore and Henry F. Sheldon will be found in the cast.

The scene of the story is located in a mythical province in the south of Spain, which, of course, affords [illegible] for much in scenic and costume adornment.

Castle Square Theatre.

Next Friday night there was a opera at the Castle Square. It is the beginning of John Craig's sixth year as actor-manager of the [illegible] and it will start off auspiciously, with every promise of continuing the [illegible] success in the front rank of Boston's theatres. Craig, in his first year, Mr. Craig has chosen "London Assurance," one of the brightest of old time comedies. For years it has been a favorite with playgoers, and written by Dion Boucicault, it is one that expert actor-playwright at his best. The three leading roles of Charles Courtly, Dazzle and Lady Gay Spanker will be taken respectively by Mr. Craig, William F. Carleton and Miss Craig's new leading woman, Doree Olson.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Victor Moore, the star of George M. Cohan's "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," "The Talk of New York," "The Happiest Night of His Life" and numerous other musical comedies will make his first Boston vaudeville appearance in years at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week, assisted by Emma Littlefield and company in a revival of the [illegible] sensation, "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods." The comedy features will be surrounded by a bill, practically every act of which is new to Boston audiences. Ben Deely and his company will present "The New Bell Boy," while a European novelty is promised by the Three Bartos, an acrobatic act. Other features will be Goldrick, Moore & Klaiss in "Crumbing;" Bessie Wynn & Co. in a new comedy; Doc O'Neil, the merry wag; Ina Eleanor Hall, the violin virtuoso; Rosee's Aerial Dogs in a canine offering, and Billy and Edith Adams.

Gaiety Theatre.

Following closely along the lines of the more recent musical comedy successes, "The Beauty Parade" comes to the Gaiety Theatre tomorrow. By reason of its brightness, tunefulness and cleverness this attraction makes special claim to recognition from burlesque audiences. Fourteen musical numbers effectually drown any inconsequential bits that may fail to please in a flood of golden melodies. As is fitting, a number of the best of these fall to the [illegible] Reed, a prima donna whose voice contributes largely to the excellence of the production. The chorus, too, is said to be made up of new sprites, who have not yet lost the freshness and [illegible] of inertia that seems to grasp the average chorus girl after a few seasons in the business.

Plymouth Theatre.

The third regular season of the Plymouth Theatre will open on next Saturday night, with May Irwin in "Widow by Proxy," as the attraction. Miss Irwin comes to the Eliot street playhouse with identically the same cast and production that [illegible] New Yorkers laughing for more than four months late last season.

It is safe to say that Miss Irwin has never been any funnier than she is in this very amusing comedy, with its three acts of almost unrestrained laughter. It will be the first presentation of the play in this city, and, of course, Miss Irwin will sing several lovely songs in her own way who is supported by a company including Clara Handley, Alice Johnson, Frances Gaunt, Helen Weathersby, Orlando Daly, Lynn Pratt, Joseph Woodbury and Arthur Bowyer.

Tremont Theatre.

"Quo Vadis" enters upon a new week at the Tremont Theatre tomorrow afternoon. The tragedy of the days of Nero was staged in spectacular form for the presentation of [illegible] pictures. The spectacular splendor of [illegible] are the marvel of all classes at "Quo Vadis," for never before have Bostonians seen [illegible] actors upon a single stage, where Nero and his court see the chariot race and the gentle sports, the spectacle of the burning of Rome, also, comes in as a feature of the perfection of the art of motion photography.

Globe Theatre.

A new program has been arranged for the last week of the Summer season at the Globe, which will begin tomorrow morning. Marcus, Hallen and Dale, originators of tabloid minstrelsy, will be on the list. Esther Ray and Billy Watson, musical folk; Charles and Mary Predrick, in bits of comedy and song, and Harry Hoyt, a singing and dancing comedian, will also be seen.

St. James Theatre.

Theatre goers will have an opportunity of seeing Ching Ling Foo at Lew's St. James Theatre this week. In addition to himself, the Chinese magician is presenting the company of fourteen native Chinese performers in an act that takes forty-five minutes in its presentation.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WITH the re-opening of three more theatres this week the new theatrical season will be active enough to coax Summer folk from the seashore resorts to the city for their entertainment. The two Shubert theatres will not be permitted to enjoy a clear field longer than next Friday, when John Craig will resume business with his patrons at the Castle Square Theatre, which will be followed one day later by two other additions to our growing cluster of plays. The Colonial will re-open next Saturday with "The Merry Martyr," a musical comedy that gives Maclyn Arbuckle his first opportunity to shine among chorus girls and other adornment of frothy and frivolous entertainment. The lure of a choice part in musical comedy was too much for Mr. Arbuckle and he turned his back upon the legitimate drama that has served him so well during these long years of theatrical strife.

In the attack of May Irwin upon your funny bone, at the Plymouth next Saturday, you will find that expansive comedienne moving about in the best farce she has had for many seasons. Miss Irwin can always be depended upon to extract genuine humor from any role and in "Widow By Proxy" she supplies not only her own original brand of good nature, but she has a play that is able to stand on its own feet as well. Miss Irwin gives promise of renewing many happy acquaintances.

MOVING back to the beginning of the week you come face to face with the best box-office comedian in the profession—meaning, of course, Sam Bernard. There is nothing in this merry world that has a deeper attraction to Mr. Bernard than the upholstering they put on the chairs in the box offices of theatres where he plays, and during the brisk moments before the curtain rises you can always find him resting comfortably near the ticket seller, watching the sale and hoping for the best. It has been said that Mr. Bernard sometimes takes no chances on the salesmanship qualities of the regular dispenser of seats, preferring to deal directly with the public in person. In this way playgoers often acquire an additional share of Bernard humor for one price. But and you may take this from one who knows—Mr. Bernard is a good salesman and is usually able to sell $2 seats to those who think they wanted the $1 brand of chairs. If you are at all anxious to see Mr. Bernard in the role of box office guardian drop in at the Shubert any day this week.

* * *

MR. Craig will begin his new season at the Castle Square in a comfortable, old-fashioned way by giving his patrons "London Assurance." During the early weeks of the season, at least, Mr Craig will not have the services of his talented wife, Mary Young. Miss Young is at present tasting the sweet things that fall upon a popular Broadway star. She is sharing honors with John Barrymore in the road company of "Believe Me, Xantippe," which began its big league career at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre in New York. Whether Miss Young remains away from the Castle Square Theatre for more than a few weeks depends upon the kind of fortune that attaches itself to "Believe Me, Xantippe." Mr. Craig is hopeful of its positive and lasting success; so is Miss Young; and, it might be added, so is William A. Brady, who invested his money in the production and is now steering the craft through treacherous metropolitan waters.

* * *

AN old-fashioned love story, set in an old-fashioned play, has more than an even chance of finding the path to success rough and uneven in these days of the sophisticated drama. In the particular case of "What Happened to Mary," at the Majestic, there is a refreshing charm to the simple, conventional story—a charm that is felt the moment Miss Olive Wyndham steps into the picture. It is not often that one young woman gives so much to a play as Miss Wyndham appears to be giving "What Happened to Mary." Sentimental melodrama, with nothing but familiar tricks in its situations and climaxes, needs extraordinary treatment at the hands of its actors, and that is exactly how Miss Wyndham lifts "What Happened to Mary" from a rather ordinary play to an entertainment worth taking your best girl to see on one of your regular visiting nights.

A FORMER Boston newspaper man rode a motorcycle from Chicago to New York a year ago and the best he gathered from the trip was a first class, ghostly plot for a play. The plot finally blossomed into "The Ghost Breaker," which will come to the Park Theatre as the first of the new season's attractions. Charles A. Goddard, one of the editors of the AMERICAN Sunday Magazine, was the tourist who found an inspiration for this play in the noisy exhaust of his motor cycle. According to Mr. Goddard, he was leaving South Bend, Indiana, before daybreak when he heard a pistol shot, the sound of which came from the direction of a one-cylinder Hoosier hotel. Lights flashed from the windows and he heard a woman's scream. It was not the kind of a yell that is born in the feminine throat at the approach of mouse, but was a lusty, blood curdling shriek, interspersed with calls for help. Mr. Goddard bravely offered his strong right arm to the village constable but that official treated him with contempt and would have none of his assistance. "All the way to New York," confides Mr. Goddard, "the pistol shot, the woman's scream and the flashes of light in the hotel window kept running through my mind. I meant to make a novel of the experience, but Paul Dickey, an actor, persuaded me to collaborate with him and turn the material into a play."

And when you see "The Ghost Breaker" you will hear the pistol shot, and the woman scream, and experience about two score other violent thrills that Mr. Goddard thought out by himself.

* * *

IN another week the Globe Theatre will enter upon its new policy of submerging moving pictures under an extensive program of solid vaudeville. Under the new plan the regular afternoon and evening performances at the Globe will be made up exclusively of vaudeville, diverting pictures to the morning show and to the time between the matinee and night bills. While this arrangement is something of a speculation it has been adopted after several weeks of experimental juggling with the Summer programs. It was found, according to Manager Janette, that when vaudeville features were increased there was a corresponding increase in box office returns. That convinced Mr Janette that the way to grow was to follow the crowd, and beginning Labor Day the regular daily bills at the Globe will contain twenty numbers, most of which will be vaudeville features for the regular afternoon and evening performances.
